ELECTROCUTION OF GORE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED BY NEW INJUNCTION GRANTED BY JUDGE J. B. PARK

Choir Defendants May Carry War to Enemies

MRS. HALL PLANS PROBE OF COURSE OF PROSECUTION

Suit Against New York Publication Accused of Persecuting 3 Defendants Declared Probable.

COURT QUASHES ALL INDICTMENTS

Widow's Desire Justice Be Done in Case Remains Strong as Ever, Says Spokesman.

New Brunswick, N. J., December 4. "Perhaps prosecution now will replace persecution," a spokesman for Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall suggested to the United News tonight, after the widow happy in her complete vindication and that of her brothers and cousin, returned to her New Brunswick home.

Earlier in the day Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker had quashed all indictments remaining against Mrs. Hall, Henry Stevens, "Willie" Stevens and their cousin, Henry Carpender.

The shadow which had hung over them since the discovery of the murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills four years ago lifted for the first time with this prompt and unopposed action at Somerville.

Mrs. Hall Not Through.

But Mrs. Hall is not through with the affair.

"Remember that after all she is a bereaved party in this dreadful tragedy," said the widow's spokesman. "She is not going to leave her home—nor is her desire that justice be done lessened a whit by the ordeal through which she has just passed.

"Do not be surprised if there is yet further prosecution in this terrible affair, but, we trust, no more persecution such as that to which Mrs. Hall and her brothers have been subjected during the past month."

The demonstration which was denied the widow when she and Henry and "Willie" Stevens were found not guilty of the murder of Mrs. Eleanor Mills Friday night was accorded her in the little courthouse at Somerville Saturday morning.

Cases Are Dismissed.

Only a few minutes were required to have the famous Hall-Mills case thrown out of court. The trio who sat as defendants during the past month, hearing themselves accused of the brutal crime, appeared to ask that another indictment charging the murder of Dr. Hall be quashed. With them was their stock broker cousin, Henry De La Bruyere Carpender, pale from his long confinement in the Somerset county jail on similar charges.

Senator Alexander Simpson, the special prosecutor who had been unrelenting in his vigorous prosecution of the case against Mrs. Hall and her brothers, refused to go to Somerville for the denouement. Still charging

Message of Woman 'Radical' Termed Menace to Student

No Danger for Grown-Ups To Hear Speaker Barred at Agnes Scott, Opponents Say.

ATLANTA PASTORS TO HEAR SPEAKER

Dodge Attacks Action of Legion in 'Condemning Woman Unheard' as 'Un-American.'

The message that Mrs. Lucia Ames Meade has to bring to the people of America concerning the world court and international peace is all right for grown ups, but for "children"—such as attend Agnes Scott college—it is dangerous.

This opinion was reached Saturday morning by those opposing Mrs. Meade's appearance at Agness Scott at an informal conference held to take action on cancellation of Mrs. Meade's speaking engagement at the school following energetic objection by the local American Legion, headed by Asa Warren Candler.

No formal action was taken at the meeting, which was presided over by the Rev. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the Decatur Presbyterian church, who invited Mrs. Meade to speak at Agnes Scott, and who looks on the cancellation of her appearance as "a blackeye to the south, a shame and a disgrace."

While it was definitely decided by authorities that Mrs. Meade would not speak to the student body of Agnes Scott on the subject of the world court and international peace, a host of Atlanta ministers and educational leaders were looking forward Saturday to an address on the same subject by Mrs. Meade at the Liberal Christian church Monday morning.

Dodge Scores Legion.

Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge, pastor of the Central Congregational church, in which the meeting was held Saturday morning, issued a formal statement to The Constitution later in the day in which he said he wished to protest against "a limitation of free speech."

"The American Legion has done the most un-American thing it could do," Dr. Dodge declared, "in condemning a woman unheard."

The American Legion objected to Mrs. Meade because of reputed radical views of some of the organizations with which she is associated. At first it was reported that the main objections were based on charges that she was a "red"—paid by a Russian revolutionary society to overthrow the American government. At the meeting, local leaders of the legion denied that they had made the exact charge. It was brought out that Mrs. Meade was the daughter of one of the outstanding soldiers in the American revolution; that she comes from a long line of New England ancestors and is now a citizen of Boston, Mass.

Against Pledges.

During Mr. Candler's cross-examination of Mrs. Meade he asked her if she was affiliated with a certain organization alleged active in exacting

DEATH SENTENCE AGAIN PASSED ON MACON MAN

John Howell, Convicted Slayer, Resentenced to Electric Chair by Judge Mathews.

Perry, Ga., December 4.—(AP)—John Howell, convicted slayer of Harry Green, Bibb county deputy sheriff, was resentenced to die on December 23, in the electric chair, at the state farm, here today by Judge H. R. Mathews, of the Houston superior court.

At the same time Judge Mathews denied a petition of counsel for the defense that the sentence of the court be set aside on the grounds that the electric chair law was unconstitutional.

Immediately following Judge Mathews' decision W. A. McClellan and Walter Defore, both of Macon, attorneys for the defense, said they would take the case to the Georgia supreme court on a bill of exceptions.

This will be the third time that the Howell case has been in the Georgia supreme court, it being taken there after the trial in June, 1925, and again on a motion for re-hearing. Howell has also been denied clemency by the governor and the prison commission.

Act Is Attacked.

The defendant's attorneys here today attacked the legality of the law creating an electric chair for the execution of felons guilty of a capital crime on four counts. They attacked the section stating that the execution should be performed by the warden of the state penitentiary where there is neither a warden nor, strictly speaking, a penitentiary; also the section allowing a judge to resentence a prisoner during vacation time of court with neither the prisoner nor his attorney present and they also maintained that the captions of the electric chair law did not contain all the enactments that were set forth in the body of the act.

Charles H. Garrett, solicitor general of the Macon circuit, and J. Ellsworth Hall represented the state in the hearing.

The courtroom here, with a handful of lawyers and laymen present, grew tense in the last moments of the hearings for it had been set forth by the state's counsel that in event Judge Mathews held the electric chair law to be unconstitutional he would then have to revert to the old form of execution and sentence Howell to

GIRL DISCOVERED IN HILLSIDE GRAVE CLUBBED TO DEATH

Note From Missing Sweetheart, Found on Her Body, Asked Her To Elope With Him.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., December 4.—(AP)—Clara Olson was clubbed to death, physicians testified today before a coroner's inquest after an autopsy over her body, found Thursday in a hillside grave, near the home of her missing lover.

A letter found on the body of the girl at the autopsy was the last message to her from her missing sweetheart, and is of a "sensational nature," District Attorney G. S. Earll said tonight.

"It was the last letter from Erdman Olson to Clara," said Earll. "It is so different from what was generally expected that we cannot make its contents public until we have questioned certained witnesses."

The letter from Erdman was delivered to Clara on September 9, a few hours before she disappeared, and is said by the district attorney to have contained his request that she flee with him.

Attacked From Rear.

Four pathologists, including Dr. Charles H. Bunting of the University of Wisconsin, agreed that one or more blows killed the girl and that they were struck from the back. They reported a series of fractures over the left ear and a slighter fracture at the right side of the skull. Probably there was more than one blow, Dr. Bunting said, for only a blow of terrific force would cause so many fractures.

Had the girl lived, the doctors testified, she would have become a mother of a baby girl soon after Christmas.

The letter found on the body was soaked with water, but officials said its contents would be made known as soon as it dried.

Testimony of the doctors was the first revelation of how the 22-year-old girl died, although her death had been charged before discovery of her body to Erdman Olson, the lover four years her junior, who disappeared from Gale college, where he was a senior a fortnight after the girl vanished.

The youth had been besought before Clara's disappearance to marry her. Parents of both are fairly well to do farmers of Crawford county.

Called for Girl.

Clara's father asserts that Erdman called for the girl in his car late on the night she disappeared, but the boy's parents deny he could have slain and buried her because of his prompt return home that night from a dance almost 20 miles away.

"A series of fractures were found on the left side of the skull at the autopsy," Dr. Bunting reported to the

TO TRY VALIDITY OF ELECTRIC CHAIR LAW OF GEORGIA

Judge Park Holds State Has No Warden Authorized Under Law To Perform Executions.

PRISON BODY PLANS TO APPOINT WARDEN

Defense Attorneys Plan Fight Through Supreme Court; Bars All Executions Pending Settlement

Mell Gore, condemned to die for the murder of William H. Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, has won another respite which will last until the constitutionality of the Georgia law substituting electric chair for the gallows is tested in the supreme court.

A permanent injunction against electrocution of Gore under the present status of the state prison organization was issued in Greensboro Saturday night by Judge J. B. Park, of the Ocmulgee judicial circuit. Judge Park heard the case at Gray last Monday, granting a temporary restraining order at that time.

The permanent injunction order set forth that under the present prison system there is no warden of the state penitentiary to execute Gore, as provided by section four of the act of the legislature of 1924, establishing the electric chair for execution of condemned criminals.

Several Electrocuted.

Since the electric chair law was enacted several persons have been electrocuted, including two white men, Ted Coggeshall and F. W. McClelland, convicted of slaying Professor W. C. Wright in Putnam county. They were electrocuted on March 25, 1926.

The first person electrocuted was a negro in the fall of 1924 and the last a few weeks ago, was a negro.

Judge Park explained to The Constitution over long distance telephone, however, that should the state prison commission designate a warden in strict compliance with the law, and should the solicitor general of the Atlanta circuit apply for a modification of the injunction, there would then be no obstacle to carrying out the death sentence.

Judge T. E. Patterson, of the prison commission, told The Constitution immediately afterward that the body will be in session here all this week and should the text of Judge Park's order prove to be as it was described to him informally, the commission would beyond doubt lose no time in designating an official state warden.

Long Delay Sure.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated that while he knew nothing definite of the provisions of Judge Park's order, he would apply for the modification in event the prison commission designated a warden in order to be in strict line with the wording of the legislative act establishing the chair.

All doubt that a lengthy delay will

Ewing To Lie On Hospital Cot at Trial

Defendant in Murder Trial To Be Taken to Fulton Court in Ambulance.

Leonard Ewing, under indictment for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Jewel Ewing, will lie on a cot in Judge E. D. Thomas' division of Fulton superior court Tuesday morning while his attorney and the state's counsel clash in a battle for his life.

This was the statement Saturday of Len B. Gillebeau, Ewing's attorney, who asserted that he would enter a plea of insanity in behalf of his client. "For the past three weeks he has just been lying in the hospital ward of the county jail, unable to recognize anyone, not even his attorney. If he remains there he will die, I am told. Therefore I have made arrangements with the sheriff to transfer Ewing to the courthouse in an ambulance, place him on a stretcher and lay him on a cot in the courtroom," Attorney Guillebeau said.

Mrs. Ewing was shot and almost instantly killed in the Ewing home at 195 Pearl street on the night of October 31. Ewing told police that he had killed her, immediately after the shooting occured. He then appeared to police to be in dazed condition, said to have been caused by drinking whisky. A few days later, however, his condition remained about the same and he was transferred to the hospital upon order of the court. After a slight recovery he was again removed to the Fulton tower where he has been confined in the hospital ward.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin has requested the court to send two physicians to examine the prisoner and expresses himself as believing that Ewing is "feigning."

Another murder trial will be under way Tuesday before Judge G. H. Howard. R. C. McDuffie and Nell Oberlin will face a jury on the charge of the murder of Mrs. E. M. Kirk, who was struck and almost instantly killed several weeks ago by a "hit and run" motorist on North Boulevard at Angier avenue.

Nell Oberlin was questioned by Solicitor Boykin in reference to activities with Jack Lance, who was held for some time on a warrant charging the murder of Bert Donaldson, crack criminal investigator of the solicitor's staff. The warrant was dismissed against Lance following hearing in municipal court.

County police who investigated the accident contend that the automobile which struck Mrs. Kirk was driven by McDuffie and was the property of the Oberlin woman.

FLORIDA SHERIFF REMOVAL IS URGED

Lee County Grand Jury Declares Official and Deputies Made No Effort To Disperse Mob.

Fort Myers, Fla., December 4.—(AP)—After examining more than two score witnesses, the Lee county grand jury declared it was not able to determine who lynched Henry Patterson, a negro, at Labelle on the afternoon of May 11. At the same time the jury recommended that Sheriff Dan McLaughlin, of Hendry county, be dismissed from office on account of his failure to prevent the lynching or to arrest the guilty parties.

"Our investigation shows that the sheriff of Hendry county and his deputies and the peace officers of the town of Labelle made absolutely no effort to disperse the mob, to get the negro away, or to prevent his being hanged, it being the opinion of the grand jury that this lynching could have been prevented if these officers had done their duty," said the report, which follows:

Made Thorough Probe.

"The grand jury has made a thorough investigation of the lynching of a negro at Labelle on the 11th of last May, which investigation was transferred from Hendry county and referred to this body by order of your honor. We have caused to come before us not only the witnesses requested by the citizens and authorities of Hendry county but have sent out and gotten additional witnesses which the

Chaplin Plans Fight in Court For Two Sons

Lita Visits Comedian's Home To Obtain Personal Property.

Los Angeles, December 4.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin and his wife, the former Lita Grey, whose romance began while Chaplin was making the film comedy "The Kid," today played stellar roles under the direction of sardonic fate in a marital tragedy which might well be titled "The Kids."

For, as attorneys for the warring pair prepared their cases the issue was avowedly which of the couple was to have custody of the two small sons, Charles Spencer, Chaplin, Jr., age 2, and Sydney Earle, age 1.

Will Fight for Children.

"We're not talking," said Lloyd Wright, the film comedian's counsel, "but we are going to fight for the children. We'll fight to the last ditch—fight in any court in the land. We feel confident that when we present our proof any fairminded court will give Mr. Chaplin custody of his sons."

"We'll see about that," quickly countered George Beebe, attorney for the wife. "We have proof of our own and I am safe in saying Mrs. Chaplin will retain custody of the children. Isn't it strange, this sudden love for his sons which Mr. Chaplin is exhibiting? At times in the past, I never heard of his mad desire to hold his little ones."

Under a temporary truce, each warring faction of the Charlie Chaplin family made a brief sortie into the camp of the enemy late today.

Lita Visits Home.

Lita Grey Chaplin, the estranged wife, accompanied by members og her family, journeyed to the hilltop mansion of the comedian and left with the wardrobes of the two Chaplin children, as well as her own gowns and other personal belongings. Al Reeves, business manager for Chaplin, received the party.

Chaplin, late in the afternoon, under a safe conduct issued by George Beebe, his wife's attorney, went to the home of William E. Curry, Mrs. Chaplin's grandfather, for a ten-minute visit with his two small sons. His wife was not present, Chaplin in making the arrangements for the visit having suggested that only the youngsters' grandparents be present. Mrs. Chaplin's attorney said that the actor may see his

'STREET CARS, SANS WHEELS, SANS TRACKS, AS GIFTS

Get Stritt Car En Stoken

BY LOY WARWICK.

With an outburstof Yuletide generosity, the Georgia Railway and Power company has decided to give away two street cars to whoever happens to want them.

There's a gift! How many of us have stayed up late nights worrying about just that thing? Why couldn't we have a street car, like Mr. Arkright and the others, who have enough of them to give two away just like that.

They're real street cars. You and 55 of your friends can get in and sit down comfortably on upholstered seats. Imagine getting a street car and getting a seat. Of course, if it's a real large party, some of you can stand and hold on to neat little straps, provided for such emergency.

Great fun at such a party would be to play a game called "Try and raise and lower the windows, which, according to the announcement, are to be left intact—glass, frames, stuck and all.

These cars have been in service on the Marietta, Ga., line since the year 1905, and are no longer suitable for the service, now being carried on by a fleet of snappy-looking de luxe interurban cars.

The company usually burns the old cars. But, someone asked, why burn them? There are hundreds of thousands of people in this country who are just wanting and wanting a street car. Why not please at least two of them. That's what we'll do, came the answer in a chorus.

And you may get your street car upon application to F. L. Butler, vice president of the Georgia Railway and Power company, at headquarters on Marietta street. He will tell you where the cars are located. All you have to do is haul it off.

In making the announcement, it was explained that everything but the wheels would go with the cars. So, naturally, the company's tracks will not be available for transfer to your lot. But, if you have an automobile, or something, the problem is solved, probably.

There is no end of uses to which the street cars can be put. Really. An excellent seven-room apartment, according to local standards. No better place to discard razor blades. With certain alterations it would be a wonderful place to suffocate one's in-laws when they drop in unexpectedly, as they are wont to do. A street car, such as one that has seen 21 years' of faithful and untiring service on the old Marietta line, would be a dandy place to store certain Christmas presents. Think up a few yourself. Cut yourself a piece of cake.

It's all on the level. The company is actually giving away two actual street cars, of 56-passenger capacity, 50 feet and six inches long, eight feet and two inches wide, with dindows than can or can not be raised, doors that open and shut—equipped with everything, in fact, save motorman, conductor, wheels and a track.

The fine old cars have served their time, having gone more than a million miles in their day and carried goodness knows how many million passengers, despite the fact that the population of Marietta does not come near that figure.

Have a street car on the power company. Take a lot—take two.

Children in arms not allowed.

The Better the Day
The Better the Deed

This day will afford a splendid opportunity to settle a number of those vexed questions about what to buy for Christmas presents.

Here you have this great big splendid Sunday issue of The Constitution with its wealth of advertisements that contain all manner of suggestions for Christmas, and you have almost the entire day before you to read these advertisements and make your selections.

You will find that is the best way—a whole lot better than to spend hours wandering about in the big stores, from one department to another looking for "something."

You will have plenty of opportunity of seeing the wonderful displays while buying from a prepared list. Besides, knowing what you want, you'll do your purchasing quickly.

CHINA DEFENDED BY LLOYD GEORGE

Bradford, England, December 4.—(AP)—Former Premier Lloyd George came to the support of China today in addressing a liberal meeting at Bradford.

The "Reds," he declared, are not the real cause of the trouble in China. "The real cause," he explained, "is the Chinese struggle for their fundamental rights.

Suggesting that certain people were eager for war in the Far East, he attributed to the tory press, "the usual preliminaries to war—tales of outrages, suggestions of worse to come and panicky stories," and went on:

"China's ports are occupied by foreigners and governed by foreigners. The Chinese cannot raise revenue in their own way; yet they are an empire of 400,000,000 of civilized peoples. Naturally they are rebelling.

"The record of western civilization in China is indeed black. We forced opium upon China against the will of its greatest moral teachers. It is not surprising that China has rebelled against the indignity, humiliation and injustice inflicted upon her by the western powers."

The British government was under great pressure to do something "impulsive and provocative," he said, and it was essential that public opinion should be aroused.

GORE INJUNCTION MADE PERMANENT

ensue regardless of what steps are taken in the matter, however, was resolved when Linton S. James, one of Gore's attorneys, told The Constitution that if the commission appoints a warden and the solicitor moves for a modification of the injunction, he and his associates would file a bill of exceptions to the request and would carry the entire matter to the state supreme court in order to test the constitutionality of the electric chair law.

"We are not only attacking the qualification of Judge J. B. Dunaway to electrocute Gore," Mr. James said, "but we also are questioning the legality of any execution by an appointive officer ordered by the prison commission under the present law."

Text of Decision.

In view of the fact that there is no way of heading off a bill of exceptions, this was taken to mean that several months will elapse until a warden can be designated, a request for modification be filed and acted upon and the supreme court rule upon the request for modification and upon the legality of the electric chair.

Judge Park's important decision Saturday holds that "under the law and facts in said case there is no legal warden of the state penitentiary as contemplated by the act of the legislature of 1924, page 195, second 4."

"Under the uncontroverted evidence in the case," the decision continues, "Superintendent Dunaway was selected as superintendent of the state farm on May 10, 1922, and by the provisions of the order, it was provided that the offices of superintendent and warden should be separate. On December 20, 1922, Dunaway was also elected as warden of the male camp commencing January 1, 1923. Under section 258, paragraph 4, of the civil code of 1910, Dunaway was ineligible to be elected as warden of the state penitentiary and he was never elected to that office.

"The law creating the prison commission of Georgia authorized the election of a superintendent and warden, and as both of said offices were of trust and profit, it would be illegal for one person to fill both offices at the same time. If Georgia in her sovereignty should decree the death penalty of any of her citizens, the trial should not only be in accordance with the laws of the land but the execution should also be as provided by law or else it would be depriving a person of his life without due process of law.

Past Executions Legal.

As to previous executions at the state farm, the decision set forth that they were legal upon the ground that Dunaway's authority in those cases was not brought into question and that under the well recognized principle of law, he would be the de facto warden.

Attorney's for Gore Saturday night declared that they were gratified by Judge Park's ruling, but said that this temporary victory is only one battle in the fight they propose to make to save the youth from the chair.

Linton S. James, who, with Reuben Garland, Louis Maritzer and W. F. James, represents Gore, said that in the event a warden is appointed and Judge Park modifies his ruling, they will continue their fight and make a test of the constitutionality of the state law providing for electrocution of condemned criminals instead of hanging them.

Attacking Law.

"We are making our fight," he said, "not alone on the legality of an execution by Judge Dunaway or any other warden or superintendent at the state prison, but on the legality of any execution by an appointive officer ordered by the prison commission under the present law.

"We doubt the legality of the present law taking the execution of a condemned person out of the hands of a sheriff, an official duly elected by the people, and putting it into the hands of a man appointed to office by the prison commission or appointed by any other body. We question the authority of the prison commission to order anybody to be executed.

"Under the old law, a man condemned to death was ordered by the trial judge to be hanged by the neck until dead, and the sheriff, a duly-elected officer put into office by the people, carried out the order. Under the state electrocution law, a man not elected by the people carries out an order by the prison commission. This taking of the duties of the sheriff out of his hands and putting it into the hands of an appointive officer we consider to be unconstitutional.

"In accordance with this belief we are determined to have a thorough test of the constitutionality of the law and are of the opinion that it will take legislative action and probably a constitutional amendment to execute Gore legally."

Third Escape For Gore.

The temporary injunction made permanent by Judge Park Saturday, was granted Thanksgiving day, less than 24 hours before Gore was due to be electrocuted.

This marked the third time that Gore had been snatched from the threshold of death to which he was sentenced by Judge John D. Humphries for his part in the murder, one week before Christmas, 1925, of W. H. Cheek, in his grocery store on Peachtree road. On a former occasion Gore's execution was stayed only an hour before he was doomed to die.

The murder took place during an attempt to rob the store. Gore, together with Jack Wilson, Theodore Berry and Ruby Ray, a girl said to be Wilson's sweetheart, were accused of the robbery and murder. Jack Wilson is still at liberty and Berry and the Ray girl have been tried for their parts in the killing and are now serving their sentences. Berry was sentenced to life imprisonment and Ruby Ray received a sentence of ten years.

CHAPLIN TO FIGHT FOR TWO CHILDREN children at any time, after serving notice that he desires to do so.

Extras and minor characters, as well as Miss Moyna Kennedy, his leading lady, have been given vacations until the star's family difficulties have been settled.

WILL HAYS MAY SEND WARNING TO CHAPLIN.

Hollywood, Calif., December 4.—Unless a settlement is reached soon in the Charlie Chaplin marital break, Will Hays, the movie czar, probably will send the comedian a letter of warning advising him that the movie industry cannot tolerate another big public scandal.

Hays, it was learned tonight, has been watching developments while attorneys for Charlie and his wife, the former Lita Gray, sought to patch up the couple's differences and avoid a court scandal. If the squabble gets into court drastic action is anticipated from the Hays office.

When Chaplin went to Empalma, Mexico, in November, 1924, to marry his then 16-year-old leading lady, Hays warned him that the movie industry would not tolerate anything that might cause gossip among movie fans.

MRS. CHAPLIN GOES ON SHOPPING SPLURGE.

Los Angeles, December 4.—(AP)—A reported purchase of $8,000 worth of clothing on credit by Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin last Monday, the day before she left the film company man "for good" was confirmed here today by George Beebe, attorney for the former Lita Grey.

"What does $8,000 worth of clothing amount to for a millionaire's wife?" Beebe demanded, "practically in view of the fact that Chaplin spent $50,000 on a recent pleasure trip to New York?"

Mrs. Chaplin today emphatically remarked that there would be no reconciliation with her millionaire husband.

Talks About Party.

Going back over the events of last Monday night, which both sides in the domestic battle agree was the direct cause of the split-up, Mrs. Chaplin said:

"The alleged 'wild party' that Mr. Chaplin has talked so much about was no party at all. He has made the thing appear to be a wild affair following a dinner at the Biltmore given in honor of my guests, Baron and Baroness Mille De Precourt.

"We went home after the dinner and had been there about 10 minutes when Mr. Chaplin came downstairs cursing and ordered my friends to leave. I can't repeat the awful things he said. My friends left quietly."

No New Romance.

Mrs. Chaplin, asked if she thought there was any new romance in her husband's life, replied: "I do not think so."

"I am through talking now," she said, "but I am going to do plenty later."

She modified her positive assertion of yesterday that she would not seek a divorce. She said today she was still undecided as to whether she would ask a divorce or take other measures to provide for herself and children.

"I am going to keep the children," she added.

ACTION TO DELAY OTHER EXECUTIONS

Judge J. B. Park's action in granting a permanent injunction against electrocution of Mell Gore under the present state prison organization in all probability will result in postponement of all scheduled executions in Georgia for several months until the supreme court rules on the constitutionality of the electric chair, it was believed in Atlanta Saturday night.

The state legislature will convene next June, and should the chair be declared unconstitutional, it would be in position immediately to cure any defects in the law or to reestablish the old system of hanging criminals in the counties in which they were condemned.

Voiding of the electric chair law, it is understood, would have the effect of freeing Gore, as a man cannot be placed in jeopardy of his life twice on the same charge, and it also might liberate other criminals now condemned to death. Officials will welcome a final adjudication by the supreme court in the question of its legality.

Brandon Liquor Trial Centering State Interest

Mobile, Ala., December 4.—(AP)—Will Governor W. W. Brandon and eight friends arrested by Baldwin county deputies on charges of violating the prohibition law by having liquor in their possession, appear at Bay Minette Monday to answer the charges?

Information from Montgomery today is to the effect that the governor goes to Jackson, Tenn., tonight to appear there tomorrow to deliver an Elks memorial address and he will not go to Bay Minette to stand trial.

Sheriff Ramsey Stuart, of Baldwin county, said over the long distance telephone today that no settlement of the case had been made and that he expected the defendants to appear for arraignment.

The case against the chief executive of Alabama and his eight prominent friends and negro servant, grew out of a raid on McQueen's fishing and hunting camp near Foley, on Magnolia river, Monday night, November 22.

The raiding party, headed by Deputy Sheriff Ben Wiggins, of Baldwin county, entered the clubhouse and, according to the affidavit, found 13 quartes of Scotch whisky and a half-dozen empty and partly filled bottles in the room where the governor was playing cards.

The search warrant for the raid on the camp was issued by Justice of the Peace Lenoir, of the Magnolia river district of Baldwin county.

Information today from Foley was that some Baldwin county officials at Bay Minnette are of the opinion that a settlement of the case will be made before the trial.

Three deputy sheriffs from the sheriff's office and 11 deputized citizens of Foley are ready to relate the happenings at the camp if the case goes to trial.

YACHT'S RELEASE FOUGHT IN COURT

Norfolk, Va., December 4.—(AP)—District Attorney Paul W. Kear, in federal district court today, filed an answer opposing the petition of Russell A. Alger, of Detroit, for release of the steam yacht Laurentian from bond of $150,000. The bond was imposed last summer after seizure of the vessel on charges of violating the prohibtion and custom laws.

Mr. Kear contends that claims of owners interested in seized property may not legally be considered until after trial of criminal cases involved in the seizure.

The case of Captain Benjamin Jarvis, master of the yacht, upon which 724 quarts of whisky were seized by the coast guard, will not be tried until December 13.

Mr. Kear also contends there was no lawful permit for the presence of the liquor on board and that the "wrongful action by customs officials alleged to have sealed the liquor in the compartment in San Juan, Porto Rico, in the fall of 1925, does not make it lawful to import liquors within the territorial limits of the United States."

At the time of seizure the yacht was under charter to C. K. Billings, millionaire sportsman, who was aboard with a party of friends. Mr. Alger's attorneys contend release of the yacht and dismissal of the charges against the master were recommended by Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, in a letter read Thursday in court.

TWO INDIAN TRIBES TO SWOOP ON ROME IN CHEST DRIVE

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., December 4.—(Special.) Rome is again to be in the hands of the Indians. Next Tuesday two tribes of the chamber of commerce will march on Rome amid war whoops and brandishing tomahawks in attack on "Old Chief Needy"

All of which means that the Community Chest organization under the direction of Big Chief Aubrey Matthews is formed along Indian lines and much of the Cherokee history of this section will be revived in the organization.

"Depend On Me" is the slogan that the Community Chest workers have adopted for the drive. The quota is set at $18,800 to be divided among eight charitable agencies in Rome—combining eight drives in one—and three days, beginning Tuesday, December 7, have been put aside to do the work.

The Indians have divided themselves into two tribes composed of 62 Indians each; two special scalping committees, a war counsel of six big Indians supported by six others who have special missions all headed by a general staff of two men and Big Chief Aubrey Matthews.

Building Permits.

Rome, Ga., December 4.—(Special.) Building permits totaling $58,175 were taken out within the fire limits in the city of Rome during November, according to a report made by C. B. Bradford, who is in charge of issuing permits. These figures included a permit of $30,000 for a new school building in the Fifth ward.

According to the report of Bradford 18 permits were issued during the month.

HALL-MILLS CASE COSTS $300,000

Somerville, N. J., December 4.—The bills are already coming in for the Hall-Mills case and the wrangle as to who should bear the enormous expense of the trial, estimated as high as $300,000 got under way almost before the verdict was in.

When the board of freeholders of Somerset county started through the mounting batch of dims for services rendered, they expressed astonishment and consternation.

The watchdogs of the county treasury refused to act without further deliberation.

Upon learning of this, Prosecutor Francis L. Bergen, of Somerset county, obtained a writ of mandamus from Justice Parker to compel payment of all bills in connection with the investigation and trials. It will probably be served Saturday.

The freeholders had already paid minor bills totaling $1,500, when they met Friday.

One of the debts they picked up for consideration was a taxicab bill for $960, submitted by W. C. Horston of west New York for the use of his vehicles by state investigators. The board tabled this along with one for $150 submitted by a state trooper. They explained they wanted to see a lawyer and get some advice about financing the entire debt, which they characterized as "enormous."

One member of the board said: "There is a strong local opinion that the county can ill afford to meet the entire obligation and that under the circumstances, some state aid of a substantial nature should be forthcoming."

SENATE TO PASS ON APPOINTMENTS

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—More than 1,000 nominations probably will be sent to the senate by President Coolidge during the session that will begin next week.

Postmasters and nominations for the army, navy and marine corps will contribute the greatest number to the list, but several are pending for judgeships and high offices in departments and independent agencies of the government in Washington.

Recess Appointments.

Men filling recess appointments whose nominations are generally expected to go to the senate for confirmation to regular terms include William U. McCracken, of Illinois, as assistant secretary of commerce in charge of civil aviation; Roland K. Smith, democrat, New Orleans, to the shipping board; Abram Myers, republican, Iowa, to the federal trade commission, and Proctor L. Dougherty and Sidney F. Taliaferro, of Washington, as commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Other officials are serving under recess appointments concerning whom the intentions of the president have not been made clear. These include three members of the tariff commission, Edgar B. Brossard, of Utah, and Sherman Y. Lowell.

Tilson Under Fire.

In the newly created middle judicial district of Georgia, William J. Tilson, of Atlanta, brother of Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the republican floor leader of the house, is serving as judge by recess appointment after the senate had failed to confirm him last spring over the objection of the two senators from that state. Nominations for United States marshal and United States attorney for the district, meanwhile, have been held up.

One vacancy is to be filled in the federal trade commission, due to the expiration in September of the term of Huston Thompson, democrat, of Colorado, and an assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of internal revenue is to be selected to succeed McKenzie Moss, of Kentucky, who retired in the spring to become a judge in the court of claims.

Judges are to be named for several vacancies, including that in the eastern Illinois district caused by the resignation of Judge George W. English after impeachment proceedings had been brought against him. Other vacancies include the ninth circuit court of appeals, to which Judge Wallace McCamant, who nominated Mr. Coolidge for vice president in 1920, was appointed but failed of confirmation in the face of opposition by Senator Johnson, republican, California, and the second circuit due to the death of Judge Henry W. Rogers.

NEGRESS IS CAUGHT IN BURGLAR ACT

Caught in the act of ransacking the home of County Policeman John Dickerson, at 247 Hemphill avenue, Lila Thomas, a negress, was jailed early Saturday morning by city policemen, who took the negress into custody while on their beat.

Officer Dickerson, who was aroused from his sleep by the woman, leaped to a dresser drawer, seized his gun and held her until city officers arrived and took her to police station.

Mrs. T. G. Phillips, of 20 Emory drive, reported to police the theft of an expensive coat and several articlee of clothing.

K. W. Johnson, of 1020 Belleview drive, reported the loss of a gold watch.

That's Probable.

100 LAKE VESSELS TRAPPED BY ICE

Sault Ste Marie, December 4.—A fleet of sturdy tugboats battled valiantly against ice floes in the St. Mary's river today in a desperate attempt to free 100 ice-bound lake freighters, caught in one of the worst tieups in lake history.

The vessels have been trapped in the two narrow channels of Neebish Cuts where ice cakes six to eight feet thick are jammed, in some places to the bottom of the river. More than 1,500 seamen in the crews of the vessels have been cut off from food supplies and face suffering from hunger unless released soon.

Sub-zero temperature was increasing the depth of the ice and adding to the difficulties of rescuers who are faced with the peril of being trapped themselves.

The St. Mary's river is the connecting link between Lake Huron and Lake Superior and the jam likely will mean the close of navigation for the season. Thousands of tons of wheat in elevators at the lake head awaiting shipment probably will not be moved before spring.

At least three vessels in ice-free water have been grounded and lashing gales threaten to dash them to pieces on the rock.

Captain Fred Bailey, of Cleveland, who is in charge of the ice-breaking operations, admitted that the odds against rescue were so great that many of the trapped freighters may be wrecked completely before they are released.

MARIE TO APPEAR ON SCREEN, SAYS SELWYN OFFICE

New York, December 4.—The theatrical offices of Arch Selwyn, producer, tonight claimed that negotiations virtually had been completed to have Marie of Rumania appear in the "movies." Selwyn is said to be in Bucharest, prepared to conclude a tentative agreement with the queen.

Stalled Autoist Slapped in Face And Wife Robbed

D. C. Ragsdale, of Rome, Ga., was treated at Grady hospital late Saturday night for injuries about the face he received when struck by two unidentified white bandits on Central avenue, after his wife had been robbed.

According to information given to hospital attaches, the Ragsdale automobile, containing he and his wife, had stalled on Central avenue and while he was cranking it, two young white men snatched a purse from his wife, and then struck him in the face.

Mr. Ragsdale was accompanied to the hospital by Grady Spivey, and C. C. Payne, two white youths who rushed to his aid, after seeing the two men leave the car and hearing Mr. Ragsdale call for help. A description of the two bandits was furnished police.

STEINWAY

THE INSTRUMENT OF THE IMMORTALS

For Christmas—

The Steinway Piano stands unapproached in any of the cardinal features that distinguish a really fine Piano from one that is merely good. It is the kind of a Piano that you would naturally expect a house of Phillips & Crew's prestige to recommend.

With all of its artistic perfection, the Steinway has no equal for endurance. It will far outlast any other Piano and retains for years power, sonority, singing quality and perfect harmonic effects.

A Steinway Piano is the perfect Christmas present. Its moderate cost, quality considered, and liberal terms of payment, make it possible for almost anyone to seriously consider it as a gift that will bring pleasure to the entire family.

PIANO NOW USED AS LOUD SPEAKER

Minneapolis, December 4.—The radiano, a new device which permits the broadcasting of piano music without the use of a microphone and which may be used inversely to turn the piano into a loud speaker, was demonstrated successfully Monday night at station WCCO.

The device is the invention of Fred W. Roehm and Frank W. Adsit, of Minneapolis, and consists chiefly of a needle which is attached to the sounding board of the piano. As the sounding board vibrates the needle the vibrations are carried by means of an electric current through the amplifier and into the broadcasting transmitter.

For utilizing the piano as a loud speaker the installation is practically the same as for broadcasting. The current from the receiving set passes through the amplifier, vibrates the radiano needle on the sounding board and causes it in turn to vibrate and give out the sounds of broadcasting.

The inventors claim that the test upheld their contention that piano tones could be more truly reproduced through the radiano than with the use of a microphone. The metallic sounds frequently heard in broadcast piano music were eliminated. An audience in the room where a "loud-speaking" piano was used declared that it actually seemed that the instrument was playing except that the keys did not move.

WOMAN'S' MESSAGE TERMED MENACE

pledges of nonresistance and pacifism among school children.

"I do not believe such a pledge was exacted," she answered. "Personally, I am against pledges of every sort."

The "slacker" pledge of the Women's International League for Peace in Zurich was never adopted, Mrs. Meade said. She admitted her opposition to compulsory military training in schools.

"These things are mentioned," Mr. Candler told the ministers, "to show the atmosphere surrounding Mrs. Meade's mission."

Heated Situation.

A warm situation developed when Mr. Dodge asked Mr. Candler if he had gone with Captain Dart's charges to Mrs. Meade before attempting to stop her scheduled addresses.

"I didn't know Mrs. Meade or her representatives," said Mr. Candler.

"Then we feel that you were both discourteous and unfair to Mrs. Meade," the minister said.

"I'm sorry you think so," Mr. Candler replied stiffly.

"Further, we feel that you are not democratic—" began Mr. Dodge.

He was interrupted by the Rev. Plato Durham, of the Emory school of theology, who arose with a defense of Mr. Candler's courtesy and democracy and then began a plea for tolerance on all sides.

Husband Is Discussed.

It was hinted at the meeting that Mrs. Meade's husband was "pro-German," but it was subsequently brought out that throughout the world war he was confined to his bed in America, having been an invalid for almost 10 years. Mrs. Meade said her husband has been identified with movements for world peace since the early ninety's. He was responsible for the first peace foundation ever created in America, she said, prevailing on one of his friends to donate $1,000,000 as a starter. This sum was augmented a year later by Andrew Carnegie to the extent of $10,000,000.

Mrs. Meade told the committee that the National Council for Prevention of War, of which she is vice president, favors police power rather than military power as a means for maintaining order among nations, and in a formal statement declared: "There are and always will be many causes of disputes between persons, between states and between nations. The sole question is 'shall these disputes about tariffs, race prejudices, economic imperialism, etc., be settled by explosives or by law?'"

Replying to Asa Warren Candler, commander of Argonne post of the legion, who inquired if the "slacker oath" had been adopted by one of the organizations of which she is a member, she said it had been presented but not adopted. Mr. Candler, denying that he or any other legionnaire in an official position had characterized the 70-year-old lecturer as a "radical" of "bolshevik," said the legion had no objection to her addressing adults, but did protest against the views of the so-called "youth movement for peace" being presented to young people. The legion's opposition to her lecture to young people did not originate in that organization, he said, but it had been advised of her attitude toward war by the Military Order of the World War and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Meade Defended.

Evidence of support of Mrs. Meade came from many quarters. Dr. McGeachy was enthusiastic in his indorsement of her, describing her as one of the finest and greatest women in America today—a woman who works with "good old Francis E. Clark, the great Christian Endeavor worker, and others of his kind.

Propaganda is sent out to block Mrs. Meade wherever she goes, it was charged at the meeting. A printed list of objections was in the hands of the local committee, these same charges and accusations, according to Dr. McGeachy, being sent to North Carolina recently "in the hope that much the same thing as happened here would happen in that enlightened state." However, none of Mrs. Meade's speaking engagements were cancelled, he said, and the greater majority of them were before student bodies such as that at Agnes Scott.

The charges against Mrs. Meade, in the opinion of those who rallied to her defense, were unsupported at Saturday's meeting, which ended without any definite action.

As for being lined up with any Russian society bent on overthrowing the American government, Dr. McGeachy said Mrs. Meade was "an earnest Christian woman and no more a bolshevist than I am."

Miss Eleanor Raoul, of the Georgia League of Women Voters, upholding the principles of free speech, said Mrs. Meade should have the right to speak "at any time and any place" she chose.

Dr. McCain's Statement.

Dr. J. H. McCain, president of Agnes Scott, explained that Mrs. Meade's engagement had been cancelled because of the protests of the American Legion and the D. A. R. and said he did not want the impression to get out that the school indorsed possible radical views of any sort.

Mr. McCain's statement was as follows:

"In this morning's paper an announcement is carried in the news columns that Agnes Scott has cancelled an appointment for Mrs. Lucia Ames Meade to speak at the college because of our objection to her sympathy with 'red' propaganda. There were several details that were in error, and I wish to state the real situation.

"Agnes Scott is entirely willing to hear the facts on any subject of importance and we would not object to Mrs. Meade's telling us her views. If we do not agree with them we have plenty of people on the staff who can give the reasons for differing with her or with other speakers. However, in the case of Mrs. Meade, we understood that the views of her organization were objectionable to many people and we did not wish to seemingly give the imprimatur of the college to her and her work; so there was the definite and unmistakable understanding that she would simply come and give her address without publicity regarding it either before or after her coming, and that the fact that she spoke at Agnes Scott would not be used in trying to get other appointments. While I was in Jackson, Miss., several telegrams came to me telling of the publicity given to her proposed engagement. No information had gone from the college, and it could have gone only from representatives of Mrs. Meade. Since the distinct understanding on which the arrangement had been made was violated, the appointment was cancelled. This would have been done in case of any speaker, whatever the subject.

"So far as I personally know, Mrs. Meade is entirely unobjectionable and the cancellation is without intention of reflection on her, but simply a declining of the college to be placed in the apparent position of sponsoring a cause of which we know nothing."

Dr. Dodge's statement follows:

The morning issue of The Constitution states that Mrs. Lucia Ames Meade was "attacked by leaders of the American Legion as a red and a bolshevik," and that "opposition to Mrs. Meade was led by Scott Candler, mayor of Decatur and a prominent American legionnaire, and Asa Warren Candler, newly elected commander of Argonne post of Atlanta," so that she was prevented from speaking at Agnes Scott college on the subject of "International Peace."

Candler Refused Denial.

Feeling that false witness had been borne against Mrs. Meade, whom I knew personally, I have seen her and asked her if she is "a red and a bolshevik," and she tells me that she is not. I then saw Asa Warren Candler and asked him if he had made this charge against Mrs. Meade or if the American Legion had made it, and he said that it had been made by neither. I then asked him if he would not send some statement to The Constitution saying that he and the legion had been misquoted, and he said that he would not.

In view of these facts, I therefore, as a citizen of Atlanta, and a southern gentleman and a professing follower of Jesus Christ, write to make my protest against this insult which has been placed upon Mrs. Meade. She has been charged with being that which she disclaims. Your paper attributes this charge to the American Legion directly, and incidentally to Mr. Candler, its commander, who had led in the opposition. Mr. Candler now tells me that he will make no further statement withdrawing this charge. I therefore hold that Mrs. Meade has been highly misrepresented and in view of the significance which one at once attaches to the words "red and bolshevik," grossly insulted, and I am unwilling that she should leave our great city and glorious southland without her knowing that at least one southern gentleman has come out in public print to protest against such treatment being meted out to her.

Protests Limiting Speech.

I wish further to make my protest against this limitation that has been put upon the liberty of free speech in America and in our city by the action of the American Legion. I am myself an American. I believe that I understand the meaning of such simple American words as those contained in the constitution of our country entitling its citizens to the rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." I therefore hold that the American Legion has done the most un-American thing that any organization could do in condemning a woman unheard. By what right should the American Legion or any other organization—church or what not—arrogate to itself in this free land of ours, for whose freedom our fathers laid down their lives, the infallible authority of saying who shall and who shall not speak on the subject of "International Peace," and just what methods shall be used for its acquisition and preservation? I myself might disagree very radically with Mrs. Meade as to the methods that she might advocate, but I shall not condemn her unheard and prevent her giving free expression to her convictions by applying to her the condemnatory terms of "a red and a bolshevik." And if I belonged to an organization which had been credited with such a procedure, I would not refuse to correct such a statement in the paper that had published it.

Mrs. Meade's Statement.

A meeting was held at my church this morning, presided over by Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Decatur, and attended by Asa Warren Candler, Dr. Plato Durham, of Emory university; Miss Raoul, of the Woman's league of Decatur, which heard Mrs. Meade make an address last evening; Dr. Clinton Lee Scott, of the Liberal Christian church, and others. Mrs. Meade made a statement of her position and her philosophy of war and peace, and then very courteously stated her willingness to answer any questions. Mr. Candler then read from a document which had been sent to him by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the American Legion, in which Mrs. Meade was charged with being affiliated with organizations which were un-American. Mr. Candler put his own interpretation on what was to be considered American. To some of these quotations Mrs. Meade replied that they were correct; to others that they were erroneous; to others that they were misrepresentations; to others that they were taken entirely out of their connotation and connection and therefore easily subject to misunderstanding.

No action was taken at this meeting, but the hope was expressed that it might have led to a better understanding between all concerned in the matter of truth and of peace, and that it might lead to a further meeting of a larger group of representative citizens upon the same subject.

courses of our investigation showed might have some knowledge of this occurrence.

"All of these witnesses have with only a few exceptions testified with seeming great reluctance, the majority appearing to be afraid to give any direct and positive evidence as to identity of the members of the mob, the result being that we have not been able to obtain sufficient evidence to identify any of the members of the mob which had a part in the killing of this negro for an alleged attempted or intended attack on a white woman at her home near Labelle on the morning of May 11 last.

Sheriff Is Blamed.

"Our investigation, however, abundantly shows that the sheriff of Hendry county and his deputies and the peace officers of the town of Labelle made absolutely no effort to disperse the mob or to get the negro away or to prevent his being hanged, it being the opinion of the grand jury that this lynching could have been prevented if these officers had done their duty.

"The sheriff of Hendry county having so signally failed to do his duty at this time and having purposely, as it appears to this body after a careful investigation, avoided the mob, we feel at D. L. McLaughlin, sheriff of Hendry county, should be removed from office and we recommend to Governor John W. Martin that this be done; and we ask that your honor direct the clerk of the circuit court of this county to forward to Governor Martin a certified copy of that part of this report which refers to the Hendry county matter."

CHOIR DEFENDANTS MAY RETALIATE

"miscarriage of justice," he sulked in Jersey City.

In his place, Attorney General Edward L. Katzenbach moved promptly to free the defendants.

Asks Cases Be Dropped.

Holding in his hand an indictment against Mrs. Hall, Henry and "Willie" Stevens, and two against Henry Carpender, Katzenbach said that the state of New Jersey moved to have them nolle prossed.

The process was a formality.

"The defendants are now discharged," said Judge Parker.

Friends pressed around the accused family. There were hand-clasps, kisses, a few cheers.

As for the question—who, then, did kill the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills four years ago—Attorney General Katzenbach said:

"The mystery remains a mystery."

This was the final work from the state of New Jersey.

Mrs. Hall's spokesman hinted that there might be more to it than that.

Retaliation Probable.

Action by the aristocratic family which for the past four years has been the subject of suspicion and incidental indignities first might take the course of retaliation, it was admitted at the Hall home.

Suits for libel against a tabloid publication accused by the defense in the Hall-Mills trial of having persecuted the defendants to increase its circulation were threatened.

Hints of an investigation of the prosecution's conduct of the case against Mrs. Hall and her brothers again were heard.

"But just say we are happy to be completely vindicated," was the one word from the widow as she retired to the shelter of the big house on the hill where she and the slain rector had lived so placidly until the night of his death.

Dissenting Voices Raised.

While friends enthusiastically expressed approval of her release and the state of New Jersey was moving to nolle prosse all indictments against Mrs. Hall and the others, two dissenting voices were raised.

Senator Simpson and his star witness in the trial that failed—the dying "pig woman"—refused to accept the outcome as satisfactory.

Simpson, in a letter to Governor Moore, was extremely bitter over the outcome and advised the governor not to drop the investigation. He referred to the failure of the first investigation four years ago, at which, it has been charged, evidence disappeared, witnesses were intimidated and an apparent effort made to cover up the crime. He charged that politics interfered with his own investigation, although he did not refer to his charge made in court that the jury was prejudiced against the state.

Simpson Quits Case.

After telling the governor that he wished to withdraw from the case, Simpson wrote:

"I think, however, it would be a serious attack on the administration of justice if there were any cessation in the prosecution, especially after the conditions in Somerset county which surrounded obtaining of indictments in these cases. Any withdrawal on the part of the state, with the evidence in its possession already made public in the trial, and the fragrant activity of the politicians of Somerset county in this trial, it seems to me would reflect seriously on administration of justice in the state.

"If all criminal prosecution were to cease with the verdict of the jury yesterday, in the trial held in a county where indictments were not presented for over four years, this would be sufficiently self-explanatory to need no comment. I thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve in the administration of justice.

"If justice is to be obstructed by a cessation of further prosecution in these murder cases, due to the verdict yesterday, obtained under such circumstances, I respectfully suggest to you, as chief executive of the state that you embalm Jersey justice and send her to the British museum."

Writes Katzenbach.

In a letter to Katzenbach, Simpson said:

"I have done all that I could to present the facts to a jury in a county where I honestly believe a fair trial could not be had, because of many facts, one alone being sufficient to convince me, and that, that it took four years or more to get indictments for the murders."

Simpson told the press that he probably would ask a bipartisan investigation of the administration of justice in New Jersey at the next session of the state legislature. Simpson is a republican senator.

Governor Moore did not answer Simpson's letter.

"The thing is through as far as the state is concerned," he commented. "Senator Simpson has done very good work and I intend to write him to that effect."

Mrs. Gibson Dissatisfied.

The only other person to express dissatisfaction with the verdict was Mrs. Jane Gibson, the state's star witness. From her bed in a Jersey City hospital she sent out a statement predicting that the mystery would be solved some day and she would be vindicated.

Mrs. Gibson, who accused Mrs. Hall and her brothers at a dramatic session of court to which she was carried on a hospital bed, reiterated that she had told the truth. Her statement follows:

"Acquitted? Well, can you beat that? Well, Mrs. Hall may have been acquitted by that jury because of her money, but she is not vindicated in the eyes of Almighty God. She knows whether she is held guilty by the Almighty. So do I. I told the truth. I will probably not live long but murder will out. Some day they will know that I told the truth and I will be vindicated too."

Case Not Quite Ended.

The vindication of Mrs. Hall and her brothers does not end the case entirely. The state still must dispose of the cases of Felix Di Martini, detective, and Mrs. Minna Clark, a member of the choir in the church of St. John the Evangelist, of which Hall was rector.

Di Martini worked on the case for Mrs. Hall and was dramatically arrested after he had testified at the trial. He was accused of obstructing justice and with being an accessory after the fact. He is free on $3,000 bail. Mrs. Clark, who was friendly with the rector and intimate with Mrs. Mills, is under $5,000 bail charged with being an accessory in the murder.

Both will be given a hearing before Judge Frank L. Cleary in the courthouse next Thursday and probably will be set free.

It was understood Mrs. Hall might go away with 'Willie" for the winter.

"Willie" will be free then to resume his associations at the town's fire hall, where for years he has loafed and gossiped with the firemen.

Henry Stevens and his wife will go later to Lavallette, their home, and Stevens, who is retired, can resume his angling for the bluefish, which played such an important part in his alibi at the trial.

Henry Carpender is at his home in New Brunswick.

DEATH SENTENCE IS PRONOUNCED

hang. The hearing lasted more than four hours.

One of the points made by the defense counsel was that it was unconstitutional to resentence a prisoner without his being present, as had been done with Howell in September.

Howell in Court.

To circumvent this point Howell had been brought to Perry, where he was tried last June, to have sentence again passed on him.

In his discussion of the case, after the arguments of the state and defense had closed, Judge Mathews said that in his opinion the portion of the law which granted the resentencing power of a judge was unconstitutional. The judge also said that in his opinion the prison commission of the state should appoint a warden and further, he thought, that the captions of the act should more fully cover the body. He said that he would not pass on the constitutionality of the act but would resentence the defendant. The judge held that the language of the act which said that the place of execution should be "in the walls of the state penitentiary at Milledgeville, or wherever the state penitentiary might be." was sufficiently clear and decisive.

Howell was returned to the Bibb county jail at Macon tonight.

GIRL DISCOVERED CLUBBED TO DEATH

coroner's jury. "The whole side of the head had been crushed in by a blow or blows administered in the region of the left ear."

He said he found no pathological conditions of the body which would have resulted in death.

The body was covered with a coat, a red sweater, a silk dress, under garments, stockings, shoes and rubbers. A broken string of pearls and a ring were found.

The dress, according to Dr. C. A. Armstrong, who shared the autopsy, contained an empty purse and a small bottle to hold perfume.

Dr. F. J. Antoine testified that the girl's right hand was folded across her chest. The viscera is to be examined further but all four physicians agreed she died from clubbing.

Death was almost instantaneous, Dr. Bunting concluded.

SEEK TO IDENTIFY BODY IN MORGUE.

Chicago, December 4.—(AP)—Only the identification of relatives of Erdman Olson can decide whether the body of a youth in the county morgue here is that of the boy sought for the slaying of Clara Olson, local authorities decided tonight.

Accordingly a representative of the coroner's office went to Wisconsin to accompany a relative of the boy to Chicago.

LONGFELLOW LETTER IS SENT TO EMORY

Emory University, Ga., December 4. (Special.)—A letter written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in 1881 to John C. Langford, a member of the Emory alumni, has been received by J. A. Dombrowsky, secretary of the Emory Alumni association. Following an account of Mr. Langford's death, T. W. Yarbrough secured the letter and sent it to Mr. Dombrowsky, who will file it among other archaic papers and records.

Mr. Langford graduated from Emory in 1878 and received an M. A. degree in 1881. The letter was mailed at Cambridge, Mass., September 12, at 12 noon, and carried a 3-cent stamp. It is an acknowledgment of poems received from Langford, and also stated that a copy of Longfellow poems was being mailed to the Bolingbroke man.

EMPLOYEES' UNION IS ENTERTAINED BY MANY SPEAKERS

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by the City and County and Public Service Employees Union was held Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Labor temple, with an elaborate speaking and musical program.

In addition to the speaking and musical program, furnished by a well-known local orchestra, refreshments were served. James Bowles, vice president of the organization, presided.

Among the speakers were: Cliff Cunningham, president of the Georgia State Federation of Labor; William Pollard, president of Builders Trades Council; Carl Karston, financial secretary of the Atlanta Federation of Trades; W. A. Hansell, chief of construction of the city of Atlanta; F. K. Stephens, president of the Employees' Union; Charles B. Gramling, chairman of the board of trustees of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and Louie P. Marquardt, secretary of the Georgia State Federation of Labor.

"CASCARETS" FOR YOUR BOWELS IF HEADACHY, SICK

To-night! Clean your bowels and end Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Severe Colds, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.)—(adv.)

COUNCIL WILL SEAT 4 NEW MEMBERS

One of the most important matters to come before council at its regular meeting Monday will be the seating of four new councilmen, it was announced Saturday.

Two members, Alderman H. Turner Loehr and Councilman R. F. Pennington, are expected to exchange places. They were elected to exchange places and just before the general elections Wednesday submitted resignations to Mayor Walter A. Sims.

It is understood that Councilman Sam Wardlaw will nominate them to fill the posts to which they have been elected. They ordinarily would not take their seats until the first meeting in January, but since they vacated positions in order to make the races, they probably will be seated in new posts Monday.

Jack Hardy, councilman-elect from the sixth ward to fill the posts left vacant through resignation of Councilman M. F. Dowdy, will be inducted to fill that post. Councilman Harry Roberts, who was named to fill this position until the general election, will vacate.

Howard C. McCutcheon, councilman-elect from the second ward, will be named to fill the post left vacant by resignation of former Councilman Cecil G. Allen. Mr. Allen also resigned to run for office, that of alderman.

T. M. Smith, councilman from the 12th ward, elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Councilman Dan Adams, will continue to serve until January 1.

Only routine matters are expected to be brought before council Monday.

BURGLARS DEVOTE EFFORTS TO SAFES EARLY SATURDAY

A band of yeggmen invaded a number of Atlanta business houses and started a wave of safe blowing Saturday morning it was reported to police Saturday.

Their efforts resulted in a safe being blown at the Atlanta Sausage company, 26 Howell Mill road; a safe being spirited away from the Gulf Refining company filling station, at DeKalb and Hurt streets; and a third safe being hammered and battered at the Gulf Refining company filling station at 377 East Hunter street.

The burglars were foiled in their attempt to get away with about $554 in currency at the sausage company when surprised by Patrolmen S. I. Belcher and T. J. Smith, who heard the detonation and rushed to the scene. The burglars made good their escape but were forced to leave the money.

There was about $75 in the safe at the Hurt street filling station. The place was broken into sometime during the night and the small safe hauled away. At the second filling station the yeggs were unable to batter the safe open.

SUTTON TO ADDRESS DECATUR SOCIETY

Professor Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will address a union service of all young people's societies in Decatur Sunday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the First Baptist church.

This union service is held under auspices of the Decatur Young People's league, composed of the young people's societies of the five churches of Decatur. This service is the regular fall meeting of this interdenominational organization.

Wallace Alston, of Emory university, president of the Decatur Young People's league, will preside over the service.

COUNCILMAN HURT IN BOX-CAR FALL

W. R. Johnson, councilman from the eleventh ward, sustained painful injuries Friday when he fell from a box-car to the tracks in the freight yards of the Atlanta joint terminals.

Mr. Johnson, of 297 Kirkwood avenue, is a switchman, and it was in the performance of his duties that the accident occurred. Physicians at the Davis-Fischer hospital said his back had been wrenched and some ligaments torn.

MRS. ANNA SUMMERS WILL REST IN TEXAS

The body of Mrs. Anna Summers, 78, beloved resident of East Lake, who died Thursday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Willis J. Davis, was taken to Garland, Texas, Friday night for funeral services and interment.

Mrs. Summers was the mother of Hatton W. Summers, congressman from Texas, who is well known here, having frequently visited Atlanta during his mother's residence here. Mrs. Summers came to East Lake from Tennessee seven years ago and since then has been an active worker in local church circles. She was a member of First Methodist church.

NEW CONVENTIONS TO BE HELD HERE ARE ANNOUNCED

Meetings of various organizations to be held in Atlanta in 1927 already are filling the calendar of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau, it is announced by Fred Houser, secretary and manager.

While most conventions of national organizations are held in the summer, the list of winter dates is steadily growing, and Atlanta and the south are profiting from the new tendency toward winter meetings, he said.

The annual conference of the groups of the Alliance Francaise of America will be held here in February, it is announced, bringing to Atlanta several hundred men and women of French birth or ancestry who are interested in relations with France. Charles Loridans, president of the Southern Ferro-Concrete company, is vice president of the organization, and in charge of details.

The annual convention of the American Millinery Jobbers' association will be held in Atlanta next November, it is announced by Secretary Fred Houser. Dick Beard, of Ernest L. Rhodes & Co., is vice president of the organization.

One of the most important conventions booked for next year is that of the National Association of Ice Industries, which embraces most of the ice manufacturers and makers of ice machinery. The convention was secured for Atlanta a short time ago when the convention bureau sent a delegation to Chicago to present the invitation.

WORK TO BEGIN TO 'DRESS' ARCADE FOR CHRISTMAS

During the coming week active preparations will begin to decorate the interior of the Arcade building for the Christmas holidays. The Arcade decorations have always been a sort of civic feature around Christmas time, and this year no pains will be spared to make the interior more beautiful than has been the case in years past, building officials say. Special scheme of decorations has been designed and an expert put in charge. Under the leadership of the Arcade Cooperative association, made up of tenants of the building, the entire tenancy of the building and the owners of the building are cooperating financially in putting over this feature.

In addition to the decorations, several splendid musical attractions are being scheduled for certain hours during the day. These musical attractions will be announced at a later date.

The Arcade Cooperative association is affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association.

ADVERTISING CONCERN OPENS FRISCO OFFICE

MacManus Incorporated, national advertising counsel, announces the opening of a Pacific coast office in the Phelan building, San Francisco, with George Haig in charge. Mr. Haig's advertising experience extends over more than a decade. It involves practically every phase of advertising and sales promotional work.

In addition to the western office, the company also maintains its own branches in New York, Cleveland and Toledo. At its headquarters in Detroit, it has a staff of more than 100 persons to handle a diversified list of industrial and specialized advertising accounts that have made it one of the country's most successful and largest agencies.

THEATER TO OPEN SOON IN BRUNSWICK

Brunswick, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Brunswick's new moving picture house, the Ritz, will formally open on December 15, it was announced today by W. F. Howell, manager. The Ritz is the old Grand, and the building has bene transformed into one of the handsomest playhouses in the state. The opera house has been repainted, redecorated and refurnished throughout.

Lowly Pecan Nut Engrosses High Legal Authority

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

The judgment of Solomon and of the man who cut the Gordian knot was needed at the capitol Saturday to solve a legal problem placed before the staff of George M. Napier, attorney general, but T. R. Gress, chief of staff in the office, was equal to the emergency and rendered an off-hand decision that he thinks will stand.

The question—

"If the pecan trees of a neighbor encroaches over your own land and pecans drop from the tree on your land, are you entitled to the nuts?"

Mr. Gress listened to the question, thought of caveat emptor, old Corpus Juris, res gestae, habeas corpus, sine qui non, nisi prius, pro bono publico, bromo seltzer, nux vomica, aqua pura, non compos mentis and a few other Latin terms, and then answered it in plain Atlanta language.

"Why, the pecans belong to the man on whose land they dropped," he said.

"A man owns everything above his property, theoretically to the sky, and everything below to the center of the earth. Not only that, but a long array of decisions have held that fruit from a neighbor's tree that drops on your land belongs to you."

So, if you live next to any pecan groves, cocanut groves, benana forests, peach or apple orchards or grape vineyards, just lay low until the fruit falls on your land and take charge of it.

The question was brought up in a letter from a Constitution reader, which was handed to the attorney general for an answer.

Pythagorian philosophers of 2,500 years ago began to suspect that the earth was not the center of the universe.

COBB GETS NEW TRIAL ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Grady Cobb, federal prohibition officer who was convicted on a charge of unlawfully shooting at another, was granted a new trial Saturday morning in United States district court, by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley.

Judge Sibley held that the evidence on which Cobb was convicted was not sufficient to uphold the verdict.

Cobb was indicted by the superior court grand jury in Troup county on a charge of unlawfully shooting at Buck Hamby, in West Point, in 1923. Under a federal statue providing that an officer charged with such an offense while on duty can have his case tried by a federal judge, the case was removed to distri court, the conviction following.

SwannanoaCamp Fire Girls Plan To Present Play

The Swanannoa group of Camp Fire Girls, composed of students at the Decatur Junior High school, announce that they will present a play entitled "The Call of Wohelo," in the auditorium of the school on Saturday night next, at 8 o'clock.

The play deals with camp life, as conducted by the Camp Fire Girls, and the scene is laid at a summer camp. The girls will wear their official Camp Fire costumes. The play is given for the benefit of the school to secure a curtain and new seats for the auditorium, etc. Miss Emily Stead is coach for the performance while Mrs. J. Howell Green is guardian of the Swanannoa group.

HOWARD CANCELS PLEA FOR RETRIAL FOR DR. STARNES

Fight for freedom of Dr. W. A. Starnes, Atlanta physician, Saturday was abandoned when William Schley Howard, of defense counsel, filed a motion in United States district court to cancel a plea for a new trial. Dr. Starnes was found guilty on three counts charging narcotic act violations.

This action of defense counsel followeed a survey of the record or transcript of the three trials, in which no error was found, Mr. Howard stated. Dr. Starnes asked for an extension of time until January 3 before starting his sentence of two years in the federal penitentiary, in order that he may set his affairs in order. Judge Sibley granted the request.

CATHOLIC OFFICIAL TO TALK TONIGHT AT K. OF C. CLUB

The Very Rev. Monseigneur M. H. Abrahams, only representative in America of the Latin patrinrch of Jerusalem, who recently arrived in Atlanta from Denver, where he conferred the order of the Holy Sepulchre on Supreme Master John H. Reddin, of the fourth degree Knights of Columbus, will speak at the local Knights of Columbus club tonight, it was announced Saturday.

Father Abrahams, who is commander of the military order of the Holy Sepulchre, has been visiting the various points of interest while on his visit here. He has a number of friends in Atlanta whom he met in Europe last year. Among these are the Rev. E. M. Walsh, pastor of the Immaculate Conception church; Miss Frances Kenny, Miss Nell Gatins, Miss Henrietta Masseling and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gavan, at whose residence he is a guest.

His address tonight, to which all Catholics and their friends are invited, is one of a series of lectures being given under auspices of the local chapter of the Knights of Columbus.

Strict Regulations Greet Women Students Applying at Emory

Emory University, Ga., December 4. (Special.)—More than a desire to attend college is necessary to become a co-ed at Emory university. Not only must the regular entrance requirements be satisfied, but additional specifications must be met before one of the fairer sex can become a student at this college.

"A woman must be of mature mind and majoring in the study of education; must enter on the recommendation of the dean of the college and approval of the president in order to enroll for classes at Emory," according to the rules and regulations.

Few exceptions are made to this rule, namely:

(b.) Any woman with enough college credit may enter the graduate school of law school.

There are at present 30 co-eds at Emory—17 in the college of liberal arts, 12 in the graduate school, and one in the Lamar School of Law.

The Thompson medal for making the highest grades in the freshman law class for the year 1925-26 was awarded Nana Wolfle, now a junior.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BODY TO HOLD FINAL MEET

The Atlanta Baptist Sunday School association will hold its monthly meeting with the Gordon Street Baptist church this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A general assembly will be held in the church auditorium after which department conferences will be held, presided over by Miss Elizabeth Silvey, Mrs. A. B. Brown, Mrs. Fred W. Rollins, Mrs. J. Elmer Slider, A. M. Smith and J. Elmer Slider. The theme for the conference programs will be "Christmas Plans and Programs." Christmas decorations will be demonstrated by the Gordon Street School workers by a display of beautiful decorations in the department rooms. Seasonal posters will be shown; Christmas songs will be taught, and worship programs demonstrated.

Gordon Street church has a modern department school building and a part of the program will be given over to a tour of the building. Short speeches from the department leaders will be enjoyed at the closing session of the association.

This is the last meeting for the year.

Colonel Woodward Returns.

Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of the Georgia Military academy, returned Saturday from Jackson, Mississippi, where he attended a convention of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges, of which the Georgia Military academy is a member. Colonel Woodward reports an interesting and successful convention with large attendance from the men schools and colleges of the south.

SUSPECT IN OHIO NOT JACK WILSON

Marks of identity having failed to correspond to those of Jack Wilson, wanted here for the murder of William H. Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, the suspect held in Lima, Ohio, was ordered released by Solicitor General John A. Boykin Saturday, who wired authorities that the prisoner was not the man wanted by local authorities.

The prisoner was arrested in St. Mary's, Ohio, recently in connection with a bank robbery, but authorities of that city have failed to connect him with the crime, according to information. When arrested he was suffering from a wound in the left leg and was carried to a hospital in Lima, Ohio, where he was being guarded pending investigation as to his identity. Authorities in St. Mary's expressed the belief that he was the Jack Wilson wanted here, and for the past several days telegrams, photographs, bertillon measurements and fingerprints have been sent to and from Atlanta and Lima by authorities.

Fingerprints, photographs and thorough description of the man held in Lima were received by Solicitor Boykin Saturday, who compared them with the description of the Wilson wanted, only to find that they did not tally.

The man held in Ohio weighs 245 pounds, while Wilson weighed only about 160 and is several years older than Wilson, his description indicated.

Jack Wilson has been a fugitive from justice since the night of December 19, 1925, when he is alleged to have fired the shot which ended the life of Mr. Cheek during a holdup in the grocery store.

EDUARDE GATO, SR., CIGAR FIRM HEAD, DEAD IN HAVANA

Havana, Cuba, November 4.—(AP)—Eduardo Gato, Sr., multimillionaire and reported to be the most extensive manufacturer of cigars of the world, owner and operator of vast tobacco plantations in Cuba and cigar factories at Havana and Key West, died here at 12 o'clock last night at the age of 87 years. He had been in declining health for several years. He will be buried in Havana.

HAYMOND URGES AUTOS IN CRASHES BE CONFISCATED

Pointing out that the increase in the number of accidents has exceeded the proportionate increase in car registration during the past few years at an alarming rate, Oscar Haymond, secretary of the Atlanta Motor club, expressed the opinion Saturday that the only way to curb the reign of the "reckless auto driver who maims and kills is to confiscate the car and inflict long term jail sentences on the drivers.

"If permitted to go along its present course the condition will continue to get worse instead of improving. The value of human life is held too cheaply by some people and it is those people who would be affected by more stringent laws such as Solicitor General John A. Boykin advises."

SHOUP APPOINTED BUILDING, LOAN DRIVE DIRECTOR

Richard Shoup was appointed Saturday to be campaign directors of the Georgia Building and Loan league's educational campaign, George W. West, president of the league and former campaign director, announced. Mr. Shoup will direct the campaign until its close at the end of "Georgia Building and Loan Week," December 13-18.

Mr. Shoup's appointment followed a meeting of the executive committee of the league at which it was decided to release Mr. West in order that he might devote all of his time to his work as general sales manager of the "Forward Atlanta" campaign, to which he was recently appointed. In releasing Mr. West the league committee stated that it felt, because of the great civic value of the Atlanta advertising campaign, he should be relieved of any other duties.

Mr. Shoup is a prominent realtor of Atlanta, a member of the Civitan club, the City club and the realtors' board. He was an active worker in the recent Atlanta bond campaign and for many years was southern manager of the Cardex company.

Soldiers', Sailors' Home Indorsements Sent To Federal Officials

With hundreds of indorsements already in and others expected, Sam C. Crane, secretary of the Southern National Soldiers' and Sailors' home committee, stated Friday afternoon that it has become necessary at this time to gather all of the indorsements together and send them to officials at Washington, D. C., in an effort to have a national soldiers' and sailors' home erected in or near Atlanta.

A bill introduced in the senate in Washington by William J. Harris and W. D. Upshaw, is now pending in congress for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the erection of a soldiers and sailors' home in Atlanta, to take care of veterans of all wars.

Already indorsements have been received from the mayor and general council of Atlanta, the chamber of commerce, the general assemblies of both houses of the state legislature, the Atlanta Federation of Trades, the Georgia Federation of Trades, the Atlanta Woman's club and numerous other civic and private organizations of the city.

ACCIDENTAL SHOT VICTIM NO BETTER

The condition of Irwin O. Hagen, Jr., 13, of 536 North Boulevard, who, Friday night, was accidentally shot by a playmate, was described as grave by Grady physicians on Saturday night. Young Hagen and his companion were playing with a rifle when the weapon was in some manner discharged, the load taking effect in the victim's abdomen.

Neighbors, alarmed by the cries of the two boys, rushed Hagen to Grady hospital where he was operated on at once.

Washington Seminary Girls To Present Indian Operetta

Atlanta patrons of light opera and lovers of good music and dancing have an unusual mid-season treat in store in the production of the "Feast of the Red Corn," by the girls of the Washington seminary, on December 16, at the city auditorium.

The play, or operetta, which was written by Paul Bliss, calls for numerous chorus and ballet numbers and, according to Miss Annie M Sharpe, who directs the production, will afford parts for all of the 400 girls attending the seminary. It will be staged, she said, on a scale never attempted before by any school in the south.

"The Feast of the Red Corn," is an Indian operetta symbolic of the ceremonies at harvest time when all the warriors are away at war. The story of the play opens with the beginning of the ceremonies with all the women of the tribe assembled for the harvest feasts. The queen and all the maidens of the tribe assist in harvesting the corn and, according to the ancient Indian tradition, the finder of the red ear will see her warrior lover and is assured of his safe return.

In the story by Paul Bliss the queen's search for the red ear is assisted by an ancient squaw who invokes the four winds in her aid. As may be expected she finds the lucky ear, sees her warrior lover who returns safe from battle and becomes king.

Of course the play includes many chorus numbers and many solo and ensemble dances which are put on by the girls of the academy. Beautiful lighting effects and stage costumes have been arranged for the production under direction of seminary faculty members, several of whom also take part in the show.

Miss Marguerite Battle, well-known soprano and teacher of voice at the seminary, will play the queen and also will direct the musical numbers. Mrs. Green Warren, instructor of dancing at the school, has charge of the ballet and chorus, whose members she says are already selected and well trained in their parts.

The character parts for the play have been only partially cast and will be announced next week in full. Two of the leading characters, in addition to the queen, will be played by Miss Shirley Cartin and Miss Rosaline Stovall, both of Tampa, Fla., who will take the parts of the Indian squaw and "Impeelight," leading comedy role, respectively. Miss Carolyn Hogshead has the lead part in the "Ghost Dance," and Miss Mary Morrison takes the solo in the "Dance of the Red Arrow," two of the feature dance numbers.

The orchestra will be directed by Lawrence Everhart, music instructor.

Admission to the auditorium on the night of the production will be 50 cents to all parts of the house and the show will begin promptly at 8 o'clock the night of December 16.

French Pianist Displays Great Creative Imagination

BY ROSEMARY STEVENSON.

In a program that is a perfect musical mosaic, E. Robert Schmitz, the French pianist, displayed great creative imagination combined with the highest intellectuality in his premiere appearance in Atlanta at the first concert of the series being given by the Atlanta Music club, on Saturday.

Schmitz, known as the great modernist, aroused the keenest enthusiasm of his audience before he ever played a note with the amazing contrasts shown in his program, old against new, classic and modern, French, Spanish, American, Polish and finally each group contrasted with another and each number in happy juxtaposition to its neighbor.

Despite startling departures in technique, Schmitz proved himself big tonally. He was able to force the piano to its greatest strength without the least dissonance. His imagination was perfectly under control always and his playing was neither temperamental nor erratic but showed the greatest nicety of values consistent to the last detail.

Unique and Individual.

Often he was unique and individual in his mannerisms of the keyboard, which were strikingly displayed in "Fireworks," in the Debussy group. Schmitz is one of the greatest interpreters of atmospheric effects and traditions of Debussy. He opened this group with the "Prelude in A Minor," which was flashingly crystal, like the instant lighting of a glittering glass chandelier. "Moonlight," from "Pour le Piano," just seemed to miss the etherial quality of the composer, while the "Dance," which is in one of the most difficult rhythms ever written, was a mystic thing in which no earthly bodies swayed to its melody.

Shows Emotional Power.

Choosing the 'Nocturne in F Sharp Minor" for his first Chopin number, Schmitz showed his finest emotional power. In bright contrast followed "Etude No. 4, Opus 10" and the "Nocturne in F Sharp Major," in which he reached his highest point of musical purity. The Chopin group closed with the dramatic "Polonaise in A Flat Major."

"Burlesca," "Bouree" and "Toccata," from the early Italian school by Scarlatti, were whimsical little tunes as bright as confetti tossed at a carnival. "Sister Monica," from Couperin, was sweekly descriptive of sacred quietitude. His first number was the magnificent "Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor," by Bach, and he closed with the three moderns, "Chimes of Saint Patrick's," Whithorne; "Plays of the Water," Ravel, and "First Spanish Dance," M. de Falla. His encores were "Arabesque" and "Golliwog's Cakewalk," from Debussy, and an old Spanish air.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons, nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully. A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

DR. HUFF WILL LEAD BIG REVIVAL HERE

Revival services will begin at Central Baptist church on Cooper street, near Whitehall, by Dr. Will Huff at 7:30 o'clock tonight. "The Mission of Jesus Christ to Our World" was announced as the subject for the opening sermon.

While Christ was the great preacher great teacher, great physician, great example, Dr. Huff said in outlining his sermon, He came to do more than these things which are simple stepping stones to His great objective. He shall save His people from their sins and He reveals God and redeems men; brings humanity from its moral alienation from God and brings His kingdom into the world.

Dr. Huff came to Atlanta on the invitation of Dr. Luke Rader, pastor of Central Baptist church, and will preach daily during the coming week at 10:30 and 7:30 o'clock with the exception of Monday morning and Saturday.

His first visit to Atlanta was made in 1904, when he preached at the Tabernacle, of which Dr. Len G. Broughton was pastor. He made other visits here 15 years ago and about five years later, preaching at the Baptist Tabernacle.

Dr. Huff, a native of Ohio, entered the Methodist ministry 27 years ago and during the last five years has made four campaigns through the Methodist mission field in Latin-American countries. He comes to Atlanta from South America, and will return there in October.

DORFAN TO PRESIDE AT HEBREW MEETING

Joel Dorfan will preside as chairman for the Morris Lichtenstein memorial meeting which will be held at the Ahavath-Achim congregation, corner Washington and Woodward, at 8 o'clock Thursday night, December 9.

In accepting the chairmanship Mr. Dorfan said, "Mr. Lichtenstein was one of the most philanthropic men of Atlanta. During his life time he gave so much to worthy charities that after his death very little was left to his family. For that reason they are unable to establish a suitable memorial to him, so it is up to the many people who benefited by his work to see that it is done."

Rabbi A. P. Hirmes also will speak at the meeting.

Rabbi Hirmes, in explaining his subject, said: "As vice president of the Ahavath-Achim congregation Mr. Lichenstein was beloved by all who came in contact with him. Through his executive ability the congregation grew from a small one to the largest of its kind in the south. Members should feel duty-bound to do all in their power to help in the memorial."

Mr. Lichtenstein was vice president of the federation of Jewish charities from its inception in 1914 until the time of his death. He also was prominent in other Jewish and civic affairs of the city.

Official announcement of the winwining of the grand prize, the highest awards obtainable, at the Sesqui-Centennial exposition, Philadelphia, by the Epreka Vacuum cleaner, was received at Eureka headquarters in Detroit. The grand prize was conferred by the international jury of awards after a series of exhaustive competitive tests of the best known electric cleaners.

This, according to Fred Wardell, president of the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company, is the seventh time the Eureka has won the grand prize or highest award in international competition.

"The Sesqui-Centennial grand prize," said Mr. Wardell, "is particularly gratifying as a final and conclusive recognition of the efficiency of the Eureka "high-vacuum" principle of cleaning, which distinguishes the Eureka from any other types of electric cleaners.

"The magniture of the electric cleaner business can only be grasped when one stops to consider that the vacuum cleaning industry is much younger than the automobile industry, about 17 years old, in fact.

"The Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company was started in a small way about 16 years ago by Mr. Wardell. Demand for Eureka has grown year after year at such a remarkable rate that today this company manufactures approximately 30 per cent of the world's production of nearly 70 different trade-marked makes. It is represented throughout the country by more than 4,000 dealers and owns and operates 140 branch stores in the major cities of the United States."

Elks Will Stage Memorial Services At Georgia Tonight

The annual memorial services of Atlanta lodge No. 78, B. P. O. Elks, will be held at Keith's New Georgia theater tonight at 8:15 o'clock. At the same time services are to be held in 1,500 other cities of the United States and her dependencies at which tributes of respect and love will be paid Elks who have died during the past year.

The exercises at the Georgia theater will be under the direction of J. Turner Fitten, exalted ruler, and other officers of the lodge in conjunction with the degree team under the direction of J. G. Stewart.

The memorial address wil be delivered by B. C. Broyles, secretary of the local lodge and district deputy grand exalted ruler for north Georgia, and will be accompanied by pictures presented by the degree team.

The vocal music will be under the direction of Signor E. Volpi and the Elks' band will be led by M. A. Greenblatt.

COUPLE OBSERVES 56TH WEDDING DATE

Sparta, Ga., December 40.—(Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. Joel P. Reynolds, pioneer residents of Hancock county, living in the Whaley community, celebrated their 56th wedding anniversary at their home yesterday. All of the living children and grandchildren numbering 18 were present at a dinner given in honor of the couple.

Mr. Reynolds is a native of this county and has amassed a fortune farming and dealing in real estate.

ChemicalEngineersDueHere Tuesday for 19th Convention

The 19th annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers opens at Birmingham Monday. After a day and a half there, spent in technical sessions and in visiting the steel and coke-oven by-product plants, the party will board a special train for Anniston, Ala., and after a three-hour stop there for an inspection of the plant of the Federal Phosphorus company will resume their journey by special train to Atlanta, arriving here at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

Andrew M. Fairlie, upon whose invitation the institute chose Atlanta for this meeting and who has been serving as chairman of the local committee on arrangements, will join the engineers at Anniston and escort them to this city.

The visitors will be met at the terminal station by a delegation of the local reception committee, headed by Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau.

Headquarters for the meeting will be the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, and the sessions will begin on Wednesday morning, December 8.

Meeting for Public.

The main feature on Wednesday will be a meeting open to the public at the Biltmore hotel on Wednesday night. The subject of this meeting will be "Chemistry and National Defense." Dr. Hugh K. Moore, president of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, will introduce the speakers of the evening—Colonel C. E. Brigham, of the United States chemical warfare service, and Professor W. K. Lewis, of Boston, head of the department of chemical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

These distinguished speakers will describe in non-technical language the purpose and work of the chemical warfare service of this country, the nature of poison gases used in chemical warfare, and reasons why the United States must maintain equipment for carrying on chemical warfare for purposes of offense and defense.

Prior to the addresses motion pictures showing the use of dynamite for blasting rock at the Stone Mountain memorial will be exhibited.

Army Officers to Attend.

The army officers on duty at the fourth corp area headquarters in this city are expected to attend in a body to hear these noted speakers.

No admission tickets are required and a large attendance of Atlantans is expected.

The principal event of the Thursday program will be the banquet at the Biltmore on Thursday night. For this banquet a musical entertainment by the Big Bethel Baptist choir of 50 voices has been provided. H. C. Parmelee, of New York, editor of Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering, the leading chemical engineering journal of the country, will be toastmaster, and the speakers will be J. G. Esselen, Jr., of Boston; Professor Alfred H. White, of Ann Arbor, Mich., professor of chemical engineering at the University of Michigan, and Eugene R. Black, of this city.

Limited Membership.

Many prominent Atlantans have accepted invitations to be present at the banquet, including Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Paxon, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen, W. T. Perkerson, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Fairlie, Fred Houser, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Heath, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Peeples, Colonel B. L. Bugg, Governor M. B. Wellborn, H. O. Hoffman and many others are expected to participate in this function.

Membership in the American Institute of Chemical Engineers is limited to specialists trained in some branch of chemical engineering or applied chemistry, and practicing in field requiring skill in the design, construction or operation of chemical plants, or of industrial plants employing some chemical process.

As might be expected from the rigid requirements for membership, the institute is not a large society. There are only about 750 members, all told, and about 100 will be guests of Atlanta this week.

The party will leave at mignight Thursday by special train for Copperhill, Tenn., where they will inspect the mines, copper smelting and sulphuric acid plants of the Tennessee Copper company on Friday.

The first day's schedule follows:

8:30-10 a. m.—Registration, purchase coupon tickets, Biltmore hotel. Meeting at Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

9 a. m.—Business session. Canvass of ballots of officers. Reports of officers and council. Reports of committees.

10 a. m.—Reading of papers, "The Changing Factors in Chemical Plant Location," A. E. Marshall; "Market as a Factor in Connection With Plant Location," William M. Booth; "Unusual Factors in Plant Location," J. H. James; "The Atlanta District as a Location for Chemical Plants," Andrew M. Fairlie; "Can Corrosion Be Prevented?" Maximilian Toch; "What Do We Know About Copper-Nickle Alloys?" M. G. Corson; "The Properties and Functions of Filter Acids," H. L. Olin, F. V. Morrison, J. S. Rogers and G. H. Nelson.

12:30 p. m.—Luncheon at Biltmore hotel. Address of welcome by Mayor Walter A. Sims. Response by President Hugh K. Moore.

1:30 p. m.—Motor or bus ride to Stone Mountain.

4:30 p. m.—At Biltmore hotel, motion pictures: "Resources of Georgia," shown by Georgia Railway and Power company.

6:30 p. m.—Dinner, Biltmore hotel.

8 p. m.—Meeting at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. Showing of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and company's motion picture films.

Improvements In Missouri River Urged by Capper

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Advocating improvement of the upper Missouri river, Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, today told a board of army engineers that the economic development of the middle west demands immediate use of the entire waterway for transportation.

Navigability of the river, he said, would be a great boon to agriculture by lifting one of its great burdens, the high cost of transportation.

"Actual rates in effect today show that 1,000 bushels of wheat can be carried 1,000 miles by lake and ocean steamers for $20 to $30 and on modern river barges for $60 to $70 while the cost by railroad is $150 to $200," the board was told.

"The average cost to the Kansas farmer for shipping his wheat to Liverpool by way of the Great Lakes and New York is 40.1 cents per bushel. By way of the gulf ports, the cost is 37.5 cents and of this the rail charge takes 26.4 cents.

"We should provide a connected system of water transportation extending from the upper reaches of the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers to the gulf of Mexico and linked with a Great Lakes to Atlantic waterway."

SOLOMON ARZARABEL IS STRUCK BY CAR

Solomon Arzarabel, whose place of business is at 11 Central avenue, was knocked down by a hit-and-run motorist at Decatur street and Central avenue Saturday night.

He told Patrolmen Adair and Hood that the machine passed over his right thigh. He was badly skinned and bruised about the legs and hand, but refused to go to Grady hospital.

Witnesses told police that the automobile that hit the man did not have any lights.

Carbon dioxide is being used for refrigerating machines in public buildings because it is nonpoisonous and nonexplosive.

The Keys to Happiness.... and Joyous Days Together

IT'S a gift she will most appreciate—and one that will assure a host of happy days together.

In a dainty little jewel box that you can lay beside her plate on Christmas morning, are the magic keys to her car—the wonderful car that is waiting outside—a Studebaker Big Six Custom Brougham.

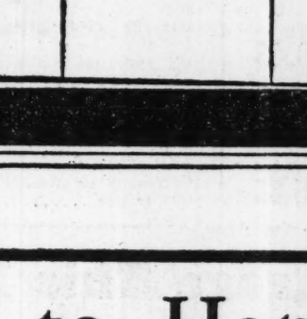

It is a car of custom quality throughout—low-swung gleaming body, finished in duotone lacquers—and the lines and lure of a custom creation. It has every luxury of custom appointment—restful, form-fitting seats, fine mohair upholstery, broadlace trim, Butler finish hardware, silk shades and silk toggle grips in a symphony of blended colors.

Powered by the quiet Studebaker Big Six L-head motor—which was first to beat the time of the crack Limiteds from New York to San Francisco—the Big Six Custom Brougham is equaled in rated power by only 7 American cars, which cost two to five times more!

Its price—$1785—is the lowest ever placed on a four-door Big Six enclosed car. Studebaker's One-Profit facilities alone make possible this outstanding value. Unequaled value has enabled the Studebaker Big Six to outsell every other car in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower.

Decide now to give her this glorious gift! The Keys to Happiness are ready for you, and we will deliver the car on Christmas Eve, Christmas morning, or any time you wish.

Under our Budget Payment Plan only a small down payment is necessary.

150 Workers To Begin Drive Monday To Raise $150,000 For Young Harris College

Solicitors Will Meet in Chamber of Commerce in Preparation for Canvass Tuesday.

More than 150 Atlanta men and women, from nearly every church in the district, will take the field this week in the campaign to raise an endowment fund of $150,000 for young Harris college, in the north Georgia mountains.

They will meet Monday night at 6 o'clock at the chamber of commerce building for a dinner and conference, when they will receive their prospect cards and final instructions. Canvassing will begin Tuesday and continue through the week.

The workers will be divided into three general divisions, and there will be sixteen teams of 10 members each. Results of the first day's work will be reported at a luncheon to be held at the chamber of commerce Wednesday at noon.

Subscriptions will be taken with payments to extend over a period of five years, to be paid as best suits the convenience of each subscriber.

For nearly a month, the trustees of young Harris college and the campaign committee have been at work upon details for the work. Colonel W. L. Peel, is general chairman, and associated with him in charge of various details are Joseph A. McCord and Thomas H. Scott, vice chairmen; George West and Addison Maupin, in charge of special subscriptions; Alva G. Maxwell, directing the organization; Charles S. Reid, chairman of speakers, and W. P. Bloodworth, in charge of church divisions.

Endorsed Officially.

The $150,000 endowment fund campaign has received the official endorsement of the North Georgia Methodist conference, which supervises the institution's work; the Atlanta Methodist Ministers association, the Public Campaign Endorsement committee and several other organizations. One of its ardent supporters is Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, at the head of the North Georgia conference. Personal effort is being given by a score or more of Young Harris graduates who have risen to success in Atlanta and who feel a debt of gratitude to the institution which gave them a start in life.

Nearly half the Methodist ministers of Atlanta are Young Harris graduates, and five of the presiding elders of this district obtained their education at this institution. The ministers have been enthusiastic in the support of the campaign, addressing their congregations in its behalf and aiding in the preparing of the prospect lists from the church rosters.

Fund Called Necessary.

"This endowment fund is absolutely necessary if Young Harris college is to continue on its present basis of providing education, at minimum cost, for boys and girls without means," said Dr. J. A. Sharp, the president, in addressing the executive committee.

"Without an endowment fund it cannot take its rightful place as an accredited junior college, and its graduates are handicapped in seeking teachers places. The income from the endowment, too, is needed to pay the teachers decent salaries and keep them from going elsewhere and to enable the school to keep its expenses within reach of families of limited means."

The appeal is being made principally among Methodists because Young Harris is a Methodist school, adopted years ago by the North Georgia conference. It has sent more than 100 young men into the ministry, and it now has 47 students who are studying for the ministry. Its present student body numbers 450, though there actually is room for only 350.

Peel Heads Campaign.

The campaign committee is headed by Colonel W. L. Peel, who has given years of work and time to Young Harris. He recently gave the school a $50,000 dormitory for boys, and a few days ago he led the list of advance subscribers to the fund by a gift of $5,000. George West is chairman of the special gifts committee, which is asking subscriptions of certain well-to-do citizens interested in education. Alva G. Maxwell, vice president of the Citizens and Southern bank and a graduate of Young Harris, is organization chairman, and Charles S. Reid has charge of the speakers' organization.

Headquarters have been opened at 607 Chamber of Commerce building, and the following officers and workers have been listed:

TWO MORE INDICTED IN LYNCHING CASE

Douglas, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The Coffee county grand jury in a special session here Friday returned an indictment against Tilson Smith, of Atkinson county, on a charge of murder in connection with the lynching of Dave Wright in Douglas, August 31. This makes the 17th man that has been indicted. Eleven of the men are serving sentences, and four are still confined in jail awaiting trial.

Smith was arrested several weeks ago and is now confined in the Ware county jail at Waycross. Dan and Bill Thigpen, who pleaded guilty last Wednesday, were sentenced to serve from 4 to 20 years in the state prison, and are now awaiting assignment to a prison camp.

The four defendants who are in jail will probably be tried the latter part of January when Judge Harry D. Reed will convene another special session of the Coffee county superior court.

Two of the men indicted and alleged to have participated in the lynching of Wright are still at large. They are Mike Tanner and D. B. Lott. The special session of the grand jury was attended by Judge Reed, who sentenced the 11 defendants, and Solicitor A. B. Spence, who conducted the prosecution of the convicted men.

Hotel Subscriptions To Macon Project Face Long Court Fight

Macon, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Judge Malcolm D. Jones, of Bibb superior court, today overruled a demurrer in the suit that was begun here some time ago to enforce collection of subscriptions to the Highlands Hotel corporation, a new tourist hotel project.

The suits were filed by Harry S. Strozier, attorney for the hotel corporation.

John R. L. Smith, representing J. A. Flournoy and other subscribers to the stock of the corporation, opposing the suit, filed a demurrer, in which he charged that the blue sky law of Georgia had not been complied with.

Judge Jones held that this law had been complied with and that the trial of the suits should proceed.

However, it will be a long time, apparently, before the trial of the case on its merits takes place, for plans have been made to carry the case on the point raised in the demurrer to the supreme court of Georgia for final adjudication. It is a test case upon which the success or failure of the hotel project depends.

MAN BELIEVED SUICIDE FOUND HANGING TO TREE

Cordele, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—An aged man, believed to be A. L. McInnis, probably of Miami, was found today hanging to a tree, dead, by the side of the highway a short distance north of Ashburn. His body was suspended with a leather strap from the limb and he had been dead some time.

It was believed that he had committed suicide, as the small amount of money and his other personal belongings were still on his person.

He was said to have sought employment in and around Ashburn for several days. Tourists coming into Cordele reported the discovery of his body. It was taken to Ashburn and an effort made to locate relatives.

LYONS MAN DIES OF SHOTS FIRED FROM AMBUSH

Lyons, Ga., December 4.—(Special.) W. O. Stroud, 20, who was shot from ambush while hunting in the Altamaha river swamp Tuesday, died today at a Vidalia hospital, where he underwent an operation.

George Morris is in jail, charged with shooting Stroud.

Alleged trespassing is reported to be at the bottom of the shooting.

Brenau Graduate Gives Record of 13 Children To Alumnae Association

Gainesville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—All previous family records in the history of Brenau college were broken recently when Mrs. R. L. Williams, of Juliette, Ga., who was Miss Lizzie Speir, and a graduate of '81, sent in a list of her 13 children, according to a report by the alumnae association. She writes:

R. L. Williams, age 41, graduate of Mercer university and now an attorney in Forsyth; Paul R., age 40, attended Mercer, now newspaper writer and salesman; Jack H., telegraph operator in Atlanta; Guy W., age 37, now deceased, was physician in Forsyth and captain in the world war; Helen V., age 38, graduate of Bessie Tift college, and teacher, now Mrs. T. Talked Like a Dutch Uncle

"My father is a physician and, naturally, I was opposed to all patent medicines. So when a friend told me to try MAYR'S for my stomach trouble, I laughed at him. Some months later, after my father told me he had used all known remedies in my case, I met my friend again and he talked to me like a Dutch uncle and finally induced me to try it. All my symptoms have now disappeared." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere. (adv.)

Capital News of Interest To Atlanta and Georgia

BY SAM W. SMALL.
(Special Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, December 4.—The department of commerce has sent Edward F. Gerrish, one of its examiners, to Ware and Chicopee in Massachusetts to consult with local officials concerning the removal of large cotton mill industries from those locations into the south. Today he is consulting with the mayor and officials in Chicopee, a considerable city, from which its principal industry, the Chicopee Manufacturing company, is about to remove its operations to southern locations.

Such removal would have serious economic effects upon the workers and the prosperity of the city. The conference is to seek some remedy, if one is possible, for the local conditions that are compelling these transfers of cotton industries to the south. The Otis company of Ware is moving south. It has closed down at Ware and the town is threatened with depopulation and trade aenemia. But cotton trade experts here do not see anything practical that can be done to stop such removals. The south, they say, is the natural, logical, economic locale for the greater bulk of cotton factoring.

The conference on livestock freight rates in the southwest, ordered by the interstate commerce commission will be held in Atlanta, at the Piedmont hotel, beginning at 10 a. m., December 10. Attorney-Examiner Keeler will represent the interstate commerce commission and will confer with representatives of the state in the southeastern territory which have not adopted the compromise scale agreed upon after extensive hearings in 1920. These compromise scales were published for both interstate and intrastate application, but some states have failed to apply them. Hence the renewed conference next week.

Probably we should favor the making of the loan to Rumania that undoubtedly Queen Marie came over here to promote. She did not come to ask for it outright, but rather to lay foundation for its favorable consideration when her king's cabinet will ask for it. Why the south and east should be interested in the subject is revealed by a report to the department of commerce from our representatives at Bucharest. Textiles have long constituted the most important group of imports into Rumania and among textile imports cotton sheetings have always held an important place. Consul Child says that in spite of the development of a local industry, imports of cotton sheetings have shown a steady increase from year to year. In 1921 and 1922 the United States was the principal source of the Rumanian imports of gray sheetings, but has since been displaced in that market by Japan, Czecho-Slovakia and other European countries. Japan is now the leading source from which these imports are drawn, much of its gain having been made at the expense of American goods.

German-British Industry Heads Hold Conference

London, December 4.—(AP)—Mutual expressions of satisfaction were exchanged at the conclusion today of the extended conference between German and British industrialists, it being felt that progress had been made and that great future possibilities were open for cooperation.

Reports that the negotiations might bring about an Anglo-German industrial combine against other countries, such as the United States, elicited an emphatic official disclaimer. This came jointly from Sir Max Muspratt, vice president of the Federation of British industry, and Dr. Carl Duisberg, German privy councillor, and declared:

"Clearly and emphatically the question of international cartels or combines has not been discussed by the conference of Anglo-German industrialists, nor has any suggestion of combined action by British and German industry against the industry of any other country been mentioned or considered."

The conference continued today the discussion of the general European economic situation, and decided to renew its investigations with a view to the next meeting.

ST. MARYS BRIDGE HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Brunswick, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The new bridge over the St. Marys river on the Coastal highway connecting Georgia and Florida has been completed, the contractors putting the finishing touches on the structure yesterday, which was erected at a cost of approximately $150,000.

The bride was built jointly by the highway departments of Georgia and Florida and its construction was under the supervision of the latter. It has been under course of construction for a year.

Although the bridge is complete, it will be two months before it will be opened to the public for use as the road to the bridge, on the Georgia side is not yet completed, although excellent headway is now being made and it is hoped to have the stretch opened early in February, thus avoiding what is now the worst stretch of road over the entire highway, that through the St Marys swamp, which will be discontinued as soon as the new road is opened.

The completion of the new St. Marys river bridge is the last fresh water stream to be spanned over the entire distance from Savannah to the Florida line. It was only a few years ago that it was necessary to use a ferry over practically every stream between the two cities, now the Ogeechee, the Altamaha, in two places, the Satilla and the St. Marys are all bridged. The ferry, which has been in operation at Woodbine Landing for many years, and which has frequently handled as many as 300 cars a day, will be discontinued when the new route is opened.

As soon as a definite date for the bridge celebration is decided upon a special committee from the Brunswick Board of Trade will arrange a program. It is expected to invite governors and highway boards of five states to be present.

RITES FOR O. J. LILLY HELD IN GAINESVILLE

Gainesville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Colonel Oscar J. Lilly, who died following injuries received Tuesday when his car crashed into a telephone post on East Washington street, were held at the home on North Pryor street Wednesday afternoon, Rev. D. W. Key, ducting the services. Interment was in new Alta Vista cemetery.

Members of the Gainesville Bar association formed the honorary escort at the funeral.

:: MAGNIFICENT FELTON HOME BOUGHT BY HAY ::

Changes Hands at Macon

BY G. W. GRIFFIN.

Macon, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—When Former Alderman P. L. Hay and his wife and their daughters return from New York, where they went today, they will begin preparations to occupy the Georgia avenue mansion that Mr. Hay acquired yesterday from the estate of the late Judge William H. Felton. It is said to be one of the finest old ante-bellum homes in Dixie, containing 24 rooms and built of the finest of woods obtainable in the days of its construction.

It took seven months to build the residence. William B. Johnston, pioneer resident of Macon, took his bride to Europe and to Italy to get ideas and art to put into the handsome Georgia avenue structure, some eighty years ago. The home was fashioned after an Italian villa and was built of brick, with partitions and walls also of brick. The original cost in those days was said to have been more than $100,000.

There is a lot of history surrounding this old home. Jefferson Davis at one time spoke from the portico of the mansion, the crowd assembling on the large lawn in front.

Once when the northern troops were advancing on Macon—the war ending when General Wilson captured this city—the enemy's guns were trained on the cupola of the mansion on the hill. The shells fell short of their goal and buried great holes in the earth some distance away, these holes remaining unfilled until a short time ago.

In addition to the commodious quarters for the family, with high ceilings to every room and the wood work being in rose wood and mahogany and black walnut—all solid, with inlaid floors, there were quarters for the servants.

Before the war between the states there was an acquarium at the rear of the home, which gained the admiration of everyone who passed the premises.

Two huge doors for the front of the residence were too large. They cost $1,000 each. Mr. Johnston, rather than change the design of the entrance to admit the doors, or to alter the doors, gave them to a negro congregation that was building a church on Oglethorpe street. The doors are still at the entrance of that church. The costliest part of the church.

At the death of Mr. Johnston the old historic home passed into the hands of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Felton, and then upon her death and the death of Judge Felton a few weeks ago, William H. Felton, Jr., became the only heir, who sold it because it is too large for his family.

Free Christmas Gifts Await

:: SUPER-DOLLS AND COASTERS YOURS ::

You in Constitution Offer

Exactly three weeks until Christmas!

Everybody's busy shopping and providing Santa Claus for the youngsters. Why not arrange to secure a portion of your gifts for Little Brother and Little Sister without cost?

The answer is The Constitution's phenomenal offer of free "Vanity Flossie" dolls and "Constitution Express" roller coaster wagons. You can win one or both of these super-toys without spending a penny and by devoting only a few hours of easy and pleasant activity to the winning process.

In this issue you'll find two full-page advertisements giving full and complete details of the unparalleled offers of free supertoys that will bring joy to the hearts of that boy and that girl of yours. Turn to these ads and read them carefully. Scores of persons already are engaged in the game, and there's plenty of time and room for you to enter, as the field is unlimited.

"Vanity Flossie" is the finest, most durable and attractive dolly you've ever seen. Her main feature—one found only in dolls of the very finest workmanship and most expensive material—is that she's equipped with soft rubber arms, making her as cuddy and adorable as a real baby. The fingers are pliant, so that the little mother can make her hold a cup, a mirror or any object she desires.

In addition, "Vanity Flossie" is 19 inches high; has big blue eyes that "flirt" and roll and wink and go to sleep, and when she wakes up she calls "Mamma." She has human-like, golden hair and a dainty wardrobe, and in every way is the queen of all dolls—far superior to any offered by other newspapers and so expensive that if you bought her at retail price she'd make a big dent in your pocketbook.

The "Constitution Express" is the last word in roller coasters. Many of them now are in use in Atlanta and Georgia that were given away last Christmas, and one man has reported to The Constitution that his son has had one for two years, and that it's just as strong and just as swift today as it was when it was new.

"The only difference," the man said, "is that the paint has been scratched off, for my boy has kept it almost constantly in use, and I myself have used it quite a lot in working in the garden and hauling things about the lot. You can say for me that it's the most durable and magnificent toy I've ever seen or heard of. I'm out to win another for my youngest son."

The "Constitution Express" is the sturdiest and swiftest thing on four wheels for the youngsters. It's equipped with big, heavy balloon tires—a novel feature and an expensive one: it has roller bearings throughout, and the tough wood of which it is made is reinforced throughout with steel. You simply can't break them down or tear them up

Comparisons of these two magnificent Christmas toy offerings are invited by The Constitution. They're on display at The Constitution building at Alabama and Forsyth streets. Drop in and see them. You're sure to want one or both.

As stated above, full details on how you may win these magnificent toys are supplied in full-page advertisements in this issue.

A word to the wise is sufficient. Turn to the ads and get busy.

LEAGUE FACING BIG PROBLEMS

Meeting Opening Monday To Take Up Troublesome Questions Delayed From September.

Geneva, December 4.—The reorganized council of the League of Nations will meet here Monday for the first business meeting since Germany became a member, confronted by an array of problems upon whose solution probably will depend the future standing of the league in world affairs.

Last September the council adjourned hurriedly to escape these same questions. The long fight preceding Germany's admission to the council had shaken the league to its foundations. Council members were anxious to escape the surcharged atmosphere at Geneva and to allow the situation to settle down.

Before adjourning the council failed to attend to its customary duty of making effective resolutions adopted by the assembly. This business of last September therefore awaits Monday's meeting and the council must face questions now which it was considered wiser to postpone for the sake of league amities three months ago.

Important Matters Up.

With Germany a member, the council must now undertake to guide the trend of European post-war international affairs. Important questions are on the council's official agenda, such as the summoning of a world economic conference, a world arms conference, regulation of the opium and white slave traffic, minorities, mandates, etc., but no secret is made here of the fact that the real business before members of the council will be dealt in private informal conferences among the foreign ministers of the great powers.

The leading powers are represented on the council by their foreign ministers, Briand of France, Stresemann of Germany, Chamberlain of Great Britain, and other ministers of the Locarno group will be here. In personal conferences over dinner tables and in hotel suites, by twos and threes and in groups, these men will meet during the council session and strive to agree on measures to promote the peace and well-being of Europe.

Sincere supporters of the league here see no anomoly in these secret conferences. If the cause of peace is advanced in secret meetings when diplomats are gathered ostensibly for a league session, friends of the league will welcome the means as well as the ends.

Hope for Steps for Peace.

It is hoped in some quarters that these dinner table and country inn conversations may result in another such step toward better European international understanding as was taken at Locarno and at Thoiry.

Brazil and Spain withdrew from the council and the league as a result of conflict over the terms under which Germany should be given a council seat. At the session of the council Monday an attempt will be made to repair the league's prestige resulting from these withdrawals.

The council as now composed has the following permanent members: England, France, Germany, Italy and Japan. Columbia, Chile, San Salvador, China, Holland, Poland, Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia and Belgium hold the non-permanent seats.

The formal meeting of the council will probably last about ten days. It is expected that the council will decide to hold its March meeting in Berlin.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 148-N Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an opera-

COOLIDGE DENIES WOOD TO RESIGN

Washington, December 4.—Reports that Governor General Leonard Wood, of the Philippines, is to resign have no basis in fact, it was said on behalf of President Coolidge at the white house today, but it was explained that Wood is expected to return to the United States next year for a rest.

Recent reports were to the effect that Wood would resign and Senator Wadsworth, of New York, recently defeated, would go to the islands as governor.

It was learned here today that Carmi Thompson, of Ohio, who recently made a special investigation of conditions in the Philippines for the president, is expected here for a conference with Coolidge.

General Wood has been ill recently, but the president is advised that he is recuperating and that he should be able to visit the United States next year. The president does not think anyone should stay for as long a period as five years, as Wood has done, in such a tropical climate as that of the islands without a visit of several months to temperate climates to which he is accustomed, it was said. Coolidge considers Wood's continued stay in the Philippines as showing rare devotion to duty.

NEW YORK MOVES TO CLOSE NIGHT CLUBS AT 3 A. M.

New York, December 4.—Broadway's high jinx at dawn are giving the metropolis a bad name, church people told the board of aldermen when a bill to close night clubs at 3 a. m. was reported for passage.

But visitors are skylarking as much as residents, they added. The trade of the out-of-towners is what keeps the cabarets open until dawn, one churchman said; New Yorkers know when to go to bed. The closing bill was in-

PUBLISHER, DIVORCED BY WIFE, WEDS STAR

Chicago, December 4.—Mrs. Elizabeth N. Quirk, Chicago, obtained a divorce from James R. Quirk, editor and publisher of the Photoplay Magazine, October 9, this year, it was revealed today by Quirk's attorneys. The divorce was granted on a charge of adultery.

Quirk was married to May Allison, film star, in Los Angeles, November 15.

PULPIT AND STAGE WILL JOIN HANDS

New York, December 4.—(AP)—Organization of the Church and Drama association, through which Protestants, Catholics and Jews may join hands in an effort to turn the influence of stage and screen into spiritual and cultural channels, was announced today by the committee on drama of the Federal Council of Churches.

The aim of the association was given, as follows:

"Recognizing the power of drama to influence human ideals and conduct, we believe it to be not only our obligation but our privilege to work for a wider appreciation and support of dramatic art as a creative force and to seek its employment for educational ends and the pursuit of social and spiritual culture."

In making the announcement, the Protestant drama committee made public an abstract of an address to be delivered by its chairman, Dr. George Reid Andrews, at the meeting of the executive committee of the federal council Wednesday in Minneapolis.

Dr. Andrews will tell of results already obtained in the theatrical world by his committee, including prevention, by cooperation with motion picture interests, of unfair representation of Protestant churches and caricatures of Protestant pastors on the screen.

PEA AND BEAN CROP LARGE IN HANCOCK

Sparta, Ga., December 4.—(Special)—probably the largest crop of cow peas and velvet beans ever raised in Hancock county are being harvested this fall and most of the crop will be held un next spring when prices are much higher than at this time of the year. The farmers are being instructed in marketing their products by County Agent Truitt and, as a result, are receiving better prices for all of their produce than before.

A., B. & A. SCORED FOR 3 ACCIDENTS

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—In extremely sharp language, the chief of the interstate commerce commission's bureau of safety, W. P. Borland, today called the management of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad to account for accidents which have resulted recently in the death and injury of employees.

The particular accident under investigation took place on October 27, when a freight train was derailed at Deerhurst, Ala., resulting in the death of one person, and the injury of three others, the cause of which the safety bureau said, was due to bad track conditions on a section of the railroad where other accidents had recently occurred.

"Three fatal derailments on the same division within a distance of 28 miles and within a period of 13 months" the Borland report said, "resulting in the death of five employees, and the injury of others, all of the accidents being due more or less directly to track conditions so bad as to be obvious to the most casual observer, constitutes a record which is not to be envied. A management responsible for such conditions, placing the lives of its employees and the traveling public in continual jeopardy cannot be too strongly condemned. It is to be hoped that the conditions disclosed in these three investigations will be remedied in time to prevent other accidents of a similar nature."

EXPRESS AGENT URGES SHIPPERS TO SHOP EARLY

Atlantans are urged to do their Christmas shopping and shipping early in order to insure prompt delivery of packages sent by express, by R. K. Smith, general agent of the American Railway Express company.

Mr. Smith said all packages should be carefully wrapped and addresses should be in ink or stencil.

DISTRICT EDITORS TO FIGHT MALARIA

Cordele, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The third district editors, meeting today in Cordele, set as a task for next year a strong campaign against malaria throughout the congressional district. The campaign in most counties probably will take the form of advocacy of the Ellis health law, although no specified form was laid down. It became a newspaper task through a resolution presented and adopted.

Miss Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna News, presided. Some 20 visitors took part in the discussion. With Miss Woodard, of Vienna, and Charles E. Brown, editor of the Cordele Dispatch, joint hosts, the party was entertained at luncheon at noon.

The next session will be held with Editor and Mrs. John M. Anglin, at Lumpkin.

Who's Back of ATLANTA?

"Every dollar will bring big dividends"

THE past ten months have demonstrated beyond question that advertising is profitable to Atlanta. 136 new concerns have brought more than seven million dollars in new payrolls, giving employment to more than forty six hundred people.

Think what this means to every citizen of Atlanta, whether he is a banker, a merchant, an owner of real estate—or whatever he may be.

Think what it will mean to you—and to every other Atlantan—to carry on, to expand this great work.

A million dollar fund is to be raised, to be invested over a period of three years. The investment will be called for in installments spread over the three years.

Every dollar invested this year has brought you big dividends. You know what your share should be of the million dollar program. Invest the full amount; let it be the measure of your standing in the community.

JAM OF LEGISLATION IS FACING CONGRESS ON EVE OF SESSION

APPROPRIATIONS AND HANG-OVERS GET RIGHT OF WAY

Other Measures Likely To Fail of Enactment, But Fight for Action on Some of Them Likely.

LITTLE HOPE SEEN FOR FARM RELIEF

Tax Measure Also Likely To Be Blocked; Republicans Fear Fight for Extra Session.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, December 4.—Congress comes back here Monday to begin work on a legislative calendar chock full of so many controversial issues that nearly all of them, outside of the annual supply bills and one or two hangover measures, will still be on the calendar when congress quits on March 4—if it does quit.

As a matter of fact, the possibility that it will be prevented from winding up business on March 4, by a filibuster of members angry over this or that omission, or by those with political ends in mind, is the chief worry of republican leaders as they prepare for the opening Monday.

An extra session would mean, chiefly, that the movement to oust Senators-elect Vare, of Pennsylvania and Smith, of Illinois, would immediately get under way, as the new congress comes in after March 4, and it might mean any number of other developments distasteful to the administration.

Appropriations First.

With this possibility threatening, republican leaders will make every effort from the start to proceed swiftly with passage of appropriation bills, as those are absolutely necessary, and will keep everything else but essential matters in the background.

There is only one bolt that might be thrown into the works at the outset to hold up an auspicious start for the republican leaders. During the last few days republicans have expressed fear privately that democrats may seek to challenge the qualifications of their new senator from Maine, Arthur R. Gould, when he presents himself to take the oath of office, thus throwing the whole controversy which later will involve Vare and Smith into the forefront at this time. By such a move, democrats would lay the groundwork for action against Vare and Smith later. However, democrats have given no indication openly that they will start any action against Gould.

Both houses will meet Monday, go through the usual formalities and adjourn out of respect to Senators Fernald, of Maine and Cummins, of

Music Covers Bold Attempt At Jail Break

Discordant Notes Entering Harmonica Marathon Block Plans.

Pineville, Ky., December 4.—(AP)—Discordant notes entering a harmonica marathon as the musician paused to catch his breath in jail here last night caused disbanding of a perfectly good orchestra and incidentally frustration of a jail delivery.

Early in the night, Charles Wilson, deputy jailer, was attracted by the continued concert of the harmonica soloist who after exhausting his repertoire of mountain folk songs savagely assaulted modern jazz without a rest.

The jailer liked the music, but he disliked the discord that he detected as notes of the harmonica faded when the musician gasped for breath.

Investigation disclosed the orchestra composed of two men. One using deft violin strokes with a file for a bow had played through three bars and was on the fourth, while his accompanist with the harmonica had played dozens of tunes on the harmonica.

Boyd Arnett, charged with stealing chickens, and Cecil Thompson, charged with false swearing, composed the orchestra. Four steel saws and a window weight were the instruments of one of the musicians.

MARIE'S WELCOME FAILS TO DEVELOP

Train Delayed by Rain, Reception Crowd Leaves Station, But Queen Finds King There.

Bucharest, Rumania, December 4.—Queen Marie, of Rumania, who was received with lavish official honors and popular demonstrations in the United States, nearly missed any reception whatever when she returned Saturday to the capital of her own country.

Owing to a misunderstanding with railroad officials, only porters and employees were at the station in Bucharest when the royal train drew in.

Premier Averescu and other government officials, who had come to the station during the forenoon to greet their sovereign, had departed with the understanding that Queen Marie and her party would not arrive until mid-afternoon.

Royal Train Delayed.

Heavy rainstorms Friday delayed the royal train. A large crowd of Rumanians, including high dignitaries, politicians and state officials gathered at the station this morning, but a bulletin issued by the railroad announced that the train would be three hours late. Premier Averescu and others were advised to return at 2 p. m.

Making up time, Marie's train approached the station at 12:30 p. m., with the platforms practically de-

POSTAL RECEIPTS SET NEW RECORD FOR NOVEMBER

Increase Made of 26 Per Cent Over Total for Same Month of Last Year.

Giving concrete evidence of steady, substantial gains in prosperity, postal receipts for the month of November shattered all previous records for that month, according to figures released Saturday by E. K. Large, postmaster.

In addition to topping all previous Novembers, the month came close to the record of $377,788, set in October, when the greatest amount of receipts of any month so far during this year was announced.

November receipts showed an increase of 26 per cent over figures for the same month last year, as follows: November this year, $368,593; November last year, $292,771.12; increase, $75,821.88.

Only one other month in the history of the local postoffice has eclipsed November of this year in the gain over the same month of the previous year. This was September of 1918, when postage was stepped up from 2 to 3 cents.

Still greater gains are expected this month, due to the fact that Christmas mailing is in full swing.

GUN "CAN'T SHOOT," BUT IT KILLS MAN WHO THOUGHT SO

Rockingham, N. C., December 4.—(AP)—A pistol that "wouldn't shoot anyhow" caused the death of James Hamer here today when it was discharged while being cleaned.

Frank McNair was cleaning the revolver and Hamer was standing close by. The age of the pistol brought forth the remark by Hamer that it would not shoot.

A few seconds later he fell dead with a bullet through his heart.

A coroner's jury found he met death accidentally.

DEMOCRATS SEEK AID IN TAX CUT

G. O. P. Leaders Invited To Join in Non-Partisan Bill To Provide Reasonable Cuts in Levy.

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—On the eve of the convening of congress, Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking democrat of the senate finance committee, tonight formally invited republican members of the house and senate to join with the democrats in making "the reasonable reduction in internal revenue taxes which the constantly mounting and now gigantic surplus in the treasury fully warrants."

A statement which said that Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking democrat of the house committee on ways and means, had approved of the invitation, declared it was not the purpose of the democrats to attempt to make a partisan tax reduction bill.

Democratic opposition to the president's plan of "rebates and credits, which plan now faces certain defeat is not partisan opposition," Senator Simmons said, "but is founded upon principle and in response to the demand of a sound and wise fiscal policy."

"It is not the intention of the democratic leaders to 'scrape the very bottom of the treasury'" he continued. "but they are convinced that the administration's political piecemeal policy of reduction and rebate year by year, ought to be discarded once for all, and the subject dealt with in an honest and nonpartisan way."

The democratic view was set forth as being that the general structure of the present revenue act need not be disturbed, but that tax reduction can be effected by amending certain rates and repealing certain provisions imposing taxes that should be repealed in full.

70 PER CENT GAIN IN 1926 BUILDING HERE

Eleven Months of Present Year Far Outstrip All of 1925 in Building Permits.

$17,400,334 TOTAL FOR YEAR TO DATE

Permits for November Show Gain of Over 100 Per Cent Over Month Last Year.

Atlanta building permits for the first 11 months of this year passed those of the entire year of 1925 by $6,696,776, it was announced Saturday by Building Inspector J. E. Bowen, respective totals being $17,400,334, against $10,403,558.

Total value of permits issued in November of this year were $913,507 as against $442,856 for the corresponding month last year. This represents a gain of more than 100 per cent, or $470,651.

Permits for November of this year reached 298, while those for November of last year totaled 314, indicating, according to Mr. Bowen, that Atlantans are constructing more valuable buildings than ever before.

Home facilities for 206 additional families are provided in the new houses to be constructed in accordance with permits issued during November. Ninety-one frame dwellings representing an outlay of $326,700 will be built and 22 frame dwelling duplexes. Six apartment houses at a cost of $202,200 and housing 71 families also were authorized.

Permits issued for the first 11 months of this year follow:

January, $1,438,998; February, $5,781,575; March, $1,117,491; April, $936,622; May, $2,159,022; June, $993,539; July, $1,191,151; August, $760,086; September, $984,236; October, $1,079,107, and November, $913,507.

The total number of building permits issued so far this year is 3,845.

RUSSIAN WOMAN, ENVOY TO MEXICO, BARRED AT CUBA

Havana, Cuba, December 4.—"A woman is only a woman," said the Cuban immigration authorities, unconsciously paraphrasing Kipling when Madame Kolontai, Russian ambassador to Mexico, arrived here en route to her new post.

Despite her official standing, Madame Kolontai was forced to remain aboard her steamer in accordance with the Cuban law which forbids unescorted women to land here.

NAVY FORCED DOHENY LEASE, ROBISON SAYS

Urged Magnate To Make Offer on Pearl Harbor Contract, Admiral Testifies for Defense.

WITNESS OMITS NAMES OF POWERS

Wilbur Under Subpoena To Appear Monday and Explain Order to Robison on Testimony.

BY PHILLIP KINSLEY.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, December 4.—The defense played its trump card in the Fall-Doheny conspiracy trial today.

Gagged by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and ordered to talk by Justice A. A. Hoehling, though with names of other powers deleted, Admiral John K. Robison, retired, reluctantly disclosed that high secret of state which led the navy department in 1921 to rush into a contract with Edward L. Doheny to build fuel oil storage tanks at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

This was, in substance, that Admiral Gleaves, at that time in command of the Asiatic fleet, had reported on the naval strength and maneuvers of another power (Japan not mentioned specifically) and had informed this government of possibly military operations against this country then impending.

Put Oil in Hawaii.

While government counsel branded this as "ridiculous," yet no one in the courtroom could doubt the sincerity of Ralston's testimony on this point. It was what led, he said, to the grand offer of Doheny to come to the defense of his country and put oil in Hawaii, the strategic point of naval defense, without profit to himself.

The flaw in this, according to Owen J. Roberts, government special counsel, is that Doheny did make a profit and in later dealings drove a hard bargain with the government in which he expected to make a great fortune.

The government found support for the conspiracy charge in another part of the Robinson testimony today when Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, was shown as writing the royalties in the supplemental bid of Doheny, that of December 11, 1922, with the navy department finding itself unable to make a better bargain than that evidently agreed upon between Fall and Doheny in some undisclosed conference.

Robison, in other words, went far toward destroying the Fall alibi in this case, still crediting Doheny with patriotic motives in the beginning of the oil negotiations.

Secretary Wilbur is expected to testify Monday morning, when the Church of England Status Discussed by Young Briton

(Editor's Note—Thomas Cadett, of The London Times, is the holder of the Walter Hines Page newspaper fellowship, and is spending a year in America under the terms of the fellowship. He has temporarily joined the staff of The Constitution. Mr. Cadett has served on the staffs of The San Francisco Chronicle and The Chicago Daily News. The Constitution was selected, without its knowledge, as the representative southern newspaper on which he is to serve in getting a national acquaintance with American conditions.)

BY THOMAS CADETT.

The position of the established church in England today is one of the most interesting social uncertainties of the country. Indeed, the only certain thing about its present condition is that it must change. It is at the parting of the ways.

It may well be that eventually modern youth would in any case have begun to question many of the things that its forbears accepted without inquiry. It was the world war, however which threw the first intense strain on the religious homes. How the strain was met, whether the church failed, succeeded or achieved mere mediocrity is a matter for individual judgment and opinion. My personal view is that any great test is a great opportunity, and that the church as a whole failed to take advantage of the opportunity that was offered.

On religious matters or opinions no man ought to speak for others, but facts are facts. From the very beginning of the war, the British clergy approved the British attitude. It was a righteous struggle against the forces of darkness, against the enemy of civilization, they said. Every man in uniform was given such encouragement. And then, to reinforce the conviction that the church had given its seal of approval, the bishops promptly forbade the clergy to enter into combatant service. A chaplain was, of course, as much a part of each unit as the medical officer, and many of them were men of high gallantry. But the principle that young and able men should be compelled to take a back seat in anything but the spiritual side of the struggle seemed to some of us either a mystery or a business capable of an explanation as simple as it was unpleasant. In the French army the priest was a soldier, too, and if, after all the bloody dreariness of his temporal duties, there remained any shred of energy or enthusiasm for his spiritual task, here was a man indeed; a man whose value was infinitely enhanced.

"Faith" Is the Answer.

It is perhaps hardly fair to blame the church for being unable to answer all the questions that the war awoke in the hearts of those who fought it. But, being human, we asked the unanswerable, and the one word "faith" was their reply. It was the only reply possible. Many of us, I think, found that the word began to lose its meaning; if we could achieve hope and some measure of charity, we were doing well. But if the country ever needed a spiritual message, and if the church existed at

MATE AND WOMAN COMPANION SHOT BY PURSUING WIFE

El Dorado Pair Chased for Several Miles by Irate Spouse and Both Seriously Injured.

Shreveport, La., December 4.—(AP)—T. L. Smith, 45, said to be a wealthy and prominent citizen of El Dorado, Ark., and his companion, Mrs. L. R. Simmons, also of El Dorado, were shot by Smith's wife in front of a drug store at Vivian, 30 miles north of here, today, according to police reports. Their condition was reported as serious.

The shooting ended after an exciting chase of the pair by Mrs. Smith for several miles on the Shreveport-Vivian road. Mrs. Smith used a pistol. One bullet struck Smith in the mouth, fracturing the jaw. After shooting her husband, Mrs. Smith turned the weapon upon Mrs. Simmons, who fell with a bullet wound in the breast and another in the neck. Mrs. Lurena Nixon, of Shreveport, who was with Smith and Mrs. Simmons, was unhurt.

The shooting occurred just as Smith pulled his car into the curb in front of the store. A moment later Mrs. Smith dashed into the curb and leaped out of her machine, brandishing the pistol. Smith jumped from his car and rushed toward her in an effort to prevent the shooting, but he was too late, for the infuriated woman shot him at close range, and turned the weapon upon the woman whom she accused of alienating her husband's affections.

Town Marshal Land said Mrs. Smith told him after the shooting that she shot Smith and Mrs. Simmons because of their alleged relations lasting over a period of two years.

Mrs. Smith was fashionably dressed, the officer said. Her husband is said to own a drug store at El Dorado, and to have large oil interests.

Marshal Land said that Mrs. Nixon told him that Mrs. Smith passed the car occupied by Smith, Mrs. Simmons and herself on the Mooringsport road and as she did so, Smith recognized her. "There goes my wife," he said. Mrs. Nixon, according to the officer, begged to get out of the car, but Smith would not let her. The chase followed, ending in the shooting at Vivian.

ROSITA RENARD WITH SYMPHONY

Famous Chilean Pianist To Appear With Orchestra in Next Concert on December 12.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Rosita Renard, pianist, is to be the guest artist with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra in their third concert of the current series, at Loew's Grand theater next Sunday afternoon.

Miss Renard, a native of Chile, has won for herself a reputation as a pianist which ranks in the forefront of all concert artists in this section of the country. Coming to Georgia several years ago to join the musical faculty of Lucy Cobb college, at Athens, she has since added to her duties there teaching and studio work in Atlanta, making this city her part-time home as she divides her time here and in the university city to the northeast.

Miss Renard is a remarkable performer as a woman pianist. Her power of interpretation and the confident approach to her instrument are almost masculine in their strength and there are few pianists of either sex who display the complete technical mastery over the instrument that is her's. With this power, she combines a sympathetic understanding of the finer shades of the master compositions that, conversely, is peculiarly feminine in its character.

Next Sunday Miss Renard will play Liszt's Concert in E Flat for orchestra and piano, accompanied by the

Kiss and Grow Beautiful, Say Paris Doctors

Osculation Urged To Replace Hand Shaking on Part of Women.

Paris, December 4.—"Kiss, instead of shaking hands," a group of French hygiene authorities have advised women.

Kissing, they pointed out, develops the facial muscles and improves the contours of the face.

"Kiss and grow beautiful," the scientists proposed, advocating also the rolling of the eyes and other coquettish movements as beautifiers.

Because of the sensitiveness of their countrymen and women on the subject of morals, the French scientists insist their names be kept secret.

"We exercise all our other muscles," pointed out one doctor, seriously. "Why not those of the face? What pleasanter form of exercise than osculation?"

SENTRIES GUARD FOREIGN QUARTER

General Walkout Due Today and Barricades Put at British and French Concessions.

Hankow, December 4, (2 a. m.)—(AP)—Sentries walked their posts behind barricades around the British and French concessions of Hankow in the early morning hours today, awaiting developments of the general strike of employees of foreigners. Radical leaders of labor a week ago ordered the strike to begin today, as an anti-foreign demonstration by Chinese.

Sailors and marines from foreign warships were on guard in the foreign concessions. Their ships, five American gunboats and one British destroyer rode quietly at their anchorage in the Yangtse river, an occasional signal light blinking from their masthead.

Uniformed pickets of the strikers halted traffic through the former German concession, now controlled by Chinese, thus preventing traffic moving through important streets of the foreign area.

It is hoped that the arrival of high officials from Canton, expected within a few days, will produce a marked improvement in the condition of unrest. Local officials of the Cantonese government have little influence with the radicals of the striking element.

After a week in which union leaders and pickets virtually dominated the Hankow situation, the Cantonese government authorities acted yesterday in an effort to end industrial strikes. A council of eight was formed, with two representatives each of the nationalist government, the Kuomintang political party which dominates it, the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, and the labor unions to fix wage scales.

The government officials announced that they hoped to end all strikes after the council reported, which they expected would be within five days. Thereafter they would officially discourage all labor agitation.

Thirty strikes of the 56 begun since November 1, have been settled. Most of the settlements were made by foreign firms, which agreed to increased wages. The majority of the unsettled strikes are against Chinese firms.

MILLION DOLLAR FORWARD ATLANTA CAMPAIGN LAUDED

Jesse H. Neal Draws Vivid Picture of Assured City Growth If Plans Succeed.

PRESIDENTS' CLUB HOST AT DINNER

Absence of 'Blatant Bombast' Strength of City Advertising, Leaders of Drive Told.

BY BEN COOPER.

Atlanta—three syllables to conjure with in the minds of captains of industry and lords of commerce. Atlanta—a great, throbbing city of half a million population and an industrial and commercial system to vie with great New York and Chicago.

This was the picture drawn Saturday night by Jesse H. Neal, noted advertising expert, and other speakers, at a special "Forward Atlanta" dinner of the Presidents' club at the Biltmore hotel. And the picture will come true, Mr. Neal predicted, if the million-dollar three-year national advertising campaign projected by local civic patriots becomes a reality.

Cumulative results of scientifically directed community advertising over a span of years will amount to far more than would at first be thought, Mr. Neal declared. For, he said, imagination, backed by optimism and the unconquerable will to achieve, make a city great, and in the million dollar campaign these three attributes stand uppermost.

City Building Counts.

"Community advertising" is a misnomer for what Atlanta plans," Mr. Neal said. "The advertising part of the plan is only a minor consideration, for it is the scientific city building which counts. Just to put Atlanta's name before the public will not suffice. You must impress upon the prospective Atlantan the facts which will most attract him. The correct name for your "Forward Atlanta" campaign is "Community or Municipal Direction."

There has not been in the last campaign, nor will there be in the present one, any blatant bombast. It is merely the sticking to facts and the sending of a business message to business men that counts, Mr. Neal told the presidents of Atlanta's civic bodies and commercial and industrial organizations. "And this Atlanta has done and will do."

Pointing to a model sloop used as a table decoration at the speaker's decoration as the "ship of state of Atlanta," Mr. Neal compared advertising to seamanship. "When the wind dies down, the mariner does not shorten sail, but spreads wide the canvas to catch the vagrant breeze. Likewise, when business dies down temporarily, the thing to do is to crowd on sail by advertising, and speed on to the goal," he declared.

In the way of showing what industries Atlanta can attract, Mr. Neal pointed to deposits of rich minerals and other natural resources of this section, stating that factories here could turn out cotton mill machin-

"Hester" World Authority

80-YEAR-OLD MAN FILLS UNIQUE COMMERCIAL NICHE

On All Cotton Markets

BY MEIGS O. FROST.

An 80-year-old man comes to his desk every morning at 10 o'clock in New Orleans to start his day's work. The result of that work is felt all over the world, wherever a bale of cotton is raised or bought or sold. That man is probably better known internationally than any other man in Dixie.

He is Colonel Henry G. Hester, these past 56 years secretary and superintendent of the New Orleans cotton exchange. He is the man who founded and sends all over the world the weekly "Hester's Report," without which no man in the cotton business would think of doing business any more than the captain of a ship would think of sailing from port without chart and compass and sextant. He has been with the New Orleans cotton exchange since its birth; he will be with it until his death. And now, for the first time in his long career he has submitted to being interviewed.

Two words mean all the world in the cotton market:

"Hester says—"

Every Friday of every week of the year, the wires and cables carry all over the world Colonel Hester's report of the cotton brought into sight, of the cotton classified as "mill takings." And all over the world men ask: "What does Hester say?" that day.

For what Hester says is official. He is the only individual whose unchecked report on cotton the United States government accepts as official. Time after time Uncle Sam has sent his emissaries down to New Orleans asking the help of that one-time newspaper reporter whose word is awaited by cotton men everywhere, all the time.

A one-time newspaper reporter. He was 24 when the cotton men of New Orleans, founding the New Orleans cotton exchange, took him from his newspaper run. All the trained reporter's passion for accuracy is his.

"All my life I have gone on the belief that two plus two equals four," he says. "I have seen hundreds who spent their lives trying to make two plus two equal three and three-quarters or four and one-quarter. But when they seem to do that, I know something is wrong."

In 56 years during which Colonel Hester has been the unquestioned authority on cotton, he could have played the market and made millions. But in those 56 years he has never

National Italian Theater

:: DUCE SEEKING STAGE LEADERSHIP ::

Given Mussolini's Backing

Rome, December 4.—(AP)—Italy is planning a national theater, with Pirandello as its undisputed director, which it is hoped will excel the theaters of Moscow, Paris and Berlin in artistry. Premier Mussolini has approved the scheme.

Under the plan worked out by the creator of "six characters in search of an author" which was produced in the United States several seasons ago, and Paolo Ebani, also internationally known, Italy will take the leadership in governmental support for a modern theatrical institution.

It is hoped that the national theater will excel both in acting and producing, the work of Stanislawsky of the Moscow Art theater, Firmin Gemier, of the Odeon in Paris and Max Reinhardt, of Berlin.

The idea will go before the next cabinet meeting for working out of the details. Three theaters will be created at Rome, Milan and Turin, with a permanent company alternating between each house. The company will have 15 more or less permanent actors but will draw on a joint group of 20 of the leading actors and actresses selected from the best in the nation.

The theaters, will be built similarly, the scenic properties being transferable. The stage will be modeled after that of the Marais theater in Brussels, which Pirandello thinks one of the best in the world.

Productions will open simultaneously on the first of November of each year, and will close at the end of May.

Peaceful, Friendly Nation, Industrious, Intent on Own Development, Mussolini Aim

Italy To March Hand in Hand With England in Mediterranean Policy, Dictator Says.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Rome, December 4.—A peaceful Italy, friendly with its neighbors; an Italy industrious and intent on its own development, where only those who produce have the benefits of citizenship; an Italy marching hand in hand with England in its Mediterranean policy, seeking an outlet for its surplus population through pacific means.

This was the Italy of fascism as set forth for The Tribune today by Benito Mussolini.

The Italian prime minister received me in his work room in Chigi palace—an enormous room hung with rich Gobelin tapestry and ancient brocades, carpeted with a magnificent Oriental rug.

As I entered the room with Conti Capasso Torr, chief of the press section for the duce, Mussolini was standing, looking over some documents. He advanced and welcomed me in English—"I am very pleased to see you." It was my first meeting with him since the attempt recently made on his life at Bologna. He replied to my congratulations with a smile which plainly said, "the incident is forgotten." But when I referred to the victory of the Italian pilot, Major Mario de Bernardi, in the Schneider cup race, a different smile, a real smile, almost boyish, chased the other from his face. The duce is very proud of the victory, and so is all Italy.

Informal Interview.

It was a friendly interview, or perhaps I should say conversation—it was highly informal and typical of the man. We remained standing, but after a question or two we were all three leaning with elbows on the desk, heads close together, while he explained the theory of the fascist state.

My first question dealt with the ultimate goal of fascism, and opened up others which led to the development of the idea, with parity of the state and everything consecrated to the state.

"To create a fascist state that is a state based on community interests of the producer."

That is Premier Mussolini's estimate of the ultimate goal of fascism. By producers, he means those who work with their hands and those who work with their brains to create the wealth of the nation.

"Since parliament does not now originate legislation, but only approves or disapproves of it, since the grand council of the fascist party is a body in which questions of national importance are threshed out, will it eventually become a national parliament?" I asked.

Parliament Merely Proposes.

"Parliament can propose legislation subject to the approval of the government," corrected the duce. "There are at present pending bills which originated with parliament. But the new parliament will be the expression of the new cooperative state which is in the process of organization. Parliament in the future will now have importance because in our opinion it will represent much better the will of the nation."

"How will the franchise be exercised?" I asked.

"Through economic corporations," was the reply. "With the transfer from the demo-liberal to the corporative state, a citizen who does not work has no right. The right to vote depends on labor."

There is the central thought of fascism—representation of the nation through the producers of the nation as expressed by syndicates of labor and capital. The throne has no place in fascist things.

Court-Martials Save Time.

"Why is the administration of justice under the new law for security of the state placed in the hands of military tribunals?"

"The normal procedure would require too long a time. Therefore, a special procedure is provided for special crimes for a period of five years."

The fascist state does not stick to cut and dried formulas. Hence, the new political police with headquarters and commanders of the fascist legions.

"What are these police intended to accomplish?"

"Surveillance of enemies of the regime," replied the duce.

"Why is recourse had to deportation for political offenses?" I asked.

"For the same reason persons are deported from the United States for such offenses," came the answer, accompanied by an expansive grin.

Since the meeting of Premier Mussolini and Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, at Leghorn, there has been a great deal of talk of an Anglo-Italian alliance or understanding and my first question regarding Italy's relations with other powers touched that point.

All Questions Settled.

The answer was given unequivocably, in words which mean more than a formal treaty, for there is no doubting the sincerity of the man who spoke them:

"Italy and England have converging policies in the Mediterranean. The fascist government is a sincere friend of England, among other reasons, because England has developed a concrete policy of friendship to Italy. All outstanding questions since the war have been settled, for instance, the Dodecanese, Jubaland, and Jarabub questions, war debts, and the Abyssinian accord. There is no need for special guarantees."

Alleged Fugitive Convict Is Left WithCommission

Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, Saturday, following a lengthy hearing on a petition for habeas corpus for Edward H. Stanley, alleged escaped convict from the Bibb county chaingang, remanded Stanley to the custody of the prison commission.

Stanley, who was arrested at police headquarters recently while negotiating to direct a carnival for the benefit of the relief fund of the Atlanta police department, was represented at the hearing by Mayor Walter A. Sims as his attorney, while the state was represented by Solicitor General John A. Boykin and Assistant Solicitor Ed A. Stephens.

According to testimony, Stanley was convicted in Fulton superior court in December, 1920, on a charge of forging a check on a local automobile concern in the amount of $2,200 for an automobile. He was sentenced to serve from two to seven years, and was assigned to the Bibb county convict camp, where he served approximately six months before his escape in January, 1921.

During the past year he is said to have had charge of the carnival given for the benefit of the Atlanta firemen's relief fund.

The writ of habeas corpus set out that he was being illegally detained in custody, the defense claiming that under the law he could not have been convicted of forgery because he signed the name of Edward H. Stanley to the check, which was his actual name. The state claimed that the name Stanley was fictitious.

Mayor Sims announced that he would appeal the case to the state court of appeals, and asked that a supersedeas bond be assessed and Stanley be released under bond. Supersedeas bond of $3,000 was assessed by Judge Thomas.

REVISION OF RATES ON SUGAR RAPPED IN STATE REPORT

The position of state railroad and public service commissions of the south that interstate rates on sugar from New Orleans and Savannah to various points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Louisiana east of the Mississippi river should not be disturbed was sustained in a report to the interstate commerce commission according to an announcement made Saturday by James A. Perry, chairman of the Georgia public service commission.

Examiner Frank M. Weaver, of the interstate commerce commission, prepared the report after conducting exhaustive hearings in several southern cities. At some of these hearings Chairman Perry and E. M. Price rate expert of the Georgia commission, were invited to sit with the examiner.

The chief contention of the Georgia commission that a 31 cent rate on sugar from Savannah to Atlanta be retained was upheld in the report of the examiner.

ATLANTA MOTOR CLUB TO ISSUE LICENSES

As an aid to the secretary of state in distribution of automobile license tags in Atlanta the Atlanta Motor club has been designated as a motor vehicle license bureau by Secretary of State S. G. McLendon and automobile license tags can be obtained at the club within a few days through the use of the same blanks as are used at the capitol, it was announced Saturday by Oscar Hammond, secretary of the club. This action is in line with the custom followed by the larger motor clubs throughout the country, it was announced.

As there is much additional clerical work required this year, the application blanks being in quadriplicate, all motorists are urged to make applications early. Sufficient clerks trained to handle a rush will be on duty at the motor club's license bureau, 40 West Peachtree street. Applications will be received by all motorists and plates mailed to them. This plan has been decided upon to eliminate loss in distribution December 15, but applications for plate renewals will be received at the motor club beginning several days prior to that time.

The exact date of the club bureau opening will be announced later in the daily paper. Though the motor club is open at all hours of the day and night, the license department probably will operate only between the hours of 8 a. m. and 8 p. m.

ELDER D. O. M'KAY ATTENDS MORMON CONVENTION HERE

Elder David O. McKay, of Salt Lake City, Utah, arrived in Atlanta Saturday to attend the Latter-day

ELDER DAVID O. M'KAY.

Saints' convention here, which convened Saturday morning and will close Sunday evening. Delegates from all branches of the church in Georgia are in attendance. The meetings are being held in the chapel on the corner of North Boulevard and East North avenue.

Elder McKay is one of the authorities of the Mormon church. He and United States Senator Reed Smoot are in the same church quorum. Dr. McKay has traveled all over the world as a representative of the church. He is general superintendent of all Sunday schools in the church.

He was the principal speaker at the Saturday session, with "Service" as his theme. He eulogized the efforts of mankind in branches of science, art, and in industrial pursuits and quoted Judge Goodwin's famous tribute to the Mormon pioneers.

Three meetings of the convention will be held today. Dr. McKay will be the principal speaker.

SECOND BAPTISTS WILL HAVE RALLY

A Christmas rally will be held at the Second Baptist church Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock, December 19, L. A. Witherspoon, superintendent of the Young People's division, being chairman of the program committee. Once each quarter the Sunday school and church hold services together in the main auditorium of the church.

After preaching Sunday morning on the subject, "The Four-Square Christian," Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the church, will leave for Gainesville to speak at Brenau college. He will return and leave again Monday for Valdosta to attend the state Baptist convention. F. S. Etheridge, Rev. K. H. Basmajian and Dr. Gordon G. Singleton also will represent the church. Dr. W. Harvey Clarke, missionary from Japan, will preach at the evening service on "Our Supreme Task."

The Business Women's league, of which Mrs. F. J. Paxon is president, will meet Sunday afternoon in the Sunday school auditorium at 3:30 o'clock, with Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, as speaker. Mrs. Margaret Cox will be in charge.

Workers' council will meet Wednesday night at 6 o'clock after which the meeting will adjourn for the prayer meeting.

Mrs. Allen Cutts, wife of the pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, will speak to the women Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the regular meeting in the Sunday school auditorium.

The Atlanta Baptist Elementary league will meet Tuesday night at 6 o'clock. Christmas carols will be played by Miss Lily Allen, organist of West End Presbyterian church, and a demonstration of Christmas lessons will be given the beginners' department by children.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS IN NORTH FULTON

An intensive religious census, covering the northern portion of Fulton county, including all territory surrounding Buckhead, has just been launched by the Peachtree Road Methodist church.

A house-to-house canvass of the entire territory will be made and all the information will be compiled and turned over to the various denominations, in an organized effort to bring more families into the church.

This census is being conducted by members of the Wesley brotherhood, a strong organization of men in the Peachtree Road church, of which James L. Respess is president.

Of the 2,025 teachers in the public schools of Hawaii, 946 are Caucasians, 525 are Hawaiians, 212 Chinese and 162 Portuguese.

Grand Exalted Ruler of Elks Visits City; Inducts Big Class

Among those welcoming Charles H. Grakelow, grand exalted ruler of the national order of Elks, Saturday morning, was Mayor-Elect I. N. Ragsdale. Mr. Ragsdale is on the left. Mr. Grakelow came to Atlanta to initiate a large class of novices into the Atlanta lodge of Elks Saturday night.

More than sixty were inducted into the Atlanta Lodge of Elks Saturday night under the personal supervision of Charles H. Grakelow, grand exalted ruler of the national order. The class was named the "Grakelow class."

It was one of the biggest events of the year for the Elks, and the brilliant ceremony was witnessed by a large gathering of Elks, both from Atlanta and other points. The exercises were held in the Elks' home, on East Ellis street, and following the initiation of the class an oyster supper was served in the banquet hall.

Mr. Grakelow was given a round of entertainment while in Atlanta. In addition to attending the lodge function, he was entertained Saturday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving club by high officials of the order and others. He and his party were met Saturday morning at Brookwood station and welcomed to Atlanta.

Mr. Grakelow, in addition to holding the high place in the Order of Elks, is one of the foremost civic and political leaders in Philadelphia, his home town. He is commissioner of public service and has held other high political offices there.

Accompanying him to Atlanta were Fred Robinson, of Chicago, grand secretary, and Frank H. Buhler, Max Lindheimer and Dr. E. M. Bartlett, all high officials in the order. They were welcomed to Atlanta by J. Turner Fitten, exalted ruler of the Atlanta lodge; Walter P. Andrews, past exalted ruler and member of the grand forum, and B. C. Broyles, deputy grand exalted ruler for Georgia.

Mr. Grakelow and his party will leave Atlanta this morning for Knoxville, Tenn., where they will visit the Elks there, before returning to Philadelphia.

Citizens and Southern Bank Plans Historical Exhibit

Savannah, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The Citizens and Southern bank is planning to hold at some time in the near future a loan exhibition of pictures, documents, maps, prints, deeds, and similar records, connected with the founding of the colony of Georgia and with the first century therafter.

In connection with the exhibition, which it is expected to make of authentic historical interest, there will be prepared an historical sketch of the founding of the colony and of Savannah during the first 100 years of its existence.

The task of collecting the articles for exhibition and of writing the historical booklet has been assigned to Miss Jane Judge, of Savannah, who is now locating the material available and making a record of it so that it may be assembled at the proper time.

The exhibition is planned in connection with the approaching 200th anniversary of the founding of the colony of Georgia at Savannah.

To make such an exhibition successful it is necessary to have the cooperation of all those who have early records of Georgia history and small objects connected with the first 100 years of the colony such as may be successfully assembled and arranged.

Not only should Savannah be rich in such material, but Midway, Darien, Brunswick, St. Simons, Ebenezer and other places in this section of the state should be able to offer interesting articles, papers and pictures to be included in the exhibition, it is pointed out.

The mezzanine floor of the Citizens and Southern bank will be used for the display of the articles. As they will be carefully protected by the facilities of the bank, it is hoped that even things of rare value may be loaned for the purpose. The date limit will be 1833. Anything dating to that year or earlier which may be suitable for such an exhibition will be most acceptable.

For the present, a record only is being kept of such things as might be loaned, and already many sources of information have been recorded and many interesting objects and papers have been offered.

Strangely enough, there is very little available in connection with early shipping from the port of Savannah, St. Simons or Darien. One or two small ship models of an early date have been promised to the exhibition. Pictures of old vessels taken at least 100 years ago are particularly desired. So, too, are early maps or drawings of the ports and of the towns of Georgia.

It is known that there was a map of Liberty county made in 1829 by Dr. Stacy, but the original map has not been located. Such material and authentic papers, pictures of ships and shipping and of old buildings, should make the exhibition one of unique value on the educational and historical side, as well as of extraordinary interest.

The book which will accompany it will be printed in an attractive form, and will contain cuts of some of the more interesting articles exhibited.

Information as to suitable articles which may be borrowed for the exhibition should be communicated to Miss Jane Judge, Savannah.

Mrs. Ashby Lectures.

"Better Environment Through Right Thinking" will be the subject of a helpful lecture in applied psychology to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

NEGRO GRABS PURSE OF WOMAN SHOPPER

Mrs. C. H. Powell, of 174 East Georgia avenue, reported to Call Officers L. P. Higgins and M. D. Cartwright that her purse containing some small change and a valuable string of pearls was snatched from her while shopping at Georgia avenue and Terry street, early Saturday.

Mrs. Powell told officers that an unidentified negro snatched her purse in the presence of several persons, dashed out the door and escaped in the darkness. Several persons in the neighborhood who heard Mrs. Powell scream chased the negro a short distance, but lost him in the darkness.

A negro, Lucile Langley, of 193 Vine street, reported to police that an unidentified negro man held her up at the point of a pistol early Saturday night on Vine street near her home and robbed her of a pocketbook containing $9.

R. K. Lynch, of East Point, reported to police that his pocket containing $33, was picked late Saturday afternoon while walking along Whitehall street, in the center of the shopping district.

Mrs. Lucile Brantley, of 463 Cooper street, had her purse snatched Saturday afternoon while she was walking down Cooper street, near Eugene street.

The pocketbook contained $6.75 in money and a book of street car tickets. She told Call Officer L. T. Higgins and M. D. Cartwright that the robber was a youthful-looking negro and that he had followed her for several blocks.

Motorcycle Officer C. J. Schilling, who was nearby at the time of the bold theft, gave chase to the negro, who escaped, disappearing in an alley.

J. M. High Company To Show Four Celebrated Paintings

Four of the most famous paintings in America will be displayed this week at the J. M. High company through the courtesy of Paul Fontaine, one of the foremost art collectors of this country, who is spending several days here with Mrs. Fontaine.

One of the celebrated group is a canvass by Carl Thomtay, "The Nativity," never before placed on exhibition in Atlanta, while the other three already have been shown at High's, including "The Village Blacksmith," by Herbert de Mareua, "Psalm 121-1," by Paul Mesereau, and "The Nazarene," by Thomtay.

"The Nativity" will be displayed in an appropriate setting on the balcony, second floor, while the other three, owing to their size, will be shown on exhibition in the furniture department in the rear of the main floor.

The general public is invited to view the four masterpieces, officials of the High company said Saturday. "The interest manifested by the public in the masterpieces we have had on display from time to time has been so overwhelming that we have prevailed upon Mr. Fontaine to allow us to redisplay them."

Will Have Long Visit.

Mr. Fontaine left Saturday for Virginia but will return Monday to rejoin Mrs. Fontaine at the Biltmore for an extended stay here. As one of the most prominent collectors of America, he owns over $1,000,000 worth of paintings by famous masters, a large number of canvasses being on display in the south at the present time.

Simplicity is one of the chief characteristics of the masterpiece which pictures the nativity of Christ, and which was painted in Bethlehem, Judea, by Carl Thomtay. Filtering through a tiny window can be seen the pale starlight, while lying on a bed of straw is the sleeping Virgin Mary robed in white. In the manger unseen is the Christ Child, and, in the immediate foreground standing with his back to the spectator, looking at the beautiful mother and the Babe is the stalwart, manly figure of Joseph. Various details to be noted in the completed work are examples of ancient pottery and baskets in the foreground.

Pictures valued at over several hundred thousands of dollars have already been shown at High' and others of equal value are scheduled for early showings. Among pictures now on exhibition in the south, and which are to be shown at High's in the near future are: "First Easter Dawn," "If Thou Hadst Known, Oh Jerusalem," "Golgotha," "The Babe Christ in Egypt," by Paul Morsereau; "Never Alone," a great war picture, and "The Two Messages," by Herbert de Mareau, Jr.; "The Man of Galilee," and "Christ on Calvary," by Carl Thomtay.

Atlanta Joins National Golden Rule Observance

Observance of Golden Rule Sunday today will be emphasized in practically all churches in Atlanta and in church societies and by many schools. A program at Agnes Scott college in which 400 girls of that institution had arranged to eat the simple food from tin cups that is given orphans in the Near East has been postponed until next Thursday, it was announced, because of the large number of girls who are spending the week-end out of the city.

Atlanta and Georgia is joining the nation in observance of the one day in each year which has been officially set apart in which the Golden Rule is given particular thought with reference to America's part in aiding stricken peoples in Bible lands.

In Decatur at 6 o'clock tonight the Epworth League of the First Decatur Methodist church will have a special hour devoted to emphasizing the spirit of the day, and in various Epworth League, Christian Endeavor, B. Y. P. U., and other society programs, special stress will be laid upon the program underway in the Near East, the aiding of orphans, widows and refugee peoples whose condition recently became much worse through a series of earthquakes.

Will Broadcast Chimes.

A solemn feature of today's nationwide observance will be the broadcasting of Rockefeller chimes from Park Avenue Baptist church, New York, in honor of the memory of the late Cleveland H. Dodge, organizer of the Near East Relief. This will be broadcast by WJZ and scores of stations will be hooked up for relaying the program all through the northern hemisphere.

At the First Presbyterian church in Atlanta, Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor, will make special reference to the spirit of the day in the course of his regular Sunday morning sermon, and in other churches similar references will be made and congregations given brief accounts of the sorrow and distress in Armenia and neighboring lands. In some churches either the morning or evening sermon hours will be devoted to texts on Golden Rule Sunday, its meaning and significance.

In many sections in Georgia and over the country today Golden Rule dinners will be sponsored when the coarse ration upon which thousands of helpless people survive each day, will be doled out as food as one means of impressing the Golden Rule spirit. In many instances the tiny tin cups which have been fashioned from tin cans by Near East orphans will be used as food containers.

At Agnes Scott college next Thursday night at 6:15 o'clock, 400 girl students will line up, a la army style, with 400 tin cups and be given for the evening meal only meat stew, macaroni, stewed apricots with Karo syrup, bread and cocoa, the daily ration of orphans and refugees in Bible lands. Recently, according to cables following the earthquakes, this ration has been cut owing to the fact that relief workers had to divide with additional thousands who were left homeless by the quake series. Last year, orphans voluntarily divided even this scant meal to share with less fortunate village children.

Recent earthquakes demoralized much of the program arranged for the winter by relief workers, cables report, orphanages and some of the big institutions being badly damaged by shocks. In addition, it is pointed out, to this program being temporarily halted, the Near East Relief has had to assume responsibility for approximately 80,000 additional homeless left by the quakes. This, officials point out, with the usual severe Armenia winters coming on apace, has brought about a problem which must be promptly and carefully met to prevent further untold suffering and hardships in the period intervening before spring when rebuilding and rehabilitation work will be undertaken.

PIGGLY WIGGLY CHAIN OPENS 2 NEW STORES

As the first step in the fulfillment of its recently announced expansion program, the Piggly Wiggly corporation Saturday opened two new stores to serve its Atlanta patrons.

The stores opened Saturday are located in sections of Atlanta that are rapidly becoming community centers and it is believed by the Piggly Wiggly management that these new stores will fill an urgent need of the people living in these sections and also will help in the de-centralization movement which is backed by the city planning commission for the relieving of traffic congestion.

One of the stores is located at 563 North Boulevard, and is under the management of T. E. Metlock, the other is at 1203 Piedmont avenue, in charge of J. A. Morgan. Both of the new managers have had long experience with the Piggly Wiggly organization.

Harry Brown, manager of the Piggly Wiggly chain in Atlanta, says that with the new stores opened recently and the others to be opened shortly, he is confident that the Atlanta branch soon will take the lead in volume of sales from all other branches of this country-wide organization.

JURY IN MORSE CASE DEADLOCKED

New York, December 4.—More than 20 hours after they began consideration of the cases of the defendants in the celebrated Morse trial, the jury advised Judge Thacher that they were unable to agree on a verdict in four instances.

Before they were permitted to go out for supper Saturday night, they had reached agreement in the cases of two of the six defendants, but were deadlocked as to the others.

The six defendants are Erwin, Benjamin and Harry Morse, sons of Charles W. Morse; Henry E. Boughton, George W. Burdett and R. M. Much. The charge is conspiracy to defraud in connection with the sale of the United States Steamship company stock.

BRITON DISCUSSES CHURCH OF ENGLAND

all to settle men's hearts that were racked by fear and perplexity, then surely was that time. And nothing happened. Here, not being a Catholic, I gladly acknowledge the wonderful work performed by the priests of that creed.

The essential feeling of contact with the church was absent. Men "went over the top" with whatever souls they had, depending upon memories of what they had been taught if they had any memories, but otherwise and usually alone. Material stresses are apt to brutalize the best of us; but that only made the need the greater.

So, in England today there is a distinct tripartite cleavage. The older generation which stayed at home and had its former religious training as well as closer contact with the clergy to fall back upon, still holds to a great extent to its allegiance; many of those who actually fought, have rightly or wrongly grown to rely upon themselves for guidance along whatever spiritual paths they choose; and the new generation, to whom the war is a legend, is fairly divided into those who cleave to the church and those who, in the questing spirit of modern youth, have gone a-thinking for themselves. At the risk of repetition, I must point out that I make no attempt to say who is right and who is wrong. This is merely some effort to describe an existing situation.

Con ons Differ.

As far as the social significance of the church in England is concerned, the rural and the urban conditions differ considerably. In the villages the clergy may be found living and working in a manner little different from that so perfectly described by Goldsmith in "The Vicar of Wakefield;" men of culture and noble spirit lie hidden in many a remote village, and their reward is in the love and respect of their parishioners. Townspeople, however, are rather more sophisticated and so less reliant upon the clergy, certainly in material matters.

The church is often a social bond, but this is more true of the small towns than the large, and does not apply to the so-called upper classes, who usually go to church in a spirit of social independence. It is not snobbery in any sense of the word; it is rather that their social life is differently constituted. There are, of course, several "fashionable" churches, especially in London, where smart people go usually to hear a preacher who damns them all incontinently. Society loves to be damned occasionally—too much adulation is boredom.

The great interest, however, lies in the problem of the church today. Some efforts are being made to maintain its hold upon those who inquire as well as those who accept; undoubtedly there is a broadness of discussion and thought that would have been unbelievable a few years ago. This much, at least, can be said: That if the church is worthy it will withstand; and if it is not it will not. For the survival of the fittest has an ethical as well as practical significance.

'HESTER' IS WORLD COTTON AUTHORITY

owned a bale of cotton, nor has he ever put a cent into the market.

His opportunities? Let one example suffice:

Remember those days of 1915, just after the world war broke, when cotton was bankrupt? When the "Buy-a-Bale" movement swept the south and King Cotton was seated on a street corner with his tin cup held out for the pennies of charity? When cotton went down to six cents a pound?

It was a hot mid-day of that summer when Colonel Hester sat at his desk—the desk that is known to cotton men all over the world—checking figures. The reports of various experts had showed that the cotton consumption that year could be only 12,000,000 bales. Colonel Hester totaled the column of figures in front of him. They showed a cotton consumption of 14,000,000 bales. He checked his figures. Two plus two equals four.

"I went down on the floor of the cotton exchange," chuckles Colonel Hester. "It was a mighty hot day. Most of the members were out at lunch or having a drink at the Boston club. I mounted the rostrum and announced the year's consumption as 14,000,000 bales. Nobody paid much attention. I walked down on the floor, gave the figures to the boy to put up on the board, and watched him chalk them up. Still nobody showed any interest. As I walked out, I stopped beside a member of the exchange. 'That's the most important announcement I ever made in my life,' I told him. He looked at the figures on the board. 'Why?' he asked. I said: 'Well, just before I came down here I wired that announcement to the New York cotton exchange. You just watch what comes out of New York by wire in the next hour, and you'll see why.'"

A Momentous Day.

They saw why. Any cotton man alive remembers that time when cotton climbed up out of the mud, went to 15 cents a pound, went higher, sagged now and then, but climbed again after every sag, and at last perched high up in the cotton man's dream of heaven, past 40 cents a pound.

"Nobody was there to check your figures that started that climb?" I asked Colonel Hester. Nobody was, it seemed.

"What would you have made if you had telephoned a broker or had a friend buy a thousand bales of cotton for you before you sent that wire to New York or posted those figures in New Orleans?"

"Anywhere from $300,000 to $1,000,000, depending on where I got off," smiled Colonel Hester. "But I didn't. I never owned a bale of cotton in my life. I never speculated a copper cent in the market. And if any man on my office staff ever did, I'd fire him. If my board of directors didn't back me up in firing him, I'd put on my hat and quit the job myself.

"All over the world cotton men know that no man connected with the reports that go out of this office has one cent's interest in those reports outside the salary he draws for accuracy. Yes, I suppose we might have been millionaires, up here, with our sources of accurate information and our knowledge of the market. And we aren't millionaires. But we have our honor."

Strong on Future.

On the future of cotton Colonel Hester is an incorrigible optimist.

"Just now I believe the world is willing to take more of our cotton than we can give it at 15 cents a pound or over, but it will gladly take it at less if we are insane enough to let it have it."

What sort of a man is this? Every working day in the year you can see him coming down to the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. Short, stocky, with silver-white hair, ruddy face, keen blue eyes behind rimless glasses, resonant voice. Eighty years old, he is groomed and tailored like a man of thirty. His thoughts are seldom of the past; almost always they are in the present and the future. He would rather talk about airplanes and radio than about stage-coach and mounted courier. Let him tell his own story, just as this wizard of cotton facts, stopping for a moment in the midst of the work that has brought him world-wide fame, told it to the first interviewer to whom he has ever given anything but a market interview in all his 80 years.

Aim of Life.

"I suppose my life has been that of a natural man," said Colonel Hester. "It has been governed by the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do by you; speak well of others, otherwise remain silent concerning your neighbor.

"My aim has always been to succeed in whatever I undertook, and never to undertake anything without a determination to see it through, turning neither to the right or to the left until the end. When I accepted the superintendency and a few months later the secretaryship of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, embracing the two offices which I have held for 56 years, scope was afforded for my life's ambition to make the south the authority for facts concerning the growth and distribution of its great staple, cotton.

"Before my time, we had to look elsewhere for much of our cotton information. We produced the cotton, a small part of which was then consumed in the south, and when it was carried hence, all we knew concerning it came from north of the Mason and Dixon line or from abroad. We sat here in the south, patiently waiting for them to tell us what they knew.

Scarce Thought of Age.

"I have had a pleasant life interspersed with grief and sorrow for the loss of loved ones. But who that has reached the age of four score years has not suffered from like causes? The years have gone by steadily but so gradually that I have scarce thought of age, like my dear, gentle little mother, who slept her last sleep within a few months of 95, and who never complained of age.

"My sons have passed on after reaching manhood, and I have but one child left, a daughter. But grandchildren, and great-grandsons—three sturdy little fellows—have enlarged the scope of my affections. Are not these worth living for?"

"Colonel Hester," I said, "you are hale and hearty at eighty. How do you stay so at an age when so many are wrecks? I notice you clamp on that cigar as thought you enjoyed it. They tell me you have emptied a glass now and then. What are your ideas on eating, drinking, sleeping, tobacco?"

Colonel Hester smiled broadly.

Old as Thoughts.

"When a man commences to think he is old, be he fifty, sixty, seventy or over, he is old," the veteran said, "and inevitably his thoughts are reflected by his body. This is a truism.

"I have always had what I desired and enjoyed, and have always believed that ill effects from eating (of course, not in excess) have been mainly due to fear. A normal man should be safe, whatever nourishment he may desire. It has often been said that the older a man is bodily the fewer hours he sleeps. That may be so. But I enjoy eight hours' sleep out of twenty-four as much today at eighty as I did at the age of sixteen."

"Colonel," I asked him, "you've seen the southern girls when they wore crinolines and chignons. Now, here at the corner of Gravier and Carondelet streets, in the heart of New Orleans' business district, you're surrounded by an army of southern girls, working for their living, wearing short skirts and rolled stockings and about one-tenth of one per cent of the clothes their grandmothers wore. To say nothing of rouge and lipsticks and cigarettes and the Charleston. What do you think of the change?"

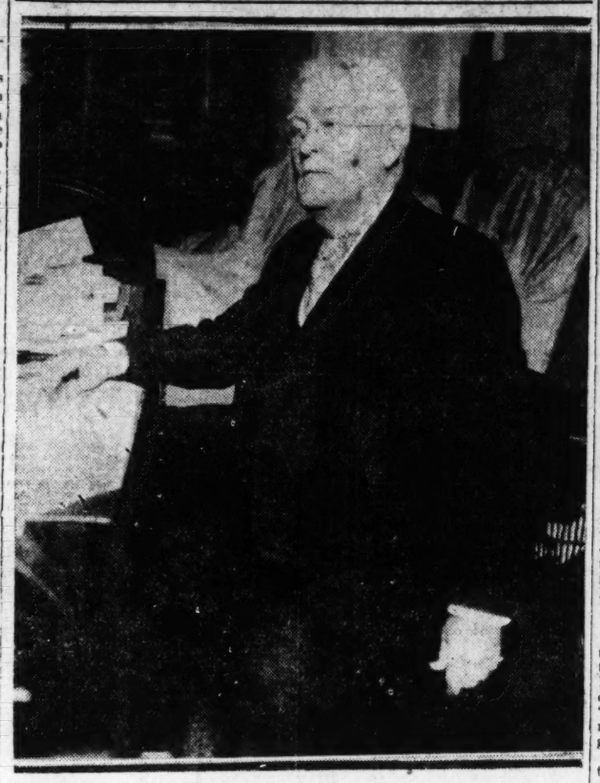

Colonel Hester's blue eyes twinkled with mirth.

For Modern Girls.

"The difference in the southern girls of today and those of a half century ago," he said, "is in many respects as great as the change in the times. They think and act from a broader standpoint than their grandmothers had. And yet they are just as sweet and lovable as they always were. Their adoption of short skirts and work-a-day habits was at first a shock to the oldtimers. But gradually they came to be looked upon as sensible and practical. The girls of today have come into the business marts today. They make as good wives and mothers when they marry as their grandmothers ever did. And they know more and are better equipped to advise and assist their husbands than when their knowledge was confined to the four walls of a home. I am the firmest believer and the most ardent advocate of the girl of today."

A lifetime in business. Fifty-six years on the job. That job today pays Colonel Hester a salary such that he never need worry. But he started that job, with the birth of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, on a salary of exactly nothing a year.

LEGISLATIVE JAM FACING CONGRESS

Iowa, who died during the recess. On Tuesday the president's message will be received, after which the house will adjourn out of respect to "Uncle Joe" Cannon, in which it may be joined by the senate. The budget message is due to be read to congress Wednesday. Both houses then will get down to work, the house beginning consideration of the treasury and postoffice appropriation bill.

Pre-session talk has centered about tax reduction legislation and farm relief, but neither of these measures have any place upon the tentative programs formulated by house and senate leaders, and it appears that both will be shelved this session. Farm relief advocates, however, who are returning here with threats in their voices, may demand a farm bill as the price of adjournment on March 4, and proceed to force a special session if their demands are not met.

Tax Bill Fails Fight.

Democrats have formed a tax reduction program, general in nature, which is opposed by republicans, while the former are cold toward the tax credit proposal suggested several weeks ago by President Coolidge, so that any tax cut seems foredoomed.

There are a few matters which are slated for consideration, either carried on the program or left over from last session. In the latter class are the divergent radio bills passed by house and senate upon which conferees will settle down to work early next week, the White bill of the house which provides for regulation by a federal radio commission operating under the department of commerce and the Dill bill of the senate setting up an independent federal commission. President Coolidge, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the radio industry and broadcasters favor the White bill.

Left over from last session also is the McFadden-Pepper Branch banking bill, which likewise is tied up in conference.

Alien Property Up.

Soon after it starts to work, the house will take up the bill for return of alien property seized during the war which was agreed upon several days ago by the ways and means committee. Whether this measure will ever get to the senate, or if it does, ever will pass, is a question.

There are two matters the senate must take up under agreement reached last session, the rivers and harbors bill which the house already has passed and the Lausanne treaty for establishing commercial and diplomatic relations with Turkey, the former will come up December 14 and with debate limited beginning December 20, it may be out of the way before Christmas. The Lausanne treaty is to come up January 5. Its ratification requires two-thirds vote. Considerable time probably will be taken up with debate on this highly controversial issue.

Outside of the appropriation measures, these matters mentioned are all which are assured of action. There are a number of other issues whose proponents will seek action. Muscle Shoals and the Boulder Dam canyon project principal among them. Negotiations were begun today by republican leaders looking toward an agreement to shelve Muscle Shoals at the coming session, with assurance that it will be taken up in the seventieth congress.

Fight on Boulder Dam.

Whether this can be secured remains to be seen. While Senator Johnson, California republican, is demanding action on the Boulder Canyon dam project, Senator Ashurst, Arizona democrat, says he will do all in his power to prevent action. This controversy is symbolic of those on several proposed pieces of legislation.

Among matters which have been left from previous sessions, but probably will get no consideration during this closing session of the sixty-ninth congress, are two railroad measures, a bill for consolidation of roads and one for repeal of Pullman surcharges.

There are four prohibition bills upon which action will be sought this session, that providing for a private corporation to manufacture medicinal liquors, now being drafted by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews; the Goff bill, tightening the Volstead act; a bill establishing a separate bureau for prohibition enforcement in the treasury, and the measure placing dry agents under civil service. The two latter have passed the house. It appears doubtful if any of them will be enacted finally during the coming short session.

Much Prohibition Talk.

Instead, there will be much talk about prohibition in both wings of the capitol, on such topics as the recent elections and the return of Ontario and Norway to the wet column. The two most frequent speakers on this subject, Representative Upshaw, of Georgia, dry, and Hill, of Maryland, wet, will have their last opportunities to twist each other for at least two years, as neither will be here in the seventieth congress.

Subjects for talk also will include the world court, from which President Coolidge was interpreted as shying in his recent Kansas City address.

There are two outstanding nomination quarrels in prospect, the appointment by President Coolidge to the federal trade commission of Abram F. Myers, formerly an employee of the justice department, and the recess appointment given to W. J. Tilson, of Georgia, as judge of the middle district in that state after Tilson's name had been withdrawn last session when his rejection was threatened.

Several resolutions for investigations are pending in the senate, and the probe into the alleged "bread trust" is expected to begin some time during the session.

Formal dropping by the house of the impeachment proceedings against Judge George W. English, of the eastern district of Illinois, who recently resigned, is expected soon after the session begins.

HARRISON TO DEMAND MUSCLE SHOALS ACTION.

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Senator Pat Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, on his return today to Washington, announced that he intended to "demand some action on Muscle Shoals."

"There has been enough dilly-dallying on the subject," he said, "and it is time for something to be done. I am in favor of the Southern Power company's bid, indorsed by the special joint congressional committee with an amendment strengthening the fertilizer clause."

Declaring that he could not support either the McNary-Haugen farm bill or the administration credit proposal as they now stand, Harrison continued:

"The republicans need not try to make the democrats the goat on tax reduction and farm relief. The democrats are ready to cooperate in any plan for real tax reduction and genuine farm relief and the republicans should come forward and lend a helping hand to relieve the people of the heavy tax burden and farm depression. They will find the democrats willing and anxious to cooperate."

NAVAL SECRETS PARTLY REVEALED

defense will attempt to get the full Gleaves report made public. At that time the court may have to decide the question of public policy, as stated by Wilbur in refusing to testify, and the rights of a defendant in a criminal trial.

At the opening of the session Justice Hoehling read his decision admitting into the record the gag order which Secretary Wilbur had given to Admiral Robison before he took the stand in this case. The court held that the question of public policy was not involved and that the Wilbur communication was not a state secret and should be received in court.

If the witness, he said, thinks he should have privileges he should put his claims to the court and let the court take the responsibility.

Order Read to Jury.

The grim old sea dog was again put on the witness stand and the order directing him not to disclose confidential information was read to the jury. Then he was asked what he had told Doheny in the conference in which he had induced the oil man to bid on the Pearl Harbor job.

"I had previously obtained from Secretary Denby the right to divulge, under pledge of secrecy, on this one occasion, certain international conditions as they had been reported to us, which conditions I did in part disclose to Doheny," said the witness, carefully weighing every word.

"As reported by Admiral Gleaves?" asked Attorney Frank J. Hogan.

"Gleaves was the source of certain reports."

"What did you tell Doheny on that?"

"That is exactly what I have no right to tell," squirmed the witness, looking at the court for aid.

"You have to tell the court what you told Doheny," said Justice Hoehling.

"I can't tell—contrary to public interest—I can't do it, sir," said the witness stubbornly.

"I ask that the witness be directed to answer," said Hogan.

Omits Name of Power.

"I have so ruled and will protect the interests of the witness as well as the government," said the court, then adding that "perhaps the name of the foreign government might be omitted."

"I would like to confer with the secretary of the navy," said the witness, "if don't think it right to answer that question on the public, without his assurance that no harm can come to the countries. I can't take the responsibility."

"I can't understand why the substance can't be given," said the court. Robison looked helplessly around and finally said:

"I told Doheny of the military estimate of the situation, so far as naval strength was concerned, based on existing conditions told of bases built or building, vessels and organization. I informed him of detailed increases in the personnel and the preparations for possible military operations of other than American powers."

"Against the American power?"

Doheny Agitated.

"I warned him of the sort of defense necessary for us to prevent the possibility of the invasion of the Pacific coast. I linked the security of the Pacific coast with the establishment of adequate fuel oil bases at Pearl Harbor."

"What was Doheny's condition?"

"He was considerably agitated."

Robison disclosed his ignorance of the technicalities of the oil land leases that went as a corrolary to this Pearl Harbor contract, admitting that he did not know the distinction between "lessor" and "lessee" and that he did not understand the preferential rights given to the Doheny companies.

Negotiations following the first contract were discussed. The government got its oil reserve in Hawaii and then wanted more and Doheny came forward with a new proposition, which involved leases in the California oil reserve lands that had not been developed. A great plan was offered in which the navy department and the Doheny companies practically went into partnership and oil was to be put in storage not only in the Pacific but on the Atlantic coast and at the Panama canal. This was to cost the navy nothing—except its oil reserve. It could not get money from congress and went about it this way, a way that has since been declared illegal in the civil courts and is now before the United States supreme court.

Dispute Over Royalties.

The big proposition to take Doheny into this new scheme was first brought to Robison's attention, he testified, by Fall, who was "very favorably impressed with it," he said. It was a ten-year contract and designated oil reserve leases to the Doheny company. This plan was turned down at first, as Robison thought the Doheny people were not doing enough for the government. It was modified and later came down to a near settlement with a final dispute over royalties. Robison was dissatisfied with the royalties offered by Doheny. He told Fall so and said he was going to try for an increase. Fall had previously written a compromise on this subject and he said to Robison:

"Go ahead and try—I can't get anything more out of the old man."

Robison tried, facing Doheny at a final conference. Doheny, he said, "made the advantages of the contract look big to me. I finally appealed to him as a friend and said to him:

"'Fix it (the royalties) for God's sake so that the navy is not going to get bilked.' Doheny jumped up from the table agitated and said 'if that is the way you feel about it, I'm through.'"

Robison wanted the fuel oil so badly that he threw down his cards and accepted the Doheny contract right then and there. He went to Secretary Denby and said:

"We have lost."

"Never mind, you did the best you could," Denby told him.

Then the contract was signed by Denby and Fall.

The defense expects to conclude its case at the end of next week, possibly before that.

ALLEGED AGENTS OF RUM SHIP HELD

New Orleans, December 4.—(AP)—Walter Tomplain, of Donaldsonville, La., alleged land operator for the Arsene J., French rum running schooner, was arrested here late today on charges of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act.

Tomplain, said to be an operator of a pool room at Donaldsonville, was arrested in the heart of the city by federal officers following a conference between Captain J. B. Edmonds, Biloxi coast guard commander, and O. D. Jackson, prohibition administrator.

The arrest was said to be a development of the investigation after the kidnaping of J. B. Mattheys, of New Orleans, assistant prohibition administrator, and Machinists Mate Handley, of the Biloxi coast guard station by the Arsene J Monday night.

Tomplain was said by investigators to have had $20,000 in currency on his person when arrested. He declined to answer any questions, asserting he would wait until he had seen a lawyer. Two other men, Martin Fernandez, of New Orleans, and Luis Villarescuza, of Havana, Cuba, are being held on similar charges as an outgrowth of the same case.

Captain Edmonds said he could add little to the statement made by him Tuesday when he told of leaving the Arsene J anchored after a gale and high seas had depleted fuel supplies aboard the two coast guard vessels which had it in tow. When he returned, he said, the schooner was gone with Matthews and Handley on board.

Handley, he said, was directing the towing operations before the gale developed and Matthews had gone aboard to question members of the crew concerning the vessel's operation.

The Arsene J tonight still had not been located after a futile search by coast guard patrol boats of the marshes of southern Louisiana and four days of cruising about the Gulf of Mexico.

FLEEING SHIP REPORTED HEADED FOR NICARAGUA.

Mobile, Ala., December 4.—The romance of the Spanish Main, with its legend or piracy and loot, was revived in a modern setting today, the fifth that two American prohibition agents had been held captive aboard the French liquor schooner, Arsene J.

While the fleeing rum boat was being hunted through the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean, an unsigned radio message picked up here reported the truant was headed for Nicaragua.

The message, addressed to all ships, said:

"French schooner Arsene J., which broke arrest on the night of November 29, with a prohibition officer and a member of the coast guard aboard, headed for a Nicaraguan port. Report immediately when sighted to American legation at Managua, Nicaragua."

The message, broadcast over the south gulf, was picked up by the Tropical Radio station here.

With automatics supplanting the old cutlasses, rolls of American bills replacing the legendary pieces of eight and a cargo of wines and liquors superseding the silks and spices from the east, modern rum pirates on the French schooner have eluded 20 or 30 craft sent to pursue them.

Last Monday, the Arsene J. escaped audaciously after seizure by a coast guard cutter.

The schooner, a swift three-masted ship with an auxiliary motor, was in tow of the cutter. J. B. Matthews, an assistant prohibition director, had been placed aboard her with a petty officer of the coast guard.

A storm came up and the tow line parted. The crew of the cutter believed Matthews and the petty officer were overpowered by the rum runners and tied up. It was not believed they had been murdered, as it was felt the rum runners would be afraid to commit murder with the danger of their recapture so great.

The schooner headed off into the storm and even the swift cutter could not trace her.

Garden Hills Offers New Homes in Choice Section At Amazingly Low Prices

Modern Homes Built on Cooperative Buying Plan Can Be Bought for Less Than Individual Could Build.

Prospective home owners sometimes feel that it's much more economical to buy a lot and build their own home rather than buy a house already built by a professional builder, feeling that the builder takes too long a profit for his effort.

In the houses now being offered for sale in beautiful Garden Hills this is not the case. Here are homes that can be bought for less than it would cost the individual to construct the same house.

The reason for this is because a large group of houses have been constructed in Garden Hills on a cooperative buying plan, enabling the purchase of materials, the financing, etc., of these houses on a wholesale scale.

The result is that the individual house, after including the builder's profit, is offered the public at a price lower than it would cost the individual to build the same house.

That this is true can best be proved by a trip to Garden Hills and an investigation of the homes now being offered.

Choice Residential Section.

Garden Hills is undoubtedly Atlanta's choice north side home community. Here is a section that answers every requirement of the most fastidious purchaser of a home-site. It provides charming environment, convenience, easy accessibility, and an investment opportunity unsurpassed by any section in the city.

Garden Hill is in the best section of the north side. Immediately adjoining Peachtree Road just beyond the intersection of Peachtree Road and Andrews Drive. You can drive from Garden Hills to the Terminal Station in fifteen minutes—close enough to the city to be convenient, yet far enough out to be in a fashionable section, where pure air and plenty of room are available.

From the standpoint of an investment one has only to consider the progress that has been made in this section in little over one year. The amazing transformation of an old farm site to a home community of stately houses, wide paved boulevards, business and social activity, have already enhanced values for original purchasers and Garden Hills will continue to grow in value as a home section.

A swimming pool recently completed at a cost of $25,000; a park for the children's playground, and rustic stables that house some of the finest thoroughbred horses in the South are available to residents of Garden Hills. Here one may enjoy horseback riding along wooded bridle paths, or in season enjoy the cooling waters of one of the most beautiful pools in the South.

It is a section that any man, woman or child would be proud to call home and a section where youngsters could grow up in a happy environment, enjoying the health-giving sports that every robust child craves.

Now is the time to buy in Garden Hills. In the spring when the general demand for homes begins, prices are going to advance. The man who goes out to Garden Hills and takes advantage of the particular opportunities that are being offered right now is the man who will be able to sell at a profit later if he desires.

Drive out to Garden Hills today and see for yourself that every claim made for this ideal home section is true.—(adv.)

STEAMER BOLIVAR BELIEVED SINKING

Nogales, Ariz., December 4.—(AP)—Advices to The Herald from Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico, said the coast trade steamer Bolivar, carrying a large number of passengers and 100,000 pesos cargo, had struck a sand bar near the mouth of the Topolobampo river and was in danger of going to pieces.

There are no boats in Guaymas large enough to send to the rescue of the passengers and crew, said a telegram from the west coast city, which added that the steamer Jalisco, northbound from Mazatlan, had picked up the Bolivar's SOS.

DE LA HUERTA ARREST REPORT UNCONFIRMED

Tucson, Ariz., December 4.—(AP)—Confirmation of reports from Nogales that Adolfo de la Huera, former provisional president of Mexico, had been arrested here as a result of a warrant sworn to by the Mexican consul in Tucson was lacking tonight.

The United States commissioner denied knowledge of such a warrant, the border patrol and the sheriff did not have him in custody and the clerk of the consulate said he had not been advised of any warrant being asked for or served. Consul J. E. Anchondo was in Nogales.

3-GALLON VEST LANDS MAN IN JAIL AS BOOTLEGGER

Boston, December 4.—(AP)—Abraham Seltzer appeared in municipal court today, accused of wearing the latest addition to the bootleggers' wardrobe—a three-gallon vest.

The "garment" constructed of thin copper was so carefully fashioned that when worn under a coat it would not be noticed. At the top was a filler cap and at one corner of the bottom was a tap for drawing off the contents.

The officers said that they had followed Seltzer about for several days before they decided that his slight tendency to obesity was unnatural. He was held in $500 bail.

4,000 PRODUCERS VOTE TO CONTINUE DARK LEAF POOL

Clarksville, Tenn., December 4.—(AP)—More than 4,000 tobacco growers of Kentucky and Tennessee in mass meeting here today went on record in support of the Dark Tobacco Growers' Cooperative association and expressed a desire that it function not only in marketing the 1926 crop of dark fired tobacco, but that it be operated for an additional period of five to ten years.

The action was on a resolution offered by Andrew Ramey, a director of the association for this section, who presided, which was given almost unanimous approval.

A resolution proposing the removal of the association's general headquarters from Hopkinsville, Ky., "to some other city where business is more friendly to the body" was withdrawn before being put to a vote.

CAPTAIN OF SHIP IN CRASH APPEALS SUSPENSION TERM

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—The duration of the suspension of Captain John Diehl, of the steamship City of Rome, which was in collision with the submarine S-51 in September, 1925, rests with Dickerson N. Hoover, supervising inspector general of the federal steamboat inspection service.

After the collision a local board in Boston investigated the accident, which caused the sinking of the S-51, and suspended Captain Diehl and his mate, Timothy L. Dreyer. A supervising inspector thereafter made the period of suspension for Captain Diehl two years, but the case was appealed to the inspector general here and decision has not been rendered. There has been no court action in the case, although a naval board has had it under consideration.

WESTERNERS ATTRACTED BY SALE OF HOGS

Thomasville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—No feature of Thomas county's products has attracted more attention from the people of other sections than the hogs that are raised and marketed here. The fame of Thomas county hogs has reached as far west as Ohio and Iowa and at the last sale here there were farmers present from both of those states who said they had heard of Thomasville hog sales and came here to see how they were conducted.

County Agent Pat Ward states that Thomas county hogs will bring to the hog raisers this year approximately $500,000 besides the meat that is cured to take care of the home supply.

The increased production of hogs this year has made it necessary to hold two cooperative sales a month.

SIX SLIGHTLY HURT IN STREET MISHAPS

Six persons were treated at Grady hospital Saturday for injuries received during the day in a series of accidents on Atlanta's streets. None of the accidents, however, were serious, doctors stated.

Miss Florine Gentry, 23, of 55 Tumlin street, narrowly escaped serious injury Saturday afternoon in a collision between a motor truck and the automobile in which she was riding, which was driven by J. M. Reynolds, of 404 Flat Shoals avenue. The crash occured on Highland avenue at Albion avenue.

Reynolds was shaken up and considerably bruised while Miss Gentry was thrown from the automobile to the pavement by the force of the impact. She was taken to Grady hospital, and after being treated was allowed to go home.

Negro Driver Runs.

According to the report of Call Officers L. T. Higgins and M. D. Cartright, the truck was operated by an unidentified negro, who abandoned it and fled immediately after the crash. Both the automobile and truck were badly damaged.

Leonard Thomas, 8, of 570 Boulevard place, was treated at Grady Saturday afternoon for bruises and lacerations about the head, received in an automobile accident. He did not tell doctors where the accident happened, and no record of it was obtained by police.

Raymond Davis, 8, of 107 Bedford street, had his foot badly smashed when run over by a motor truck Saturday afternoon. He did not tell doctors at the hospital where the accident happened, and police have no record of it.

Found in Stupor.

W. M. Dutton, of 71 West Fourteenth street, was taken to Grady hospital early Saturday night, in a stupor, with injuries evidenced by bruises and lacerations on the head. Dutton was found by Patrolman J. A. Bailey lying prostrate on Williams street, near West Cain.

According to information given to police, a Mrs. Howard, whose address was given as 75 West Harris street, stated that Dutton was the victim of a hit-and-run automobile, but did not state any details of the accident.

Emma L. Lilson, a negro girl, of Mableton, Ga., was knocked down by an automobile on Humphries street, between Wells and Glenn streets and slightly injured, according to police records. The automobile was driven by J. D. Harris, of 830 Cascade road, who took the negress to the hospital, then reported the accident to Charles H. Grant, night clerk in the chief of police's office. Mr. Harris told Mr. Grant that the girl ran suddenly in front of his car from behind a parked automobile. No case was made.

FUNDAMENTALIST GROUP PROTESTS PASTOR'S OUSTING

Fort Worth, Texas, December 4.—(AP)—Some two dozen Methodist fundamentalists, supporting the Rev. William E. Hawkins, Jr., evangelist and avowed foe of modernism, are to meet Sunday and sign a "round-robin" demanding of Bishop John M. Moore, Dallas, why the preacher lost his appointment from the central Texas conference of the church.

The evangelist has charged that conference dignitaries eliminated him from recognized standing because of his pulpit attacks on modernism. He said he was warned three years ago to desist, and finally was sent to a rural circuit charge.

Charges that the Methodist church is fostering modernism in its pulpits and winking at it in Methodist schools were aired at a recent meeting of Hawkins supporters.

SUNDAY WEATHER TO REMAIN FAIR, SAYS FORECASTER

Fair weather with slightly cooler temperatures is predicted for today, according to C. F. von Herrmann, local official meterologist. Temperatures for today are expected to range between 48 and 64 degrees, it was stated.

Temperatures Saturday ranged from 52 as a low point to 66 during the early hours of the afternoon.

Although there is no rain scheduled for today indications point to light showers during the night and probably Monday.

Chicago Tribune Branch Offices Established Here

An unprecedented thing in newspaper advertising in the south— the establishment of a southern branch of a nationally known newspaper—has recently occurred.

Establishment of the branch of the Chicago Tribune has just been completed in Atlanta, with offices at 1341-3 Hurt building. George C. Blohm will be in charge. He has had wide experience in such work and plans a great future for the local branch.

GEORGE C. BLOHM.

This is the first time that a northern or western newspaper has opened offices in the south and the decision of the Tribune to locate in Atlanta is another case where central location, climatic conditions and many other Atlanta advantages decided the location, according to Mr. Blohm. A complete survey was made of the entire south and through the aid of the chamber of commerce complete data on practically every southern city was obtained.

Plan Large Office.

If the plans of the business department of the Chicago paper materialize the Atlanta office will be developed to equal that of the eastern branch, located at New York. Visualizing the future of the south, members of the administrative department believe this will be a great step forward for the advancement of Chicago Tribune interests in the south, Mr. Blohm stated.

The Chicago Tribune has one of the greatest news gathering forces of any paper and 27 American newspapers maintain leased wires from the Tribune. In addition to this, it maintains the largest sales force of any newspaper in the world and spends enormous sums in advertising.

The principal work of the local office, according to Mr. Blohm, will be national or foreign advertising. The paper has a unique system of handling national advertising by advertising those products for which there is a demand in its territory, which comprises Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

To Attract to South.

It is the belief of the administration of the paper that the development in the south will create a great demand for advertising in northern papers so as to attract attention of the nation southward. And it is with this idea that the local branch was established, Mr. Blohm said.

The branch here will be similar to those in New York, San Francisco, London and other foreign points. The Atlanta office will bring to the south the advantage of advertising in one of the country's greatest newspaper advertising mediums without added expense.

Native Chicagoan.

Mr. Blohm, the southern representative, is a native of Chicago and a graduate of the University of Illinois and Yale graduate law school. He was a professor of mathematics and science at Culver Military academy for two years, later being connected with a big middle western manufacturing house.

During the past two years he has been in Miami in charge of the branch there, which was established to care for the big Florida rush. His principal work consists of investigating the prospective advertiser's moral and financial responsibility.

His wife was, before her marriage, Miss Ramona Slattery and has many friends throughout the south. They have one son, Thomas, who is 6 years old. They are at present at the Biltmore hotel.

INMAN PARK CHURCH WELCOMES PASTOR

A special program will be given at the Inman Park Presbyterian church today in a welcoming service for the Rev. J. Fraser Cocks, new pastor of the church, who will preach his first sermon here.

Rev. Cocks comes to the Inman Park church from Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, where he has served for the past several years. He has been in the ministry since 1904.

Dr. Cocks received his college and theological training in Winnipeg, Manitoba. In 1903-4 he finished his theological course in Louisville, Ky., seminary, was ordained and served a church in that city. He then took a post-graduate course in Cincinnati and went to Florida, where he remained until the world war.

He returned to Canada and spent the war years in Toronto, serving as volunteer chaplain in Y. M. C. A., and hospital work.

After the war, he taught for a time in the Synodical college of Washington state, taking the chairs of New Testament, Greek and English Bible.

Since then Dr. Cocks has been pastor of the Chalmers Presbyterian church, Hamilton, Ontario.

CHRISTMAS SEAL DRIVE GETS QUICK RESULTS

In the first mail following the distribution of Christmas seals by the Tuberculosis association, $151 was received, according to officials of the local branch.

The Christmas seal drive, which is an annual event during the holiday season, originated in 1903, as was explained when Einar Hoelbell visited Atlanta two years ago under auspices of the National Tuberculosis association. Mr. Hoelbell was a clerk in the postoffice of Denmark when he conceived the idea, for which he gained the recognition of the king and queen of Denmark.

The Atlanta association is using the money it is receiving in its own work supplementing the curtailed Community Chest budget, of which it is a member. The governing board of the chest, of which Bayne Gibson is president, worked out a plan in connection with the board of the Tuberculosis association, R. A. Magill, of that board, stated. Offices of the association can be reached by telephoning Walnut 9580.

Moran May Get Seat in Congress He Did Not Seek

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Action of about 200 thoughtful friends may give Frank T. Moran, of Illinois, a seat in the house at the approaching session of congress.

Moran, who has served as clerk of the house pensions committee for a number of years, was elected in November to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Fuller, the committee chairman.

The republican party in Illinois did not put forward a candidate for the unexpired part of Fuller's term, and Moran's friends took occasion to write his name on the ballot on election day.

Speaker Longworth said today that if Moran were given the credentials of election the house undoubtedly would seat him.

LAKE CARGO SHIPS STILL ICE-BOUND

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., December 4.—(AP)—The long line of lake cargo carriers caught in the worst ship blockade in the history of the upper lakes still were ice-bound in St. Marys river tonight. Prospects for their release appeared brighter, however, with the arrival of the big car ferry St. Marie from St. Ignace. The St Marie, most powerful ice crusher in the world tonight was working her way slowly up to the head of the blockade.

Marine men declared no ice could form anywhere in the lake region at this time of the year which the St. Marie could not get through. The big ferry was built especially to keep open the Straits of Mackinac.

The blockade has lasted four days and increases as additional freighters arrive for passage through the locks that connect lakes Huron and Superior. Tonight, in single file the 100 freighters extended in a line reaching for miles around Neebish Island. Of these vessels, 55 are down bound with cargoes aggregating 13,800,000 bushels of grain. The remainder are upbound, some with cargoes of coal.

There was more concern tonight for the safety of the vessels than for the 2,000 sailors comprising the crews of the ice locked freighters. It was pointed out that the safety of the men was assured whether the ice breakers get through or not. While a further solidifying of the ice will make more difficult the work of releasing the vessels, it will make it possible for the crews to walk ashore.

ROSITA RENARD IS GUEST ARTIST

orchestra. She has spent many hours in perfecting her interpretation of this difficult number for her Atlanta audience and also has rehearsed at length with the orchestra.

The orchestral program next Sunday, while officially classed with the more classic group, is by no means lacking in strong appeal to the average music lover. It is impossible to call any program with such numbers as Kriesler's "Caprice Viennois" and Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slav," included, anything else but popular.

The opening number of Mendelsshon's tuneful effective overture, "Fingal's Cave," followed by Dvorak's fifth symphony, "The New World." Then comes the piano and orchestra concerto with Miss Renard.

The second half of the program opens with Wagner's "Traume," followed by the famous Kriesler composition and closing with "Marche Slav."

Concerts' Popularity Grows.

Popularity of these bi-monthly Sunday afternoon concerts is steadily increasing, being particularly marked this season. This is probably because of the great improvement shown in the work of the 70 musicians under the baton of Conductor Enrico Liede.

As usual, reserved section tickets for the balance of the season are now being sold at Phillips and Crew Piano company, Peachtree and Ellis streets, on a pro rata rate as for the complete season. With two of the eight concerts already history, the cost of reserved seats for the remaining six will, therefore, be exactly 75 per cent of the full season price.

Seats for the one concert next Sunday may also be secured. The sale will continue all week but, owing to the Sunday observance laws, cannot be conducted on Sunday, the day of the performance.

MARIE WELCOMED TO RUMANIAN HOME

serted and the committees of welcome nowhere in sight.

Finds King Ferdinand.

Descending from her car, Marie gazed up and down an almost vacant platform.

Then she spied King Ferdinand, pale behind his whiskers from a lingering illness.

Walking up to him, the queen embraced him long and tenderly. She was heard to express joy at finding him well enough to come to the station to meet her. The absence of the customary courtiers and dignitaries did not matter.

Ferdinand was thin and obviously a sick man, but he carried himself erect and moved briskly.

Queen Marie wore a jaunty blue hat, a chic chestnut-colored costume and chatted with her husband in lively fashion.

Inside the waiting room of the Bucharest station sat several Transylvanian peasant women, holding bouquets which they had intended to present to the queen upon her arrival. They were sound asleep when the royal train arrived, and slumbered through the entire reception.

Several Officials to Resign.

Such a fiasco did the reception to the queen become that several officials, furious, have threatened to hand their resignations to the government, and other resignations have been demanded.

Instead of cheering throngs, only a damp, dismal, silent station received Marie.

At that, the royal train had been halted half an hour outside the station to enable King Ferdinand, Premier Averescu, Minister of the Interior Octavian Goga and President of the Senate Goadua, together with Walter Schoellkopf, American charge d'affaires, to rush to the platform.

The only touch of color to the affair was lent by a little bunch of carnations which Goga handed to the queen.

There were no flags flying in Bucharest, no guard of honor, no military turn-out—only a chilly city quite unaware of its sovereign's return.

36 Indicted In Lottery Pool Probe

Boston, December 4.—(AP)—After an investigation of baseball and clearing house pools 36 defendants resident in Massachusetts and New York were under secret indictment today on charges of conspiracy to ship lottery tickets between states.

The federal grand jury had been investigating the so-called Albany and Hudson pools for two days.

Federal authorities claim to have found evidence that the pools contributed $15,000 to the republican campaign fund in the recent New York state election.

Investigators also said that another pool with headquarters in Albany, N. Y., was believed to have contributed to the democratic election fund during the New York state campaign, and expressed hope that information regarding the activities of the organization would be obtained from persons now under indictment.

MILWAUKEE WARS ON LAKE DIVERSION

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Wisconsin, and particularly Milwaukee, carried the brunt of the attack against Chicago's water diversion program at today's hearing before Charles E. Hughes, special master appointed by the supreme court. Witnesses who discussed the effect of a lowering of the Lake Michigan level on Milwaukee harbor, contributed the bulk of the testimony.

J. T. Weldon, field engineer of the Milwaukee harbor commission, said that 16 miles of water front property surveyed under direction of the commissioin had revealed frequent traces of impaired wharves or rotting due to exposure following a drop in the water level.

Expenditures incurred by the city through dredging operations required to keep channels navigable were estimated by Frank A. Kaiser, the commission's chief engineer, at $380,000 for the past 10 years.

Mr. Kaiser estimated the ultimate cost of Milwaukee's projected outer and inner harbor at $50,000,000. He believed that a continued lowering of the lake level would seriously impede the construction and future operation of the harbor.

AD EXPERT SEES MIGHTY ATLANTA

ery, hydraulic machinery, metal and wood work, cement, paper, crayon, paint, furniture, linoleum and other products cheaper than most sections of the country, because Atlanta has these resources at her front door.

Paying a tribute to the Presidents' club as a wonderful organization in linking up the various agencies that make for Atlanta's progress, Mr. Neal also complimented the "Forward Atlanta" commission by saying that no other city in the country is using the business press with the intelligence and foresight of Atlanta.

Following Mr. Neal's remarks, other speakers joined in an expression of the value of Atlanta's advertising. Ivan Allen, head of the campaign last year, declared that Atlanta's first national advertising campaign paid better than any other drive in the history of the city. The money was raised without any trouble, and "look at the results," he cried, pointing to a poster which bore in large letters the words: "36 new industries."

William Candler, chairman of the drive, drew attention to an enormous birds-eye view of Atlanta painted by Walter G. Kurtz, of Atlanta, and which stood at one end of the dining hall. "That picture is unfinished, as there was not time enough to finish it before this meeting. But to me," Mr. Candler declared, "it represents Atlanta, for Atlanta will never be finished."

The slogan of the three-year campaign will be: "Yes, I will keep Atlanta on my payroll," continuing the thought of the 1925 campaign: "I will put Atlanta on my payroll," Mr. Candler said.

W. D. Hoffman, president of the chamber of commerce, declared that the chamber of commerce has a live industrial or commercial prospect every day as the result of the 1925 campaign, and that the president-elect of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and the president of that city's real estate board were recently visitors in Atlanta to study this city's advertising plan. He said that the chamber of commerce has sacrificed itself for the benefit of the advertising drive, but that it, like all other Atlanta organizations and enterprises, will gain in the end as a result of the campaign through the bringing of new blood and money into the Gate City.

Newspapermen Speak.

James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution; Major John S. Cohen, of The Journal, and F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, of The Georgian, pledged the support of the Atlanta newspapers to three-year drive. In this connection Mr. Hollomon pointed out that the romance of every great business revolves around correct advertising, and that the investment in Atlanta's advertising has paid the biggest dividends of any other investment he has ever seen.

Harry Tipton, of the Southern Bakeries; L. H. Beall, of Sears-Roebuck company, and Raymond Kline, of the R. H. Macy & Co. organization, made short addresses. George West, director of the general sales organization of the campaign last year, was the last speaker on the program, giving a benediction for the success of the drive.

Posters advertising the results of last year's drive were exhibited upon the walls, and a map of Atlanta in 1892, from a bird's-eye view, was exhibited to show the contrast between the Gate City of that day and today. Reports of the 1925 campaign were distributed in printed form.

Workers To Meet.

With organization work practically completed on the campaign for a three-year $1,000,000 advertising fund, a call was issued Saturday for a general meeting of the entire sales body, committeemen and directors of the drive to be held Friday night for the purpose of receiving instructions.

Although little time remains before the opening, on December 14, of the intensive four-day campaign, directing heads of the organization Saturday expressed assurance that everything will be in readiness, as prompt action has brought success in doing two weeks work in one following the action of last Monday when the drive was authorized by the "Forward Atlanta" commission.

Since the decision to conduct the campaign was reached, William Candler, chairman of the drive, and W. R. C. Smith, who originated the "Forward Atlanta" idea, have been in almost constant session with Ivan Allen, chairman of the commission, and President W. D. Hoffman, of the chamber of commerce.

Jaynes Due Today.

Frank E. Jaynes, educational director of the American City bureau and the fourth member of the bureau's staff in charge of campaign headquarters, will arrive today in Atlanta to spend two weeks speaking before local organizations about the meaning of the movement from the standpoint of an outsider.

Campaign headquarters have been opened on the sixth floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, with Daniel H. McFarland, vice president of the American City bureau, in charge, assisted by two other staff members of the organization.

An air of confidence prevades campaign leaders because of the attitude expressed by letter or in person by hundreds of men prominent in Atlanta's commercial life. Many of these have offered to double their subscriptions of last year. Campaign leaders point out that the background of this year's drive is altogether different from that of 1925. "A year ago," it was said, "the campaign was considered a doubtful experiment. This year, the wisdom of carrying on a national advertising campaign has been proven to the satisfaction of everyone, and hundreds of people who last year doubted its wisdom are now among its heartiest supporters. The mental state of the community was at a low ebb when the first campaign was conducted in October of last year, while now there is a considerable feeling of optimism throughout the city."

City and County Officials Attend Barbecue Celebrating Opening of New Fire Station

Atlanta's new fire station in the tenth ward is shown in the above picture with a part of the crowd which Saturday attended a barbecue given to celebrate the official opening by Alderman Charles M. Ford. At the top members of the fire board, Chief W. B. Cody and Mayor-elect I. N. Ragsdale are parking on the giant new pump, which will be located at the station. Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, chairman of the Atlanta fire board; Mr. Ford, W. E. Saunders, Ben T. Huiett and Tom C. Morris, other members of the board. Chief Cody and Mr. Ragsdale are seen devouring a quantity of the barbecue. The house, constructed at a cost of $16,500, with the pump draped with youngsters, is pictured below. The new house is one of the most modernly equipped and up-to-date of the city's fire-fighting structures.

Members of city council and Fulton county commissioners, heads of departments of the city and county government and other prominent Atlantans Saturday attended a barbecue given by Alderman Charles M. Ford in celebration of the formal opening of fire station No. 20 in the tenth ward.

Mr. Ford is a member of the fire board and was one of the staunch champions of the new project, designed to offer protection to the Sylvan Hills section of the city. It was built at a cost of $16,500 at the intersection of Dill and Stewart avenues just at the entrance to Capitol View manor.

More than four score guests attended the barbecue, which was spread inside the engine house, while the giant fire pump occupied a secondary position on the outside of the building.

Mr. Ford was master of ceremonies and introduced members of the fire board, Mayor-elect I. N. Ragsdale and members of the new fire company to the feasting audience.

In addition to the officials, pastors of all churches in the tenth ward were invited to the dinner.

40 BILLION FRANC BUDGET PASSED

Paris, December 4.—(AP)—While the rise in the franc is causing business depression, Premier Poincare has accomplished his self-imposed task of having France's largest budget passed by parliament in the shortest time in show of hands voted the appropriations history.

The premier three weeks ago set December 3 as the date for the adoption of the appropriations, totaling 40 billion francs, and he was only three hours behind schedule when the chamber at 3 o'clock this morning by a tions a a whole. The haste of the premier in driving through the budget was due to the fact that he desired that the income side might be approved and the budget become law on New Year's day.

Since he started his work of getting the budget out of the way three weeks ago, the premier has kept the noses of the deputies to the grindstone week days and Sundays.

The premier's rosy budget provisions are not shared by all, however. This is notably true in business and financial circles. The rapid rise in the exchange rate on the franc yesterday was attributed to the success with which M. Poincare's budget proposals were going through the chamber of deputies.

The phenomenal rise in the value of the franc within the last few months seemingly threatens another economic crisis, like that of last July, when the franc fell to the lowest levels on record. Serious business depression and unemployment have followed the rise, which brought the unit of value to 25.82 to the dollar yesterday, as compared with a quotation of less than 2 cents in New York in mid-July. A month ago the quotation was 31.10 to the dollar and two months ago 35.52.

MARGUERITE SYLVA UNDERGOES OPERATION

Baltimore, December 4.—(AP)—Marguerite-Sylvan, former noted opera singer, is a patient at Union Memorial hospital, where she underwent "a slight operation" a few days ago, it was learned today. She has almost completely recovered, it was announced at the hospital, and will leave there in a few days. Miss Sylva in private life is Mrs. B. L. Smith, of New York.

Addition Easy On Sunny Days Says Educator

Chicago, December 4.—(AP)—The person who is "poor at figures" can now blame the weather.

Because when skes are overcast, arithmetic becomes more difficult; when the sun is shininng, addition and subtraction is easy.

Furthermore, on sunny days, children are more mischievous. On cloudy days they are well-behaved.

And on days when the sun is hidden students excel at reading and history; while on lighter days, these subjects are more difficult.

These are conclusions of Principal June McConkey, of the Dante school here, from experiments at the school. The Dante school acts as a reservoir for the overflow of truants from other Chicago schools; so when Professor E. G. Dexter, of the University of Illinois, recently advanced the theory that sunny days were conducive to mischievousness, Principal McConkey tried out the theory. The additional theories were drawn as results of the trials.

Deep Sea Pirates Prey on Rum Ring Ships Off Miami

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Deep-sea pirates are again roaming the Atlantic and so far they have been successful.

Coast guardmen went in pursuit today and believe they have cornered the mystery ship of Gun Cay, an uninhabited spot 60 miles off Miami.

Reports received here say the vessel has been fitted up to give the appearance of a United States coast guard ship, by which ruse it has been able to get within range of its victims. Its disguise, however, is not complete for it is supposed to be flying the French flag.

So far, the pirates seem to have confined their principal attention to the hi-jacking of rum runners. Gun Cay is known as a resort for traders who carry on their operations without license and it is understood the pirates have been raiding there. Some complaints of operations against regular merchants also have been received but these told of no serious harm.

TO ADDRESS BOTTLERS

JOHN C. JEFFORDS.

He will represent the National Bottlers' association at the annual convention of the Georgia Bottlers' association at Hotel Gordon, Albany, December 6-7, and will talk on "Organization in the Bottled Carbonated Beverage Industry." He is from Wichita, Kan.

HUNTSVILLE LEGION TO PLAY SANTA CLAUS

Huntsville, Ala., December 4.—(Special.)—The American Legion post of this city and county has announced that it will devote practically all of its holiday activities to charity and that one of is holiday feaures will be a Christmas tree in the Huntsville high school for destitute children.

FARM CONVENTION TO DEMAND HELP

Chicago, December 4.—(AP)—Farmers from throughout the country gathered here tonight for the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Arrangements were made to receive 3,000 representatives of 1,000,000 farm families in 45 states.

The convention will open Monday with farm relief legislation, the demand for which has been kept alive throughout the year by scores of regional and group meetings, decidedly the foremost subject to be considered.

"Farm relief is not any longer considered an emergency matter," said Samuel H. Thompson, of Quincy, Ill., president of the A. F. B. F. "The foremost subject in the minds of agriculture and in the minds of the business people today is that of proper adjustment of the agricultural industry in our economic life."

No election of officers or other organization politics confronts the delegates and they therefore will be enabled to give full time to consideration of their own problems and methods for remedying them. Mr. Thompson was chosen last year for a two-year term.

Among the speakers named in a long list of prominent teachers, business men, editors, industrial engineers, farm experts and marketing officials is Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who long has wielded cudgels in behalf of the agrarians.

Rye, Bourbon Will Comprise Liquor Stock

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Rye and Bourbon will comprise America's future legal whisky stock under the plan of Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of the dry forces.

He will propose to congress organization of a corporation to resume manufacture of medicinal liquor at two distilleries—one for rye and the other for bourbon.

But there will be no more of the new liquor than is necessary for medicinal requirements, Andrews assured dry leaders today. As a result of his conference Friday with the legislative committee of the various organizations interested in enforcement of the prohibition laws, he announced he would incorporate a safeguard provision in his proposal.

"The proposed medicinal spirits corporation," he declared, "will include a section to the effect that nothing in the proposed act shall change any of the provisions of the existing laws as to replenishment of the present supply of medicinal spirits, except that when the commissioner of internal revenue, as provided in existing laws, shall determine that the time has come to manufacture new supplies, he shall direct the proposed medicinal spirits corporation and none other to manufacture these spirits.

"This manufacturing shall be done in two designated distilleries only, one for rye and one for bourbon, and neither of these distilleries shall be located in any state, whose laws prohibit the use of medicinal spirits."

Police Chief Busy, So Tried By Telephone

Belmar, N. J., December 4.—Police Chief L. J. McCormick was too busy to come to court today to face a charge of assault, so he was tried by telephone.

Justice of the Peace M. L. Ferris read the warrant over the phone. McCormick pleaded not guilty and waived examination. He was held in $200 bail.

McCormick was accused by a citizen who charged the chief handled him roughly when he visited the jail to ask about a friend who had been arrested.

Funeral Is Held For Accident Victim Near Lawrenceville

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Etzel Breedlove, age about 13, who was accidentally killed Friday by his brother, Forrest Breedlove, two years his senior, while rabbit hunting, were held today at Hog Mountain.

It is reported that a crowd of young boys were hunting in the neighborhood where the Breedlove boys lived, four miles north of Lawrenceville, and when they jumped a rabbit. The gun of Forrest Breedlove accidentally discharged, the entire load striking his brothers' back just under the left shoulder, tearing his heart to pieces and killing him instantly. It is stated that young Breedlove is prostrated over the accident.

The deceased is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Breedlove

Missing Girl's Body Found

:: LAKE DRAGGED FOR TRACE OF COMPANION ::

Drowned; Boy Also Missing

Plymouth, Mass., December 4.—(AP) Police tonight were dragging Little pond, a small lake here, seeking to clear up the mystery of a girl's death. The body of Sara Swift, of Cliftonville, was taken from the waters of the pond today and it was believed that a youth who went motoring with Miss Swift on Monday night might also have been drowned.

On Monday night Miss Swift, who was 21 years old, was seen to enter an automobile driven by Antonio Thomas, a North Plymouth youth.

Since that time the couple had been missing and the automobile borrowed by Thomas from an uncle had not been returned. The theory that the young people had eloped was dispelled when Boy Scouts, questing about the edge of Little pond today, found first a woman's hat on the shore, and later Miss Swift's body floating in the water.

Miss Swift was last seen by a friend, Norma Holman, who accompanied her from her home Monday night when she went to do some typing. In front of the Plymouth postoffice Thomas drove up and invited the two girls to go for a drive. Miss Holman declined, but her friend accepted the offer and drove away with Thomas, promising to meet the other later in the evening.

The families of the missing couple discounted the elopment theory on the ground that neither Thomas nor Miss Swift had more than a few cents in money when they went away. There were no marks on the girl's body to indicate violence and the authorities undertook a search of the pond in the belief that Thomas had driven into the water by mistake and been drowned with the girl.

At dusk tonight no trace of the automobile had been found but the dragging was continued.

Miracle Man Finds Gold With Umbrella Rib Device

:: ALSO LOCATES BURIED SOLDIERS ::

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

Paris, December 4.—In the chubby cure of Hardelot, the good Abbe Bouly, France has a modern miracle man, a magician with a magic wand who can find from the surface the site of deeply buried rich deposits of silver and gold, coal and mercury, and has even been able with his umbrella ribs to locate the buried bodies of soldiers and of bishops buried 10 centuries.

At the present time Abbe Bouly is walking over the high plateaus of the Auvergne, in central France, hunting new leads in the rich mining districts where lead, silver and mercury were once taken out in great quantity. Following him are engineers, scientists and simple peasnanta, all ready to shout "miracle," as he points out to miners a spot where metal is found.

His "antennae" consists of a simple wand made from two joined umbrella ribs. With it he finds metals by a process which he has chosen to call "radiesthesie." This process is based upon the one theory that all objects send out the sun radiations characteristic of their nature.

To capture these rays the Abbe Bouly uses his umbrella-rib antennae, upon which he places a ring of the metal he is seeking. This ring attracts the rays of the similar hidden metal and to his trained eyes the ring reacts when directly over the source of the rays.

He was to be seen, right after the war, walking at the head of a straggling battalion of 600 Russian refugees, soldiers of the unfortunate Wrangel army. His umbrella ribs, bearing a steel ring, located under the soil thousands of dangerous high explosive shells, which were then dug out to allow the ground to be handed back to the cultivators.

His magic wand has found potash beds in Alsace and coal in the north of France. They have found traces of silver and mercury in the Auvergne and have located sources of water hidden underground.

"There is no miracle and nothing magic in my methods, only science, elementary science," Abbe Bouly explained.

"Thanks to my antennae I have been able to find anything I have ever looked for. It has located even the bodies of soldiers buried in shellholes, for bodies, like all material objects, give off rays. They sent me to Rheims, where I found with my steel ribs the ashes of several bishops who died and were buried about 1,000 A. D. I succeeded in capturing the rays of their dust.

"I have been able to describe exactly the subsoil along a new projected line for a railway. I have been able to apply the same process to the diagnosis of maladies.

"By using known germs or a piece of contaminated flesh and pointing my antennae at the patient to be examined I am able to tell by the presence or absence of radial activity whether or not the person is suffering from any particular disease."

So widely spread is the fame of this simple country priest that his services are in demand, and he has little time for his parishoners. He is called into consultation by medical his services have been used by the government. For all this he takes only a small fixed sum which he carries directly to the treasury of his little church.

'Model Film Wedding' Fails; Barthelmess Divorce Near

:: MARY HAY SUES HUSBAND IN PARIS ::

BY MARK HELLINGER.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 4.—It's come to a definite end—the six-year union between handsome Richard Barthelmess, screen star, and diminutive Mary Hay, the dancer.

Dick and Mary, who have been separated for more than a year, soon will be divorced. Dick and Mary, who once were going to prove to the world that a professional marriage could be a success.

Dick and Mary, who were going to set a beautiful example for other stars of the stage and screen.

Mary Hay has filed suit for divorce in Paris.

Her action was approved by Dick, who crossed the ocean in advance of Mary to accept service in the suit.

Dick is staying in one Paris hotel, Mary in another. And, out in California, in the care of a paid nurse, is little Mary Hay Barthelmess, 3.

Agree to Share Child.

When Dick and Mary separated in May, 1925, they agreed to share their beautiful child. Each was to have her for six months a year.

The formalities required by the French divorce laws having been complied with, Dick is preparing to sail for America on December 6. When Mary will return to continue her career as a dancer is uncertain.

Both Dick and Mary are finished with denials. Each wants freedom. And henceforth they will pursue separate paths. They may choose new companions for, since their estrangement, their names have been linked with various persons.

Last August, Patsy Ruth Miller boldly announced in Hollywood that she was engaged to Barthelmess. Patsy said she was going to marry Dick the next minute after he secured a divorce.

And Dorothy Dunbar, Dick's leading lady, has been the recipient of noticeable attention from Barthelmess recently.

Many Get Attention.

Last winter, in Palm Beach, the former Millicent Rogers, Countess Salm, and Dick, were seen dancing and dining together so recurrently that whispers flew along the warm sands. On his return to New York, Dick hid some more denying.

Barbara Bennett, formerly Maurice's dancing partner, also won his pronounced attention.

Mary was not sitting at home in the meantime. Far from it. For a time she danced blithely with Clifton Webb, in Europe. Then she danced blithely with Clifton Webb in New York. She intends to keep on dancing. With Clifton, say her friends.

Dick Barthelmess and Mary Hay were married on June 18, 1920, in the Church of Heavenly Rest. Both were engaged in making "Way Down East" under David W. Griffith's direction. Both were very young and eager. Dick graduated from Trinity college and was reaching for a foothold on the ladder of fame. Mary, daughter of Colonel Frank Merrill Caldwell, U. S. A., had just begun her career as a dancer in the Ziegfeld Follies.

Belgium Has Recovered From Aftermath of War, Says U. S. Commissioner

Belgian Industry Flourishing, Leigh Hunt Tells Atlanta Foreign Trade Club at Annual Banquet

That Belgium has practically recovered from the effects of the war and now offers a stable market for the sale of American goods, was asserted by Leigh W. Hunt, assistant United State trade commissioner to Belgium, addressing the Atlanta Foreign Trade club at its annual banquet held Saturday evening at the chamber of commerce. H. O. Williamson, president of the club, presided.

"Today Belgium has all the money she needs, whereas six months ago she had no ready cash. With the reorganization of her finances, Belgium has gathered over a billion francs through tax levies and $100,000,000 through loans from England and the United States. This dollar fund is not being used to defray current expenses but is held as a reserve to prevent exchange fluctuations.

Belgian industries are in a remarkably flourishing condition, Mr. Hunt stated.

Industry Booming.

"It is believed that the year 1926 undoubtedly will be a record year for Belgian coal mines, with production estimated at over 25,000,000 tons," he said. "The key industries have all increased production considerably compared with their pre-war activity.

"The cotton spinning industry is now operating over 1,800,000 spindles, compared with 1,500,000 before the war, necessitating purchases of 120,000,000 pounds of cotton annually. The tendency for the last three years has been slightly away from the Indian cotton toward the American staple.

"Belgium ranked thirteenth as a buyer of American products during the first six months of 1926. Our trade with Belgium is greater than that with Brazil, Chile, Norway Sweden or any one of some 50 odd countries.

Want Southern Goods.

"American firms can profit by this business in spite of the obstacle of high labor costs, tariff barriers and competition from foreign countries.

"The south produces many lines that find an excellent market in Belgium, particularly tobacco, cotton, lumber, naval stores, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, and numerous manufactured articles."

Mr. Hunt expressed keen gratification over the large interest in foreign trade manifested by southern firms on his trip through this section.

Mr. Williamson addressed the club on the outlook in world trade. He pointed to the remarkable strides the United States has made in international commerce and urged that more of our local manufacturers take steps to sell their lines abroad.

Other Speakers.

Other speakers were Armand May, president of the American Mills company and chairman of the foreign trade committee of the chamber of commerce; B. C. Getsinger, former district manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce; George A. Bland, vice president of the Retail Credit company, and T. R. Gress, assistant attorney general.

Mr. Gress introduced a resolution urging support of the bill before congress providing for the revision of the restrictive law of 1866 which forbids the importation of Cuban cigars in quantities smaller than 3,000, despite the provisions of the mail convention of 1903. The continuance of this law, Mr. Gress pointed out, will seriously threaten our trade with Cuba.

Entertainment was furnished by Fred Cooledge, who demonstrated numerous examples of parlor magic; Charles Hoke, who sang accompanied by Mrs. Hoke, and W. C. Ford, who gave an old-fashioned clog dance.

All officers of the club were re-elected to serve another term. They consist of H. O. Williamson, president; Thomas N. Morgan, vice president; Harry O. Mitchell, secretary-treasurer. The new office of assistant secretary was created and Captain Charles L. McLain was elected to fill this post.

Many Queer Musical Instruments Feature Mexican National Orchestra Performance

The Six Marin Brothers, marimba band which is part of the Tipica (national) Mexican orchestra of more than thirty performers which appears at the auditorium next Tuesday night.

Some of the queerest instruments ever concocted by the mind of man as makers of music, will be seen in Atlanta next week, when the Tipica orchestra, the Mexican national orchestra, appears at the auditorium on Tuesday night in a concert.

There is, for instance the "salterio." This is a stringed instrument, with the strings placed in sets of three, with the music produced by rings on the finger tips of the performers'.

Then there is the "bajo sexto," a form of guitar. This is named for the number of chords it will produce and is used for the great addition it makes to the strength of a stringed orchestra.

The "bandolon," is of the mandolin class, though it has three times the number of strings. Then there is a thing called a "teponaztli," made of ebony, and elaborately carved. A hollowed and thin spot, making a double springlike section is hammered with small hammers tipped with Uli, a native form of rubber.

The the "guiro," which is nothing more nor less than a long, curved gourd, with notches down one side, which are scratched with a piece of ivory. The last two instruments named have come down from the ancient Aztecs.

An important part of the orchestra is the marimba band. These instruments are played by the six Marin brothers, and they give a program of their own, between the full orchestra selections. The marimba is made of hardwood keys of varying sizes laid over cedar resonators graduated as to length and diameter. These resonators are closed except at the top and have a small hole at the bottom, covered with a thin segment of bladder. The instrument is played by striking the keys with small hammers, similar to a xylophone.

In addition to the instrumental music, the Tipica aggregation on Tuesday will present a famous Mexican male quartette, and Samuel Pedraza, the famous tenor of the country, variously styled the "Mexican McCormick," and a "vocal Valentino." Pedraza has literally "stopped the show," wherever he has sung, with his renditions of "La Golondrina," "The Rosary," "Marquetas," "La Paloma," all, of course, in Spanish.

Tickets for the engagement, which are in big demand, are now on sale at Phillips and Crew Piano company, Peachtree and Ellis streets. The sale will continue through Monday and Tuesday, moving to the auditorium box office at 6 o'clock on Tuesday, the evening of the performance. Although a large crowd is already assured, the vast seating capacity of the auditorium assures everyone of good seat location.

Season tickets for the three remaining attractions of the Artist Series, all to be given at the auditorium, are also on sale at the same place this week, through Friday. These include Feodor Chaliapin with his own company in his presentation of Rosini's famous opera, "The Barber of Seville," which comes on Tuesday, December 14. On January 14 Frieda Hempel, the "modern Jenny Lind," comes in recital, and the third on the list is Mikhail Mordkin with the Russian ballet, on March 9.

By making season reservations this week a much lower rate may be secured and patrons also enjoy priority in choice of seat location for all three engagements. The single seat sale for the Chaliapin event will open next Saturday.

Woman Sues Bridge Club

:: SAID SHE WENT WITH DIVORCED MAN ::

Members Who Ousted Her

Waukesha, Wis., December 4.—(AP) Charging she had been ousted from a bridge club in Manitowoc because of her alleged association with a divorced man, Mrs. Uda B. Lott, Oconomowoc divorcee, today filed damage suits for $5,000 each against three women members of the club. She named their husbands as co-defendants.

Mrs. Lott with her attorneys appeared at the courthouse Friday for examination under the discovery statute in her suit against Viola Stevens, and her husband, Harvey, a dentist. Other defendants are Faye Hartwell and Jennie Lardner and their husbands, D. M. Hartwell and Dr. Linford Lardner.

According to Mrs. Lott's testimony, the trouble began April 7, when Mrs. Mary Schoblaski obtained a divorce from Richard on a charge of cuelty and association with other women. No specific co-respondent was named.

She called a meeting of "the girls" —there were seven of them, she testified, to be told that they had voted her out of the club, because of her relations with Mr. Schoblaski.

"I told them that what they were saying was not true," Mrs. Lott testified.

Mrs. Lott has lived with her mother here since her husband went to Lincoln, Neb.

Jury Service for Women

:: SENTIMENTALIST CHARGE IS DENIED ::

Declared Aid to Justice

St. Louis, December 4.—(AP)—Women should see the seamy side of life by serving as jurors in the courts, Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Ohio supreme court, declared in an address today before the St. Louis League of Women Voters.

In Ohio, he said, woman jurors have raised the tone of justice and have proved they are not sentimentalists.

"It is argued against the idea of women jurors that women should not see the seamy side of life," said Judge Allen, who is the first woman in the United States to sit in a court of last resort.

"I say they can't help but see the seamy side as they go through life, and the more intelligent they are the more they see. It's better for them to see it by serving in courts than by reading of the Hall-Mills case.

"During my term as assistant prosecutor at Cleveland my superior requested me not to serve in cases involving sex. I obeyed, although there was no reason why if a girl testified before 15 men a woman of 35 should be barred. How anyone thinks the great questions of morality which affect men and women can be settled by men only is beyond me.

"As a lawyer and judge, I voice the sentiment of the bar and bench of Ohio when I say jury service for a woman has proved not only a benefit to women, but to the entire administration of criminal justice.

"I don't wish to say women in general are more intelligent than men. It seems to me that the virtue and qualities that make life worth while are pretty evenly distributed between men and women.

"With due deference to all men, women are not the emotional sex. We are more apt to cry than men—perhaps our tear ducts are larger. But the fact that they have fist fights in congress proves men are emotional as well as women. Emotionality is a human trait."

CURIOSITY COSTS BOY, FIVE, HIS LIFE

Norfolk, Va., December 4.—(AP)—Childish curiosity cost the life of 5-year-old William Stanley Eure and brought injury to several other persons here. The boy, with his brother, James, aged 3, and Thomas Day, aged 5, found an abandoned automobile gasoline tank in a field. One of them lit a match to see what was inside.

The resulting explosion blew the tank to pieces and scattered flaming gasoline over the three children. Mrs. Eure, the mother, and several neighbors suffered severe burns in extinguishing the flames. William died a short time later in a hospital. The other two are expected to recover. All are residents of Portsmouth.

The tank that exploded had been lying in a vacant field several months and was thought to have been empty.

EDITOR DALE FOUND GUILTY OF LIBEL

Muncie, Ind., December 4.—(AP)—George R. Dale, Muncie publisher, was found guilty of criminal libel by a jury here tonight and was fined $400 and sentenced to 90 days on the penal farm. The charge resulted from an article in Dale's newspaper concerning Raymond Warner, a member of a jury that convicted Dale some time ago for carrying concealed weapons.

Dale recently attracted wide attention by filing an appeal from his first conviction with the United States supreme court after the Indiana supreme court confirmed the lower court's decision.

A bullet was fired through the front door of the Dale home late tonight, narrowly missing members of his family, the publisher reported to the police. It is the fifth time the home has been attacked in recent weeks. The editor, his wife and two daughters were in the front room at the time. The bullet traversed two rooms.

Diabetics

If you have the slightest symptoms of Diabetes—such as excessive thirst, inordinate hunger, with loss of weight in spite of keen appetite, with nervousness, irritability, restlessness, anxiety over trifles and loss of strength—lose no time in reading one of the most remarkable books of the day, "Is Diabetes Curable?"

It will be mailed free to anyone who will send merely name and address to Sanborn Laboratories, 536, Y. M. C. A. Building, Battle Creek, Michigan. It describes the Sanborn home treatment and relates the experiences of men and women of national prominence who restored themselves to perfect health after other treatments had failed.

The book has 73 pages bound in board covers and is a mine of authentic information for those who are suffering from Diabetes.—(adv.)

TWO ACQUITTED IN MORSE TRIALS

New York, December 5.—(AP)—The jury in the Morse mail frauds trial was discharged shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, when after deliberating since 1 p. m. yesterday, it reported a verdict of not guilty for two of the defendants and disagreement on the other four.

The jurors said the two men they had found not guilty were George W. Burditt and Henry E. Boughton, but were unable to agree on the other four defendants, Rupert M. Much and Benjamin W., Erwin A. and Harry F. Morse, sons of Charles W. Morse.

COX WILL ADDRESS PERSONNEL MEETING

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory university, will be principal speaker at the Personnel association's meeting next Friday night at 6 o'clock, according to an announcement made Saturday by George H. Phillips, president of the Personnel association.

The president of the Personnel association has extended an invitation to persons interested in the psychology of personnel work to attend these meetings. The next meeting will be held at the Peacock cafe at the corner of Peachtree and Edgewood at 6 o'clock Friday night, December 10. Reservations should be made in advance through the secretary, Mrs. Lula Sims, who can be reached at the Adair Realty and Trust company, Walnut 0100.

The Agnes Scott chorus will present the entertainment feature of the evening. Members of the association are urged to send in their reservations at the earliest possible moment, as a large attendance is expected at this meeting.

Dr. Cox's subject will be "The Aims of Psychology in Industry." Dr. Cox is an authority both in the field of psychology and personnel work. He has been a professor of psychology at Harvard university and was also dean of the Teachers' college at the University of Florida. During the world war he was district supervisor of personnel methods for the Students Army Training corps in the southeastern district.

C. M. E. CONFERENCE TO GET APPOINTMENTS

Woodbury, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The features for Sunday in the Colored Methodist conference will be the sermon at 11 o'clock by Bishop Carter, the ordination of elders, reading of special resolutions, the educational mass meeting in behalf of Paine college library building at Augusta, Ga., and the reading of the appointments of the pastors.

The educational sermon was preached today by Rev. Earl Dye, of Cordele. Those appearing upon the program in the educational mass meeting will be the bishop, Mayor Jones, the pastor of the Methodist church, south, J. A. Martin, and others.

Special resolutions were passed yesterday asking the state and the public spirited citizens to see to it that better educational facilites are given to colored citizens.

MAN BADLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

LeRoy Anderson, who gave his address as Cincinnati, Ohio, was taken to Grady hospital early Sunday morning with a fractured shoulder, a broken left arm and bruises and lacerations about the head and face after an automobile in which he was riding crashed into the river bridge at Bolton, on the Marietta road.

A companion of Anderson, whose name was not given to hospital attaches, was slightly injured in the accident.

According to County Officers Vinson and Wilson, who were pursuing the car in which the two men were riding, the automobile was traveling at a rate of speed of not less than 60 miles an hour and when the brakes were suddenly applied the car swerved to one side of the road and crashed into the bridge over the Chattahoochee river. The car was almost completely wrecked.

The officers' attention was first attracted to the car by the suspicious actions of the occupants in Inman yards. They gave chase, but when only a short distance from Inman yards the fugitives stepped on the gas and the chase, which lasted for several miles, ended only in the crash at the river.

30,000 JEWISH WOMEN IN HADASSAH DRIVE

With the membership drive of the Atlanta chapter of the Hadassah at the height of its activities, Mrs. Sam E. Levy, president of the local chapter and Mrs. L. J. Levitas, chairman of its membership campaign, recently returned from a regional conference at Chattanooga, where it was learned that 240 chapters of the Hadassah, the woman's zionist organization, in the United States, were working to double their membership by January 1, 1927.

"There are 30,000 Jewish women in this country engaged in the inspired work of the Hadassah," Mrs. I. Kuniansky, local publicity chairman, stated, adding that "The organization has grown by leaps and bounds because of its vast service to a noble cause. Today there are four scientifically equipped, non-sectarian hospitals being supported by the Hadassah in Palestine. An ultra-modern nurses training school has been established in Palestine, where graduate nurses can be trained from natives who understand the Palestinian needs.

"The Hadassah also boasts of 12 infant welfare stations in the historic lands, which have decreased infant mortality considerably, and which are daily distributing milk gratis to Arab, Jew and Christian. These stations also have trained women prepared to render valuable assistance to uninformed mothers.

"Increased activity of this character will result from the expansion of the organization now going on in this country. The Atlanta chapter is forging ahead and expects to lead the south in acquiring new members for the Hadassah.

VIRGINIAN TO SPEAK TO EMORY GRADUATES

YALE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER WEDS ROCKEFELLER KIN

New Haven, Conn., December 4.—Prominent society folk and representatives of the wealth of the Rockefellers attended the wedding today of Miss Marion Angell, daughter of the president of Yale university, to William Rockefeller McAlpin. The bridegroom is a grand-nephew of John D. Rockefeller.

Bishop Brewster, Connecticut performed the ceremony. McAlpin is a Princeton graduate, while Miss Angell attended Bryn Mawr.

A new beauty still further above the commonplace

In its alluring smartness and beauty the new, finer Chrysler "70" forecasts the new vogue in motoring design even more definitely than the first Chrysler did three years ago.

Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies—newer, more distinctive silhouette with military front and cadet visor (see illustration)—newer luxury of comfort—newer, greater riding ease—newer richness of upholstery—newer, finer hardware—newer refinements in controls and lighting—newer, more attractive color blendings far in advance of current harmonies.

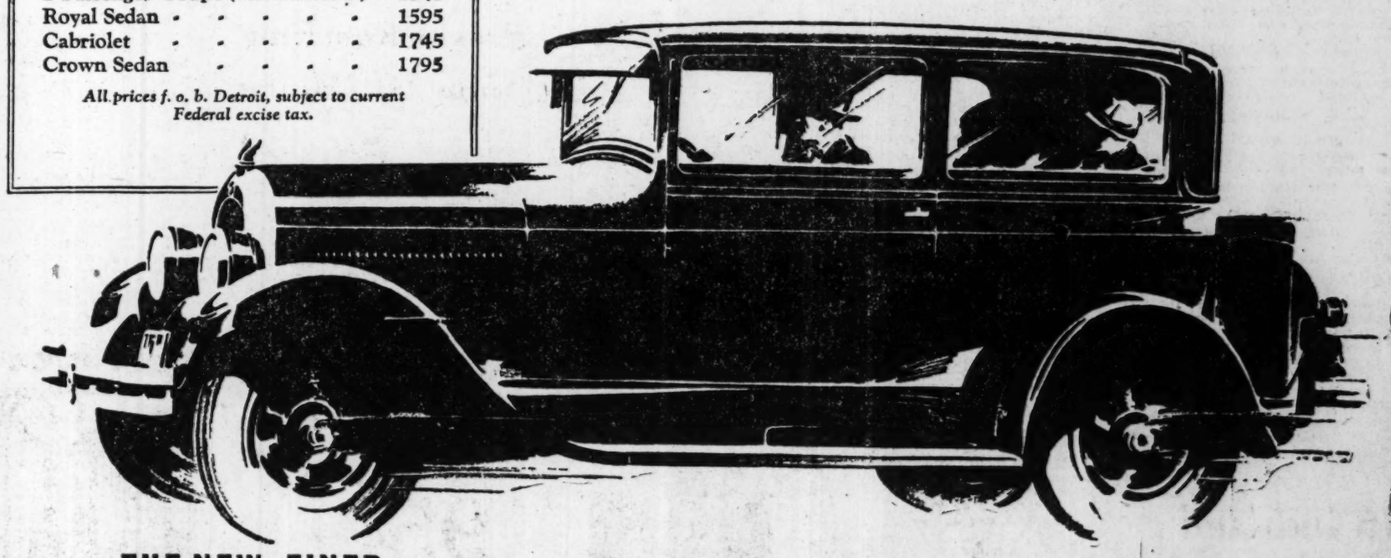

And with this newer appearance is the famous chassis—unchanged save for valuable refinements—whose basic performance, dependability and long life have been proved for three years by hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic owners.

July	12.10	12.29	12.05	12.29	12.18

New York, December 4.—(AP)—A further decline in the cotton market at the opening today was checked by covering and a little more trade buying at 11.55 for January contracts, rallies followed, January selling up to 11.84 and closing at 11.80. The general market closed steady at net advances of 9 to 19 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 1 point on December, but generally 2 to 10 points lower. Some buying on the steadier showing of Liverpool was quickly supplied by continued southern hedging and further liquidation of old long accounts.

All months made new low records for the season, December selling off to 11.85 or 5 points net lower in the first few minutes, while later deliveries showed net declines of 10 to 12 points, May selling at 12.02. Recent sellers seemed disposed to take profits for over the week-end, or in advance of the approaching government report, while the lower prices also appeared to bring in a little more trade demand, sufficient to absorb offerings.

Prices rallied later, December selling up to 12.11 and May to 12.28, net advances of about 14 to 21 points on active positions.

Last prices were a little off from the best under realizing by early buyers, but there was very little southern selling in evidence here after the first half hour, although early wires from the south reported an easing basis.

Private cables said there had been active liquidation of near months in Liverpool but that the decline had induced covering by shorts and continental buying.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 155,000 bales, against 120,000 last year.

Part of the buying on the early decline here was attributed to belief that the market had discounted some increases in the estimate of the crop and the technical position of the market had been strengthened by the heavy liquidation of the past week.

NEW ORLEANS MARKET ACTIVE BUT LOWER.

New Orleans, December 4.—(AP)—The cotton market was fairly active for a short Saturday session and although prices eased off 10 to 13 points in the early trading on the expectation of overnight selling orders, they rallied sharply due to the oversold condition of the market which presented a firm technical condition, to profit taking and covering and also on good trade buying, the recent decline having attracted demand for investment and for meeting forward requirements on the part of the trade. This rally advanced prices 29 points from the lows.

Liverpool was better than due and first trades here showed unchanged to 2 points down. The market eased off after the execution of overnight selling and hedging, December trading to 11.57, January 11.58 and March to 11.72, or 10 to 13 points below the close yesterday.

The later rally carried December up to 11.86, January to 11.87 and March to 12.01 or 29 points on all months up from the lows and 16 to 19 points above the previous close. Prices eased off 2 to 3 points in the final trading and the close was steady a shade under the best of the day.

Candler Conducts Campaign To Help Stabilize Cotton

In a unique advertising campaign in which he seeks to help stabilize the cotton market Walter T. Candler, distinguished Atlanta business man and sportman is waging an aggressive movement to stress upon the people of the south and the nation the numerous advantages that will come through an increase in the consumption of cotton wearing apparel and cotton goods of all kinds.

Mr. Candler is spending personally a large amount of money in promoting public interest in the superiority of cotton goods of many kinds and of the numerous benefits which will come from an increase in the use of cotton manufactured articles, both in the economy to the purchasers as well as to the stabilization of the cotton market which is a vital factor in the business growth of the south at the present time.

In newspaper advertisements and billboard advertising Mr. Candler is taking the lead in pointing out the benefits to be derived from increased consumption of cotton products. He is taking a step which is an example to the other cotton manufacturers of the south and in many ways is doing a big work for the entire cotton growing section of the country.

Mr. Candler is one of the leading figures in the cotton manufacturing industry and many other men with large holdings in this industry are watching the progress of his movement with a view toward cooperating with similar campaigns with an end in view of stimulating public interest in the need of using cotton goods at this time.

In his advertisements Mr. Candler points out that the old law of supply and demand is the chief factor in determining the price of cotton and shows that increased consumption of cotton manufactured products automatically will enlarge the demand and inevitably react with better prices for the raw product and a stabilization of the entire market.

At this time the movement is of vital interest, not only to the farmers who produce cotton but to jobbers, merchants, business men and bankers of the south. At the same time use of cotton products made from raw supplies, produced in this section, will result in economies for the individual purchasers which necessarily will have an indirect, yet powerful effect, in improving conditions in general.

In taking this far-sighted course, Mr. Candler believes he can contribute something tangible to the permanent stabilization of the cotton industry. When the attention of the buying public of the south is attracted to the numerous advantages to be derived from this course and when the increase in the use of cotton goods of all kinds is general throughout the south, a factor will be added to the marketing of cotton, which is certain in the belief of experts, to have a direct effect on the stabilization of the market in future years.

OCTOBER EXPORTS SHOW DECREASE

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Decline in the value of American exports for October, as compared with a year ago, was shown in commerce department figures today to have been due largely to a decrease in European buying.

Part of the recession was accounted for by lower prices for cotton and wheat, the quantities bought by Europe showing little change.

Imports to the United States during October increased materially as compared with last year from all parts of the globe, with the exception of those from Asia. The decline there was due more to a fall in the price of rubber than to an increase of American consumption.

The following comparisons of exports and imports for October, 1926 and October, 1925 were made:

Exports.	October 1926	October 1925
Europe	$235,577,936	$282,668,813
North America	102,535,440	90,483,673
South America	32,936,654	31,131,801
Asia	55,307,463	55,758,047
Oceania	19,969,131	17,662,394
Africa	9,148,120	6,861,086
Imports.
Europe	$118,305,853	$115,691,631
North America	92,799,646	81,949,826
South America	50,381,426	38,984,033
Asia	109,010,273	127,574,281
Oceania	3,710,651	6,337,116
Africa	3,542,116	3,509,127

Purchases of the United Kingdom from the United States were $97,630,545 against $121,302,823 last year. United Kingdom exports to the United States were $33,637,219 against $37,733,036.

Germany bought in the United States during the month goods to a value of $47,003,999; last year the figures were $56,481,166. German exports to the United States were $17,750,318 against $13,702,528.

Dry Goods.

New York, December 4.—New prices will be named on chambrais for work shirts on Monday by the largest producers. Mill stocks are light. Cotton goods generally have healthy tone to an unsettled cotton market. The gray goods demand was light. Yarns were barely steady. Burlaps were firm for spot shipments. Large imports and consumption of raw silk continue. Silk fabrics were quiet and hosiery and underwear of silk steady. New prices named on cotton underwear for fall are from 12½ to 15 per cent under a year ago. Linens were steady.

New York, December 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Trading in the bond market quieted down today at the end of a week notable both for a rise in prices to the year's highest level and the absorption of nearly $25,000,000 of new offerings. A firm undertone was maintained but the buying movement began to taper off in most sections of the list.

French obligations held their recent gains as the franc mounted to the year's best price near the 4-cent level. Other foreign bonds also behaved well, the Belgian 7s holding around the year's peak and Mexican issues making further recovery.

Warner Sugar 7s displayed independent strength on reports that the company was emerging from its recent difficulties. The first mortgage bonds gained more than a point and the refunding issue climbed more than 2 points to above 75, nearly 20 points above the year's low.

Railroad liens forged slowly ahead with a good demand in evidence for such issues as Pennsylvania 6 1-2s, New York, Ontario & Western general 4s, International Great Northern adjustment 6s, Atchison general and convertible 4s and most of the St. Paul junior obligations.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, December 4.—There is little to say about today's session. Those issues which are intrinsically entitled to go up did so. And week-end profit-taking developed where it was logical to expect it. We see no reason to change any of our views either on the market as a whole or towards the various groups.

Cotton Letters.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, December 4.—Cables this morning were slightly better than due but there was further selling pressure at the opening. This was absorbed by the trade who had a larger volume of orders at limits reached today than at any time this week. It soon appeared that this buying was sufficient to absorb the offerings and the market began to steady up. Final prices were at an advance over last night's closing levels. The news tickers printed a statement that the tire companies and the automobile companies were heavy buyers in the south yesterday, but this report had not been confirmed up to the close of business.

The most adverse feature in the market continues to be the estimate of the bureau due on Wednesday next. It is naturally expected this will be larger than the last estimate. Fortunately this is the last production estimate of the season and this unsettling influence upon business will be removed at least for this year. No one is inclined to quarrel with the government figures, but the frequency of the reports required by the present law is certainly disturbing to orderly business.

Liverpool futures are due on Monday: January, 6.31; March, 6.40.

In the last half of February there were signs of something more than the usual after-holiday slowing down in general trade. The stock market started to sell off. But this selling apparently had run its course by March 1. On the second day of March trading in stocks for the first four hours was very quiet with the price changes very narrow. In the last four hours that day, without a word of news, the bottom suddenly dropped out of the market, the ticker running for 52 minutes after the close of the market and with the turnover for the full five hours over three million shares.

Long after the close it was learned from Washington dispatches that the interstate commerce commission had refused to approve the Nickel Plate merger. For the rest of March the liquidation in the stock market was the most violent witnessed since the post war deflation period stating in 1920 with the average price down 30 points from the February 13 high before the bottom was reached.

Bottom Knocked Out.

This is the story of what happened during the first quarter of the year. What happened afterwards is another story. The point is that with the outlook at the beginning of this year most promising wholly unexpected developments occurred which knocked the bottom out of the stock market. The unexpected developments were the increase in the rediscount rate of the federal reserve bank here, the publication of an official statement of broker loans with the figures higher than generally realized, a' slowing down in general trade and an adverse decision in the Nickel Plate merger.

The big outside public is not trading in and out of stocks today as it was at this time last year. Brokers' loans are high, but not as high as early this year. There are signs of a slowing down in general trade which were not in sight at this time last year. The public is heavily long of stocks paid for either outright or on substantial margin. Prices of stocks on the average are at the high level of last February.

The Day in Finance

By R. L. BARNUM

New York, December 4.—This week's stock market was two sided and extremely professional, which means that those who spend their hours from 10 to 3 standing over the ticker have conflicting views regarding the next important price trend. On one side pools and individual professional traders long on stocks are doing their best to make an active Christmas market. On the other side there is professional short selling of stocks feeling for the top.

Those who are bidding up stocks believe the upward price movement will continue in 1927. Those who are selling stocks short are of the opinion that the first quarter of 1927 will be more or less a repetition of what happened this year.

Just what did happen stock market-wise during the first three months of 1926? Looking back at the records it will be found that while call money ruled at 6 per cent for the first few days of this year the stock market opened strong and active with the average price of 20 representative stocks at a new high for all time. Never in the history of the country had so many recognized financial and industrial leaders agreed at the opening of a new year on the promising outlook.

Planned Reluction.

It is of interest to switch briefly from the stock market to the cotton market to recall that on January 4 a large meeting of cotton planters and bankers was held at Atlanta at which a resolution was unanimously adopted that in view of the large cotton crop just harvested—it was 16,135,000 bales against the high record for all time of 16,200,000 bales for 1914—there would be a reduction of 25 per cent in acreage planted to cotton with greater diversification of crops. This year's crop of 18,400,000 bales shows to what extent the good new year resolutions were kept.

At the end of the first week of this year the rate on call money had dropped from six per cent to four with plenty offered outside at 3 1-2.

This, with the big outside public heavily interested in the stock market on the long side, had a stimulating influence. Trading was heavy with the average at a new high. But the very next day there was very heavy selling of stocks on the unexpected increase in the re-discount rate of the Federal Reserve bank here from 3 1-2 per cent to 4.

January 19 Governor Strong of the Federal Reserve bank here, announced that acting on a request from Governor Crissinger, of the federal reserve board at Washington, the member banks in this district would in the future be asked for information for the purpose of issuing weekly reports on bank loans to brokers. Wall street made a brave effort to prove nothing new would be disclosed in the forthcoming brokers' loan statements.

Total Above Expectation.

When the first statement was published it showed a total far above what had been expected. Signs began to appear of a slowing down in the steel trade and other basic industries with the average price of commodities which had begun to decline in November, 1925, continuing the downward movement. Throughout January and early February there was talk of industrial and railroad mergers Throughout these six weeks the price trend in the stock market continued upward but with sinking spells coming more frequently. A new high average was made in February but

GANGSTERS FOUND WITH RIFLE RANGE

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, Ill., December 4.—Raiding an apparently closed saloon today, the police discovered a completely equipped rifle, shot gun and machine gun shooting range, in which South Side gangsters and hoodlums practiced and improved their technique for street work.

Three inmates, said to be members of the Ragens' Colts club, were arrested. Discovery of the shooting range was an accident. The police had captured two gangsters after they dashed into a blind alley. One of them mumbled something about a saloon to his companion, so their captors surrounded the supposedly vacant saloon and arrested the inmates.

The saloon was formerly operated by Joseph Brooks, whose bullet-riddled body was recently found on the Prairie. The place had been closed by federal injunction, but the gangsters had taken possession.

In the large basement, the floor was literally carpeted with empty cartridge shells. The front and two sides of the place were lined with three thicknesses of sheet steel. All the walls and the ctiling had been "deadened" against noise. One of the prisoners admitted it was the resort of professional killers, who used it frequently to brush up on their marksmanship.

100th Birthday Of Vaudeville Observed Today

Chicago, December 4.—Exactly 100 years ago Friday, vaudeville was born.

The tight rope walker, the dear ingenue lead, the strong man and the mysterious master of oriental magic, the trapeze artist and the glib patter boy of the vaudeville stage—all these will begin to celebrate on Sunday the 100th anniversary of the birth of variety in this country.

Actually, the centennial got under way Friday with the placing of a wreath on the grave here of David Kinnison, revolutionary war hero, who, 78 years ago, tacked up a sign over a ramshackle building near Lake Michigan, and called the place "Mooney's Museum."

In opening the doors of Mooney's Museum Kinnison became the first vaudeville theater manager in Chicago. He died four years later at the reputed age of 115.

Beginning Sunday with "all nationalities week"—a title selected as descriptive of the personnel of the variety stage—the celebration will continue throughout the 1927 season with the center of activities in Chicago and with ramifications throughout countless cities and towns with New York and Los Angeles as the east and west termini.

Vaudeville made its first bow to America from the stage of the old Lafayette theater in New York, December 3, 1826. It had been found that the variety acts introduced between scenes of heavy plays had become more popular than the plays. So the old theater originally devoted to the drama changed its policy and inaugurated vaudeville.

TYSON DEMANDS ACTION ON WATER POWER PERMITS

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—A demand for action on water power permits in the east Tennessee valley has been made upon the federal power committee by Senator Tyson, democrat, Tennessee, who said today that numerous applications for power development on Tennessee tributaries had been pigeonholed by the commission. He understood opposition to the claims was coming from sources interested in Muscle Shoals and declared he was "tired" of proposed Muscle Shoals operations holding up the progress of the whole Tennessee valley.

Senator Tyson expressed the hope that he would be able to clear up the situation at the approaching session of congress.

SENATORS PLAN FIGHT ON M'LEAN REAPPOINTMENT

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Another fight over the confirmation of a presidential appointee loomed at the capital today with senators discussing the case of A. V. McLane, whose reappointment as district attorney for the middle district of Tennessee is pending.

Opposition to him which will be led by Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, rose out of his handling of charges that Representative Taylor, republican, Tennessee, solicited campaign funds from federal appointees. The charges, which have passed through various federal agencies, and the republican national committee, finally reached a grand jury in Tennessee, some weeks ago, but no action was taken.

BIG DAY PASSED BY YOUNGSTERS AT STOCK SHOW

Chicago, December 04.—(AP)—For the kids it was a great day at the International Live Stock exposition. Fully 25,000 of them played havoc with the exhibits, exhibitors, guards and officials as they milled about the exposition grounds accompanied by an unroar that only pleasure bent children can make.

Nothing was unnoticed and little untouched. Small hands delved into prize-winning grain exhibits; pockets were filled with precious corn. Pamphlets, papers and magazines disappeared and the great amphitheater soon resembled a halloween fete. Pandemonium reigned.

FINGER OPERATION RESTORES, SPEECH, HEARING OF MUTE

London, December 4.—An operation upon Ernest Babbage's little finger restored his speech and hearing.

After having been mute for five years, Babbage ran a splinter into his finger. He was operated upon at St. Bartholomew's, and as he emerged from the ether exclaimed:

"I'm all right."

Some subconscious shock had brought back his powers of speech, and he now can hear as well as ever.

Mouse Creates Havoc.

Allentown, Pa.—Electricians and millwrights employed in a huge factory here were mystified when the electric lights went out and the machinery ceased to function. It was some hours before the mystery was solved. The mischief-maker was a tiny mouse that had wandered into one of the delicate parts of a large dynamo, causing a short circuit that put the generator out of business. The loss in production was several thousand dollars, and, in life, one mouse.

BERGER IS NAMED STUDENT LEADER

Ann Arbor, Mich., December 4.—(AP) Fred Berger, University of Cincinnati Literary college senior, was elected president of the National Student Federation of America at its business session today.

Berger remains in the college ranks next year as a law student. He succeeds Lewis Fox, of Princeton and Harvard.

Six members of the executive committee were chosen at regional conferences. They were:

New England—Chandler Wright, Tufts College.

Middle Atlantic—J. M. Budd, Franklin and Marshall.

South—H. C. Chappell, University of North Carolina.

East Central—J. W. Rippon, Toledo university.

West Central—Mildred Boie, University of Minnesota.

Far West—Laura Thompson, Mills College.

'Big Four' Plan For Conference Is Abandoned

Paris, December 4—(AP)—The much-talked-of "Big Four" conference, with Premier Mussolini, of Italy, sitting in with M. Briand, Sir Austen Chamberlain and Gustav Stresemann, the foreign ministers of France, Great Britain and Germany, respectively, has apparently come to nothing, if indeed it was ever contemplated.

Mr. Vandervelde, the Belgian statesman, disposed of the matter by asserting, after a long talk with M. Briand this afternoon, that there was no thought of such a conference. He and M. Briand, however, discussed nearly everything coming before the League of Nations council, over which M. Vandervelde will preside.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, Dr. Stresemann and M. Briand are expected to have an important conference, although officially no such conference is planned. It is taken for granted that these three leaders are likely to talk things over informally; they will know how to meet by chance, if there is objection to a formal prearranged affair.

M. Briand is understood to have objections to talk of a conference of three or four as discourteous to others interested in German problems, particularly Belgium. Whatever may occur the allies ought to have their ideas pretty well digested and be in accord by now, for M. Briand, Sir Austen Chamberlain, M. Vandervelde and M. Zaleski, the Polish foreign minister, mulled over things yesterday and today, and all four took the train together tonight for Geneva. Germany and Italy may know by this time what these four think, for the British foreign secretary had the German and Italian ambassadors to lunch today.

M. Vandervelde said that a great part of today's talk with M. Briand was devoted to the Chinese situation, concerning which the French and Belgium views were identical. Belgium is particularly interested in Chinese affairs because the Sino-Belgian convention was denounced by the Pekin government, which apparently is trying to make a test case in order to establish a precedent for denouncing other foreign conventions when they come up for renewal.

Mother and Four Children Burned To Death in Fire

Strader, W. Va., December 4.—A mother and four children were burned to death when their home was destroyed by fire today, two weeks after the father lost his life in a coal mine accident.

The dead are:

Mrs. Velmah Tenney Koon, 28, and her children, Hartsel, Therman, Lawrence and Althea May.

The ages of the children ranged from 12 years to one year.

The family lived in a house of the Green Coal company. There being no fire department, the efforts of the neighbors to extinguish the blaze were unsuccessful. The fire started from an overturned oil lamp.

Circus Notables To Pay Ringling Final Tributes

Sarasota, Fla., December 4.—(AP)—Notables of the sawdust ring, some of them associated from the days of the two-wagon show, who have followed the Ringling fortunes to their present height, will do last homage to "The Boss" here Monday when the body of Charles Ringling is carried from the palatial Sarasota bay home to its temporary resting place in a vault at Manasota cemetery, half way between Sarasota and Bradenton.

The final resting place for the body of one of the greatest of the old school of showmen has not been determined.

Already incoming trains all bear their quota of friends of the dead circus man, promoter and financier to Sarasota. Flags were flown at half-staff over many of the business houses, public offices and hotels today.

Banks and business houses as well as city offices will be closed Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the funeral will take place.

An intimate friend, the Rev. A. E. Barnett, pastor of the Presbyterian church of this city and a chaplain in the American expeditionary forces, will conduct the service.

BAINBRIDGE HUNTERS KILL BANDED GOOSE

Bainbridge, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—A. J. Rich, P. D. Rich, T. C. Funderbunk and C. W. King, who have been on hunting trip out from Carrabelle, Fla., have returned and they report an aluminum band taken from a goose's leg bearing this inscription, "Have Faith in God. Mark 11th chapter and 22d verse. Write Box 48, Kingsville, Ont., Canada."

According to the men the band must have been placed on the goose's leg when the bird was very young for it fit so tightly the leg had to be cut for the removal of the band.

ONE CHANGE MADE IN TECH 1927 GRID SCHEDULE

Georgia Tech Plays North Carolina U. Eleven Next Season

BY CARTER BARRON.

Georgia Tech and the University of North Carolina will meet on the gridiron next season for the first time in 11 years, according to the 1927 schedule completed at Georgia Tech Saturday by officials of the school.

The North Carolina Tar Heels will replace Washington and Lee on the Jacket's football schedule. A two-year contract has been closed with the University of North Carolina with both games to be played on Grant field. The Tar Heels will invade the Jackets' bowl October 22. Negotiations have been pending for some time but were closed definitely Saturday.

With the exception of the North Carolina game, the Tech schedule remains the same as past season. Oglethorpe will raise the lid of the 1927 football season for the Yellow Jackets and will be followed by the V. M. I. Cadets. Tulane comes next on the Tornado's list. The Green Wave has two more games to contest with the Jackets, both to be played on Grant field.

October 15 Alabama, thrice Southern conference champions, will invade the North Avenue bowl for the annual grid classic, and then comes the Jackets' old rivals, the University of North Carolina Tar Heels. This game will be played October 22.

Notre Dame will follow the Tar Heels.

Vanderbilt, Georgia and the old rivals, Auburn, make up the rest of the Georgia Tech schedule.

Jackets In Nashville.

The Vanderbilt Commodores will entertain the Golden Tornado in Nashville, for the second struggle of the two schools in as many years.

The last game of the three game series between the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets and the University of Georgia Bulldogs will be played in Atlanta next season at Grant field.

The Jackets and Bulldogs each have a claim on the handsome Constitution trophy, offered by Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution, for the winner of the majority of games in the three-game argument. The first year the Jackets put in the first claim by winning the opening contest, 3 to 0 when Ivan Williams booted a long field goal for the only score of the game.

Auburn will ring down the curtain for the Jackets as well as itself on Thanksgiving day on Grant field, as usual. The Tigers and Jackets have been engaging in the Turkey day classic for many years.

As usual the Jackets have one of the toughest schedules in the southern conference, meeting all of the outstanding teams in the said conference. Five of the games—the hardest ones on Tech's list—come one after the other. As said before, Alabama, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt, Georgia and Auburn are lined up together in the above order and will furnish the Jackets plenty of opposition next year. The opening games of the season are also hard ones, when one thinks it over a bit, for the first three games scheduled are not set ups. Oglethorpe, non-conference team, has been improving each season and are now running the Jackets a close race for gridiron honors in Atlanta.

Tulane's Green Wave also furnished the Golden Tornado with plenty of amusement last season and they will come back to Grant field next year a much stronger team, if all reports point to anything.

However, the Jackets will not be worried with the pile of tough games arranged for them, for they have plenty of wonderful material and should put out a good machine.

The Schedule.

September 24—Oglethorpe at Grant field.
October 1—V. M. I. at Grant field.
October 8—Tulane at Grant field (two more years).
October 15—Alabama at Grant field.
October 22—University of North Carolina at Grant field in place of W. and L. (Two-year contract, both games at Grant field.)
Ocvtober 29—Notre Dame, here.
November 5—Vanderbilt at Nashville.
November 12—Georgia at Grant field.
November 24—Auburn at Grant field.

TAR HEELS SCHEDULE TEN CONTESTS.

Chapel Hill, N. C., December 4.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina football team will engage in ten gridiron contests next year, including one with Georgia Tech at Atlanta, according to the schedule made public today. This year nine games were played.

The Tarheels and Tech will resume football relations after a lapse of 11 years. They will meet at Chapel Hill in 1928. The complete schedule follows:

Wake Forrest at Chapel Hill, September 25; Tennessee at Chapel Hill, October 1; Maryland at Chapel Hill, October 8; South Carolina at Columbia, October 15; Georgia Tech at Atlanta, October 22; North Carolina State at Raleigh, October 29; V. M. I. at Lexington, November 5; Davidson at Chapel Hill, November 12; Duke at Durham, November 19; Virginia at Chapel Hill, November 24.

Y. M. C. A. FIVE OPENS SEASON WITH VICTORY

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. basketeers opened their basketball season Saturday night by defeating the strong Pep class quintet 48 to 11 on the "Y" court. The winners displayed good form and condition by playing a fast passing game from start to finish. The whole team showed mid-season form and the many substitutions of the winners did not affect the large scoring. The Pep class was minus the services of their two stars in "Tubby" Allen and Emory Smith, but put up a great battle. King, at guard, was best player of the Pep cagers.

The Y. M. C. A. team started off with a rush by scoring constantly, while Braswell rung the only basket for the losers in the first half which ended 20 to 2. Nichols led in the scoring for the "Y" team with 12 points, and Captain "Urb" Wilkinson was next with 8 points. Willie O'Connor played a good game at guard for the winners. King was the outstanding star for the losers and frequently broke up the passing of the winners by his clever guarding.

Lineup and Summary.

S. S. A. A. OPENS CAGE SEASON DECEMBER 13

BY ERNEST OWEN.

On Tuesday night, December 7, at the Atlanta Athletic club, the Sunday School Athletic association will complete its plans for the basketball season. With all registrations in, 22 teams are ready to start playing Monday night, December 13.

The applications for membership will close Tuesday night and if any team outside of the association is planning to join Tuesday night will be the last opportunity they will have, for at this time a schedule committee will be appointed.

All representatives are instructed to turn in their registration lists. All teams paying registration fees will be issued membership cards at this time. Ten dollars of the referee's fee is to be paid at this time and no team will be allowed to play until this is paid. The balance of the referee fee will be payable between the sixth and seventh games. All teams that have not paid their franchise fee are requested to do so Tuesday night.

All churches are urged to have their representative present Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Athletic club, at which time the final plans will be made for opening of the season.

The S. S. A. A. will play on the A. A. C. court this year on Monday and Thursday nights.

Kentucky Gets Next S.C. Meet

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP) The University of Kentucky, at Lexington today, was awarded the next annual meeting of the southern conference. Montgomery and Nashville also extended invitations.

WHEN GRANGE AND WILSON MEET

GENEVA GAME WORK BEGUN BY PETRELS

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP) A check for a "substantial amount" was sent today by the local sports committee of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce to Oglethorpe university authorites at Atlanta to consummate the contract calling for a post-season gridiron game on New Year's day between the Petrels and Geneva college, of Beaver Falls, Pa.

The contest will be a feature of the first annual Orange Blossom festival here.

Action of the southern conference today in amending its rule on post-season football to allow its members to participate in such events, if the organization's consent is given, was received by the local sports committee as indicative that a New Year's game in the future may be arranged between a southern conference eleven and some eastern or western contender.

As the rule stands, the sports committee could invite the conference institution to play in the festival contest and the institution could ask permission of the conference.

PETRELS WILL BEGIN PRACTICE MONDAY.

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

The Oglethorpe Petrels will resume activities on Hermance field after a seven-day respite Monday in preparation for their coming struggle with the famed Geneva college eleven, conquerers of Harvard, which will be played in Jacksonville, Fla., on New Year's day. The freshmen eleven will also report to practice Monday to begin preparation for their brawl with the University of Miami's team, which will be played in Miami on the same date.

The Oglethorpe-Geneva game will probably attract wide attention, for it will furnish the basis for a comparison so far as strength is concerned between the eastern eleven and the teams of the southland. Both teams are coached by widely known mentors, and this, more than likely, will cause profound interest on the part of football authorities as well as the general sport loving public.

The Petrels, three years ago, played Centenary college and they were defeated, 12 to 0. "Bo" McMillan, all-American quarterback of a few years ago, was the Centenary coach at that time. Coach Jim Robertson, brother to the present Petrel coach, was the Oglethorpe mentor then. And this, the second game between a McMillan-coached team and Oglethorpe, will find Coach Harry Robertson attempting to avenge the defeat handed his brother by the famous "Bo."

Birds Hopeful.

The Birds entertain hopes of winning the game, and with the prospect of a clash involving many of the south's greatest football players, it should be a great one.

Grange and Company Meet Wilson's Team

Remember way back last fall when a sorrel-thatched backfield man with a vivid "77" on his football jersey monopolized the headlines?

Of course you do. You're ready to say right now that that was Red Grange. Well—he's going to play here December 14.

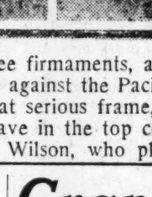

Yes, accompanied by his all-star aggregation in which Eddie Tyron scintillates, the iceman who made professional football a topic of conversation at every table and incidentally caused lots of youngsters to take a fling at it and lots of coaches to legislate against it, and then turned actor, will come to Atlanta.

He is going to oppose George Wilson's Pacific coast Wildcats, and the exhibition of football as it is not played by college teams will be given at Spiller's field a full week from Tuesday.

Of course, the magic name of Grange is lots of attraction, but the football game between these two outfits is going to be even a better one. Grange's team has been sweeping the country and has suffered one or two defeats since its formation.

On the other hand, Wilson has gathered a group of honest-to-goodness stars from various parts of the country, and between the two some real football is expected to be shown at Spiller's when the two come together.

Tough Season For Tech.

The announcement of the Georgia Tech schedule for 1927 leaves much room for discussion. Of one thing there is certainty, there will be no rest for the Jackets in 1927. The substitution of North Carolina for Washington and Lee is hardly indicative that the Tornado will have a rest on that Saturday. The Carolinians always have a big fighting team and should put up as great a battle as the Generals.

The word which comes from Florida that the southern conference schedule may be set back two weeks appears to be a good move, particularly if the Tech-Georgia scrap is set over until the last game of the season rather than where it is now.

If this is done it will permit both teams to prepare so much longer for the game and it will serve as a great climax to the season in Georgia. As the schedule is now arranged the Tech-Georgia game virtually ends interest in the rest of the season in so far as the followers of these two schools are concerned. Of course, the Thanksgiving game draws a large crowd, but the size is largely due to the fact that Thanksgiving is a holiday and there is nothing else on the program. As it is now the Georgia-Tech game is an anti-climax and is wrongly placed.

The playing of the Georgia classic early in December would be ideal from the standpoint of both teams and it should redound to the benefit of the spectators as well. It would serve to bolster interest until the final game and allow both teams to point for the game without the risk of going down in a later battle, as Georgia did this year against Alabama.

The matter of setting the season back two weeks seems to be founded on solid logic. In the north where snow is likely to adorn frozen

FORT BENNING HAS STRONG POLO OUTFIT

The polo four which will represent the Infantry school of Fort Benning in the tournament at Fort McPherson December 8, 10 and 12, is a composite one drawn from the four regularly organized teams at the school, as follows: The 28th Infantry, 83d Field Artillery, the Student Officers and the Freebooters, the last team being composed of officers from nondescript units. The team which will come to Atlanta will be composed of the following:

Lieutenant S. B. Elkins, Infantry, No. 1; Captain R. A. McClure, Infantry, No. 2; Major H. J. M. Smith, Infantry, No. 3; Captain E. B. Whisner, Infantry, No. 4. Alternates: Captain J. D. Forsythe, Infantry; Captain W. A. Burress, Infantry.

Major Smith is the equitation instructor at Fort Benning and coach of the polo team. He has played for years and is thoroughly familiar with the mallet game. He is rated as a two-goal man by the National Polo association.

Lieutenant Elkins will be the spearhead of the Benning attack and is well qualified for the post. He is of the dashing type of rider and is one of the longest and hardest hitters on the team. His long runs have featured the play at Benning this and other seasons although he is by no means one of the familiar type in polo—the player who disregards teamwork.

Captain McClure is the assistant instructor in equitation at the big infantry school. He is captain of the excellent student team of two years ago. During last year he attended the cavalry school at Fort Riley and can hold his own with officers of any branch in matters like polo and riding. He also is handicapped two goals under the National Polo association rules.

Captain E. B. Whisner, playing at No. 4 has had quite some experience with polo and his value to the team rests with his ability mainly to play a wonderful combination with Major Smith, which has resulted in numerous goals for the team this year. His fine back hand strokes have saved many goals for the infantry school.

The alternates are well qualified to replace any of the regulars without the regulars being missed. Captain Burress and Captain Forsythe have also had varied polo experience.

Of no less importance than the players are the ponies mounting the team. It is easy for anyone to make the remark that ponies are 50 per cent of the game, but they are more than that because of a player has to continually fight his horse he will have very little attention to pay to any other feature of the game. After all it is the number of goals that win and not the cowboy ability to ride.

Majority of Nation's Grid Stars Picked From Middle West

New York, December 4.—(AP)—For the first time in nearly 40 years of all-American football ranking, the distinction of carrying off the most places on the mythical all-star college eleven passes from the east to the middle west.

This was revealed today in a nation-wide census compiled by The Associated Press and reflecting the opinions of more than 100 coaches and critics. With no college having more than one representative in the first eleven the consensus shows the middle west gaining five places, the east four, while the south and far west occupy one each.

Not since the late Walter Camp first established the All-American idea in 1889 with a team composed entirely of eastern players has the balance of power passed before the other side of the Alleghenies. Last year the east had six of the eleven positions on the first team compilation by The Associated Press, the middle west three and far west two.

Taking the 1926 squad as a whole, however—first, second and third teams—the east retains its traditional leadership with 14 out of 33 places. The middle west has 11, the far west five and south three. Twenty-six institutions are represented on the list.

This year's campaign hasn't been lacking in individual stars, but comparatively few, particularly among the backfield performers, have captured popular imagination to the extent that Red Grange, George Wilson, Ernie Nevers, "Swede" Oberlander, and others did in 1925.

Herb Joesting, Minnesota's plunging fullback, is an exception. He came near to being the unanimous choice of the experts who selected this year's All-American lineup. His running mates—Friedman, of Michigan; Kaer, of Southern California, and Baker, of Northwestern, all polled heavy votes, but it was by comparatively slim margin that they gained first team places over such all-around aces as Spears, of Vanderbilt; Harry Wilson, of the Army; "Wild Bill" Kelly, of Montana, and Frank Kirkleski, of LaFayette.

It is noteworthy that three of the all-star ball carriers—Friedman, Kaer and Baker—occupied quarterback positions on their teams. Most of the critics, while favoring the Michigan captain as field general of the mythical aggregation, considered the all-around capabilities of Baker and Kaer valuable enough to shift them to halfback roles.

In the line Frank Wickhorst, navy captain, at tackle, and Harry Connaughton, Georgetown's 275-pound guard, were the most heavily favored. Close contests developed for all of the other positions, particularly on the ends, where an unusual galaxy of stars shone this year. Hoyt Winslett, outstanding player of Alabama's southern championship team, and Hanson, Syracuse leader, gained the wing posts by narrow margins over Ted Shipkey, of Stanford; Hal Broad, of Brown; Henry Osterbaan, of Michigan, a 1925 all-American, and Bacchus, of Missouri.

Observers stressed the point that in Winslett and Hanson the mythical team's attack would have two men with ball-carrying abilities almost on the par with those of the backs. In addition, they possessed defensive qualities well adapted to supporting a line that averages 220 pounds from tackle to tackle.

Formidable as were such unbeaten teams as Alabama, Brown, Stanford, Navy and Army, none came within striking distance of Dartmouth's record of putting three stars on the 1925 first team and four altogether on the three-team squad.

Seven of the twenty-six institutions on the 1926 list shared the distinction of having two men named. They are Michigan, Army, Navy, Brown, Stanford, Pennsylvania and Ohio State.

FIRST TEAM.

End—Victor Hanson, Syracuse, Syracuse, New York.
Tackle—Frank Wickhorst, Navy Oak Park, Illinois.
Guard—Harry Connaughton, Georgetown, Philadelphia.
Center—Arthur Boeringer, Notre Dame, St. Paul Minn.
Guard—Bernard Shively, Illinois, Oliver, Illinois.
Tackle—Mortimer Sprague, Army, Dallas, Texas.
End—Hoyt Winslett, Alabama, Dadeville, Alabama.
Quarterback—Benjamin Friedman, Michigan, Cleveland.
Halfback—Ralph Baker, Northwestern, Rockford, Ill.
Halfback—Morton Kaer, Southern California, Red Bluff, Cal.
Fullback—Herbert Joesting, Minnesota, Owatonna, Minn.

SECOND TEAM.

End—Harold Broda, Brown.
Tackle—Emerson Nelson, Iowa.
Guard—Edwin Hess, Ohio State.
Center—John J. Butler, Pennsylvania.
Guard—Emerson Carey, Cornell.
Tackle—D. Thomas Eddy, Navy.
End—Theodore Shipkey, Stanford.
Quarterback—William Spears, Vanderbilt.
Halfback—Harry Wilson, Army.
Halfback—William Kelly, Montana.
Fullback—Martin Karow, Ohio State.

THIRD TEAM.

End—Benjamin Oosterhaan, Michigan.

BIG LEAGUE HEADS ARRIVE IN ASHEVILLE

Asheville, N. C., December 4.—(AP) Headed by Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, hundreds of club owners and managers arrived here today for the 25th annual session of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues which meets Tuesday.

Judge Landis arrived at noon, declined to answer when asked if he would accept the commissioner's job for another seven years if elected on December 16 and went immediately to the golf course.

The Western league, faced with a possible split, went into executive session late this afternoon. With Tulsa and Oklahoma City asking permission to withdraw, and an effort to move the St. Joseph's team to Amarille, Texas, coming up for settlement before a schedule can be considered the meeting promised to last most of the night.

The board of arbitration was to have met during the afternoon but on account of a number of members not having arrived the session was postponed until Monday morning.

The first commerical transaction of the convention took place today when Des Moines employed Matt Donohue, former first sacker for Mobile, Southern association, to play first base for the Western league pennant holders.

Duffy Lewis, once a member of the famous Speaker-Lewis-Hooper combination, arrived today to enter into any transaction which would give him a managerial post for next year. Duffy was manager of Mobile last year.

Hotel registers tonight read like a roster of big league and minor league clubs. Emil Fuchs and Dave Bancroft arrived today from Boston. Miller Huggins was expected tonight and Colonel Jacob Ruppert has reservations for tomorrow.

Announcement that Ty Cobb would arrive tomorrow has caused considerable speculation among club owners and managers here today. Most of the old heads are skeptical of Cobb's statement that he will never swing another bat. They are of the opinion that he swings one too well to stay out long. There are some who believe he may take a shot at Tris Speaker's old job managing the Cleveland Indians.

Y CHURCH LOOP OPENS SEASON TUESDAY NIGHT

The Y Church Athletic association will open its basketball season Tuesday night, at 6:30 o'clock on the Y. M. C. A. court. Two eight-team leagues have been formed and will be known as the Dixie and Sewanee leagues. There is a possible chance of making one of the leagues a 10-club affair and if any other team desires to enter they should attend the business meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night at 7:30.

The executive and schedule committees have arranged for the association to open in full sway Tuesday with the Dixie league playing on the "Y" court every Tuesday night and the Sewanee league games will be played there on Thursdays. Frank Hopf, the referee-in-chief, will have approved officials for the games. All of the games will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court and the halves will be sandwiched in each league.

The teams that composed Dixie loop are: the Pep class, College Park; Wesley Memorial, Anchor Class, Western Heights, Gideon Class of Gordon Street Baptist, the Patillo Memorial and the Epworth Workers. The quintets that compose the Sewanee circuit are: the Anchor Feds, Oakhurst Baptist, F. E. F. Class, All Saints, Third Baptist, Boethians Class of Druid Hills Baptist, First Methodist and West End Presbyterian.

The schedule for the opening games are as follows:

Anchor Class against Western Heights, at 6:30.
Gideons against Pep Class at 6:50.
Patillo Memorial against College Park at 7:50.
Epworth Workers against Wesley Memorial at 8:10.

Team Being Formed To Battle Wycoff

The personnel of the professional football team which will make its premiere here Saturday against the independent team of Douglas Wycoff is not entirely settled, but advices received Saturday indicate that a number of popular southern stars will oppose the terror of Tech when he again dons the moleskins on an Atlanta gridiron.

Mack Tharpe, who was intending to recruit a team of gridders to face Wycoff, has been in south Georgia hunting and just returned today, so in view of the short time remaining Bill Fincher has already begun recruiting a team which he will coach.

Tharpe said Saturday that he would play on the team but that Bill Fincher was doing most of the organization work and would do the directing. A number of famous names are included in the list which Bill intends to include in his lineup.

"Big Red" Barron will be in Atlanta Monday to discuss terms and has declared that he will play if the terms are satisfactory. Luckey and Sherlock of Georgia as well as McCann, of Florida and Murray of Tech are also among the prospective members of the team.

Wycoff has been the talk of the east since his independent team has beaten several previously unbeaten teams in New England and Williams, John Murray and other southern stars have done their share to make the final campaign of Wycoff a success throughout the east.

The game Saturday will be the premiere of professional football in Atlanta and with the prospect of a clash involving many of the south's greatest football players, it should be a great one.

Tuskegee Warriors Beat Atlanta U., 14-0

BY J. C. CHUNN.

In a grim battle the Tuskegee Tigers ground Atlanta university's Crimson Hurricane in the dust Saturday afternoon to the dirge of 14 to 0 at Spiller's filed.

A crowd of 6,000 rabid spectators saw the Crimson Hurricane halted Saturday—and of this number 3,000 were white gridiron fans, who cheered the A. U. standards from the first whistle to the last gasp.

The Crimson Hurricane was a hurricane in every sense of the word during the first quarter, which was chuck full of hard driving by the famed "Four Horsemen." Atlanta university completely outplayed the Tigers in the first quarter, but failed to nudge the ball over.

Stevenson Halted.

Stevenson, of Tuskeegee, was entirely stopped on his several attemps at long end runs, much to the dismay of the battling bunch of Tigers that came down to Atlanta to take on the A. U. aggregation. The Hurricane was unable to stop Stewart, Bailey and Joyner, who, with their terrific and terrifying line plunging and end runs, sent the A. U. down to defeat.

The fact that the score was 14 to 0 on the Tiger's side is no evidence to convict Atlanta's team of falling down on the job. Never have eleven men fought harder or tried harder to get the heavy end of a score beside their name.

McPherson was the outstanding wind disturbance in the Hurricane lineup. He was a veritable tornado by himself and harrassed the Tiger crowd with his marvelous broken-field and end running, which put the Hurricane in distance of scoring twice. But, the Tuskeegee line would come back strong and rearing to go, with Captain Kitchens and Tallock, center, playing their game of all games, fight-

DAVISCOURT MEETS VIDALFI IN MAT CARD FEATURE

Wrestlers Arriving For Big Show Here At City Auditorium

Oreste Vadalfi, the Italian wrestler and adventurer who meets Dick Daviscourt at the city auditorium Monday night, was the first of the grapplers on the program to arrive in Atlanta. Vadalfi came in Saturday at noon, reported to Promoter John Contos and expressed the desire to do some road work.

"How much," inquired Contos.

"Seven miles," the wrestler replied. Promoter Contos then assigned Pete Dallis to run with Vadalfi in order that the Italian might not get lost in the maze of Atlanta's streets and traffic.

Daviscourt, who is determined to win the Monday night match, because the winner will be pitted against Champion Joe Stecher in the next bout at the auditorium, is expected to arrive here today. Jimmy Londos and Jack Roller, who clash in the one hour semi-windup are due also in Atlanta today.

To Select Referee.

Promoter Contos yet has to select the referee for the matches Monday night and Saturday declared that he very probably would not announce the official until Monday morning. Tickets, which have been on sale at Chess' Place and the Piedmont Hatters since last Thursday have been very much in demand. The advance sale has encouraged Contos to predict the biggest house of the season for Monday night.

There can be no doubt but what the promoter has done his part towards giving the Atlanta fans their best wrestling show of the season. Daviscourt and Vadalfi are evenly matched grapplers and each has an incentive for victory as a match with Stecher is not to be laughed at. On top of that Contos is offering Jimmy Londos in the semi-windup. The Greek star rarely ever appears in anything but main events and only his desire to stage a comeback before the Atlanta fans prompted him to accept the preliminary bill.

Londos was recently thrown here by Daviscourt and he wants to regain the popularity that he naturally lost in that defeat. Roller will offer something of a test for Londos, as he is the stronger and heavier of the two. Roller, in addition to being a wrestler of considerable ability, holds nine weight lifting championships. That alone gives some idea of his gigantic strength.

Starts at 8 o'clock.

The wrestling show Monday night will be started promptly at 8 o'clock. Bob Ruble, an amateur wrestler of Atlanta, will grapple with Pete Dallis, who refereed the last match at the auditorium. The two recently met in Birmingham and Dallis won, but only after a hard fight.

Vadalfi is one of the most colorful wrestlers who has appeared in Atlanta. He is only 29 years old, yet he has seen service as a soldier, dancer, professional weight lifter and wrestler. Vadalfi's first mat appearance in America had a sensational and surprising finish. He was pitted against Stanislaus Zbyszko, the famous Pole and to the astonishment of both the fans and experts held the Pole to a draw in a furious and hard fought two hour match. After that moral triumph he was matched with all of the good wrestlers around New York, Boston and other eastern wrestling centers and established a highly creditable record.

Knows Daviscourt.

Daviscourt's talent and extremely rough tactics in the ring are nothing new to Vadalfi. He wrestled Daviscourt in St. Louis last year and managed to win the match. He also holds victories over Jimmy Londos, Dan Koloff and George Kotsonaros. The Italian is capable of taking care of himself against any sort of opposition, and if Daviscourt gets rough Monday night he very likely will follow suit.

In addition to beating several of the outstanding matmen in this country, Vadalfi made an excellent showing in his match with Champion Joe Stecher in St. Louis last year.

Stecher required one hour and 47 minutes to score a fall over the Italian. Vadalfi came back strong winning the next fall in 13 minutes. Shortly thereafter he injured his leg so severely that he was unable to continue. He was forced to quit the ring, thus allowing Stecher to win on a technicality.

World Series

Atlanta baseball fans will have an opportunity to see the world champion baseball teams in action next spring when teams break spring training camps and head northward. The St. Louis Cardinals world champions, under the leadership of Roger Hornsby, and the New York Yankees, runnerup to the Cardinals, will resume hostilities here next spring.

This announcement was made Saturday by R. J. Spiller, president of the Atlanta Crackers, who stated that he had signed the two clubs to play two exhibition games at Spiller field April 4 and 5.

The teams will come to Atlanta following the breaking of their spring training quarters when they start homeward to open their regular major league season.

FAMED FIELD IS ASSEMBLED AT SEMINOLA

Longwood, Fla., December 4.—Attracted by the liberal offering of purses which will total over $175,000 for the thirty-one or more day meeting, horses from practically every point of the compass are now arriving at Seminola Park for the thoroughbred racing session scheduled to open Saturday, December 11.

Every one of the 700 stalls at the popular race course, located near here on the Dixie highway between Orlando and Sanford, are filled or have been reserved for horses now en route here. Owing to the unprecedented interest displayed by horsemen in the forthcoming meeting at Seminola, officials of the course have been obliged during the past wek to refuse accommodations to over 200 applicants.

During the past ten days twelve carloads of runners have arrived from Cleveland, Ohio, three from Lexington, Ky.; two from Juarez, Mexico; two from Bowie, Md., and seventeen from Jacksonville, Fla. The last mentioned consignment made up of horses from Kentucky, Maryland and New York tracks, was transferred over to Seminola following the indefinite postponement of the proposed meeting at Keeney Park, the newly constructed track located near Jacksonville.

Included among the large host of prominent racing stables on the grounds are the Harned Brothers, Mose Shapoff, Sanola Stock Farm stable, Thistle Downs stable, Haughton and Moran, H. E. Brown stock farm, Padgett and Daugherty, Sunflower stable, O. E. Pons, W. E. Martin, H. E. Crist, G. F. Jenkins and numerous others. Additional strings due to arrive the latter part of the week include the pretentious stable of sixteen star performers of the turf which race in the colors of G. Frank Croissant. This group includes Kentucky Cardinal, Gibbons, Sun Altos and others of more than ordinary class.

A brief glance over the registration blanks of horses on the grounds reveals such stars as Reputation, Gliding Fox, Glide, Coyne, McCullough, Fire Under, Home d' Or, Pequot, Bonnie Castle, Agnes Call, Collen O, Blarney Stone, Trifle, Phidias, Sanola, Loue Shank, Anna Marrone II, Sweep Net, Ball Gee, Pigeon Wing II, Myrtle Bell, Treasurer, Accumulator, The Rove, Osman, Louis Rubenstein, Confluente, and many others.

J. T. Corbin Wins South Georgia's First Hog Call

Moultrie, Ga., December 4.—J. T. Corbin, a 67-year-old Baptist preacher, this afternoon was acclaimed as the champion hog caller of south Georgia.

From 32 contestants, Mr. Corbin was selected by the five judges.

They gave second prize to Martin Whitehurst, and third prize to London Peguese, 70-year-old negro farmer.

Other prizes were J. J. Frazier, Autreyville; Shade Murphy, Moultrie; H. E. Griffin, Autreyville; W. J. Jordan, Doerun; C. H. Smith, Norman Park; J. W. Maloney, Berlin, and W. W. Dorminy, Moultrie.

The hog calling contest, the first of its kind ever held in the state, drew a crowd of several thousand people to Moultrie. All of the prizes went to south Georgians. Despite the fact that several former Iowa men, who have competed in contests in the west, were heard.

The contest was sponsored by the local chamber of commerce, and the judges were instructed to rate the contestants on the following basis: Pitch and expression 30 points, resonance 30 points, friendliness and appeal 20 points, volume 20 points. The judges rated each contestant by secret ballot and the winner was determined by the greatest number of points scored. This was arrived at by combining the ratings of the five judges.

Tuskegee Beats Atlanta U., 14-0

ing hard for the Tuskeegee reputation of championship.

Third Grid Title.

This is the third consecutive time that Tuskeegee has won the southeastern gridiron championship, only one team being in its way now to national championship record. Howard is the obstacle and Howard does not play Tuskeegee this year. Therefore, that will give them unofficial championship rating of the United States, under their peerless leader, Coach Abbott.

Tuskeegee scored its first touchdown in the second quarter. Stewart replaced Bailey at right half. Then Tuskeegee started a parade down the field. Stewart went through the line for 10 yards. He added 12 to that on his next jump. The ball was resting on A. U.'s 31-yard line. Coach Abbott called Stewart out. Bailey went back into his old position. Bailey hit the line for 11 yards. He took the ball on down to A. U.'s 11-yard line. The Hurricane held for the second down. Bailey then slashed his way across for the initial score of the game. The famous Stevenson kicked goal for the extra point.

The remainder of the first half was played about even. Backward and forward, with no outstanding play on either side.

In the second half, both teams came back refreshed and looking for fight. Neither was disappointed. Then began some of the hardest scrapping of the whole game—of such a nature to send the spectators, white and colored, wild with an enthusiasm which was only exceeded by that of the players themselves.

Last Touchdown.

The next and last touchdown came in the third quarter. Stewart again was substituted for Bailey. The ball was in midfield. Several line plunges with Stevenson, Wooten and Stewart carrying the ball, resulted in the second touchdown, making the score 13 to 0. Stevenson again was called on to do his goal kicking. He did and the score stood 14 to 0 in the third quarter. The rest of the quarter was about even, both teams fighting hard. A. U. for two touchdowns and the Tigers to hold their lead.

The Atlanta university team showed signs in Saturday's game of having been in the hands of a coach who knows football and knows it from the ground up. He is Coach Aiken and he has made a splendid record with his team, and in the writer's opinion A. U. is likely to have a championship team next year.

Riley Lamar and Slaughter all played well for A. U., not leaving out Cobb, who also did some splendid work. Captain Kitchens, Bailey, Stewart, Smith, Wooten, Tadlock and Stevenson all starred for Tuskegee.

Oglethorpe Begins Work for Geneva

ning from Geneva. Cy Bell, one of the flashiest backs in the south and who was absent from the Petrel lineup the last three games of the past season, will report to practice Monday along with the rest of his team mates. His return will greatly strengthen the Oglethorpe eleven. Then, too, the Birds will take the field New Year's day in excellent physical condition. The old troublesome casualty list will not be such a bother, unless, of course, several players are hurt. However, this is not likely to happen, as extra precautions will be taken to avoid it.

Obviously the workouts for this week will be used to build up endurance, wind and the many other requisites needed to win football games. Therefore lengthy signal drills will be the order of most practices. It is expected that if any scrimmages are held that they will take place either Friday or Saturday or perhaps on both days. The brushing up on old plays and the putting in of new ones will probably take up some of the time also.

GRUNT ARTISTS ON MAT CARD

CONFERENCE CONSIDERS OFFICIALBOARD

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4—(AP) Complaints that officiating at conference football games had proved unsatisfactory in several instances crystalized here today in the adoption by the southern conference of a resolution presented by the Southern Football Coaches' association, providing for the creation of an accredited list of officials.

The conference voted to finance the preliminary organization of a southern association of football officials, which would be formed of a committee composed of Fred Castator, Atlanta; Harry B. Springer, Clearwater, Fla., and A. R. Hutchins, Lake Wales, Fla.

The plan provides that the committee shall draft a list of officials and grade them according to their qualification and experience. After the football season of 1927 no conference test would be officiated except from the accredited list.

The committee of coaches which presented the resolution was headed by Brand Bocock, head coach at the University of South Carolina. The resolution originated in the annual meeting of the coaches' association tonight.

The officials' organization committee will be empowered to provide rules and regulations involving tests and requirements of ability and experience, subject to approval by the executive committee of the conference.

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP) The 1927 southern conference tennis tournament will be held at the University of North Carolina. The tournament is scheduled for the second Friday and Saturday in May.

Bulldog Cage Season Will Open Saturday

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., December 4.—Georgia's basketball season formally opens next Saturday night, when Coach Herman Stegeman's cagers meet the Southern Bell quintet of Atlanta.

Practice has progressed for the past several weeks and the Red and Black basketeers are fast rounding into condition for the opener, which is creating more than the usual enthusiasm.

Nolan Richardson, captain of last year's team and artist of the Bulldogs in the indoor game for three years, along with "Horse" Harris, are the only letter-men of last year lost.

Captain-elect Walter Forbes, "Mickey" Frain, George Keen, "Babe" Florence and Hoyt Turner are the list of letter-men returned for another season. Each of these men have been practicing, with the exception of Forbes, just fininishing his grid duties, and to make his appearance Monday, along with several members of the football squad.

Members of the freshmen team of last season graduated to the varsity include Jimmie Harris, Courts, Hollis Morris, Ed Hart and "Big" Drew. Reserves back include "Skeet" Johnson, Dudley Cook, "Bill" Kline and Bob Fowler, Harvey Hill and Glenn Laughtzenheiser, of the football squad, are also expected to make their initial appearance Monday.

Two teams working together during the past week and likely combinations to be used in next week's opener include Keen and Harris, forwards; Florence, center; Frain and Turner, guards.

The other quintet reads as follows: Cook and Morris, forwards; Hart, center; and Palmer and Hoke Smith, guards. Captain-elect Forbes will replace one of the men on the first team, however, as the probable opening selection.

Fort McPherson will be played here Saturday week. Following the resumption of school, early in January, the Bulldogs get down to a difficult schedule.

Games with Georgia Tech and the Atlanta Athletic club probably hold the limelight on the men. Three games will be played with the former, two of the engagements scheduled for Athens. Tech is played January 15 and 29 and February 19, with the first and last of the series here. A. A. C. dates are February 9 and 12.

The schedule follows: January 5, Furman at Athens; January 8, Florida at Athens; January 11, Clemson at Athens; January 13, Wofford at Athens; January 15, Tech at Athens; January 21, Virginia at Charlottesville; January 22, Maryland at Baltimore; January 29, Tech at Atlanta; February 9, A. A. C. at Atlanta; February 12, A. A. C. at Athens; February 19, Tech at Athens.

Football Year Gets Extension

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP) The southern conference football season will close one week later than in former seasons, the conference decided today when it adopted an amendment to the by-laws providing that the football season shall close the second Saturday after Thanksgiving instead of the first Saturday as heretofore.

The change is made at the request of colleges in the far south that desire to eliminate September football games on account of the climatic conditions.

The adopted amendment was a redraft of another amendment by Dr. S. V Sanford which would have opened the football season the first Saturday in October, but would have closed it the first Saturday in November.

TOUGH CARD AGAIN MADE BY WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., December 4.—With the signing of Grinnell college, of Grinnell, Iowa, to meet Wisconsin's 1927 eleven at Madison November 5, George Little's Badgers are scheduled to engage two members of the Missouri Valley conference next fall. The other game will be played at Lawrence with Franklin Cappon's Kansas outfit on October 8. This date has been definitely fixed and will take the Cardinals away from home for their second contest of the season.

Negotiations are at present under way to bring Cornell College here again for the curtain-raiser. The midwest conference eleven made a splendid record this year and performed well against the Badgers in the opener, regardless of the fact that they were defeated by Little's men, 38 to 0, before a well-executed aerial attack.

Grinnell and Cornell will round out a high-class playing chart for the Wisconsin grid squad; a slate as hard as any contracted by the other conference directors. The former won all their games but one in the valley loop this year, and retain the majority of their regulars for next season. Although Kansas finished poorly in the conference, they suffered many vital losses by injury as the season progressed.

In the line of Big Ten games Coach Little has again taken on his share of formidable opponents. Wisconsin is the only member of the conference that meets both Minnesota and Michigan. The new chart is very similar to that just completed. Indiana has been dropped, while Iowa has been retained for another home engagement. The season will be closed as usual with Chicago at the midway, while Jimmie Phelan brings his Boilermakers to Madison.

October 1—Cornell College at Madison (tentative)
October 8—Kansas at Lawrence.
October 15—Michigan at Madison.
October 22—Purdue at Madison
October 29—Minnesota at Minneapolis.
November 5—Grinnell at Madison.
November 12—Iowa at Madison.
November 19—Chicago at Chicago.

College Basketball Makes Rapid Strides

College basketball has made remarkable strides. Twenty years ago, 1,000 persons at a game, even between major flight schools was rated a huge crowd. Two years ago, Ohio State and Purdue played to 10,385 in the coliseum at Columbus. More than 4,000 were turned away. Michigan plays to 7,500 at important games and more would come if the field house could take care of more. The day is coming, coaches believe, when special houses must be built for basketball alone if crowds are to be accommodated. Iowa and Wisconsin have been forced to erect new field houses to meet the basketball demand. Other schools plan to follow suit. In the east, the demand for seats is far greater than the supply.

Waugh and Hunsinger Chosen by Cothran On Mythical Squad

BY BEN COTHRAN.

When, at the end of a football season, it becomes necessary to pick an all-star team, one usually starts off by telling of the many stars and the difficulty in picking such a team. Therefore, discarding this ancient custom—here is our city all-prep selection for 1926:

NAME.	POS.	TEAM.
McCleskey	LE.	Boys' High
Turner	LT.	Boys' High
Speaks	LG.	U. S. B.
Murray	C.	U. S. B.
Maddox	RG.	Tech High
Green	RT.	U. S. B.
Langford	RE.	Marist
Waugh	Q.	Tech High
Hunsinger	LH.	U. S. B.
Morris	RH.	Decatur
Campbell	F.	G. M. A.

Utility back, Winn, Boys' High; utility lineman, Shivers, Boys' High.

University leads the list with four players on the mythical eleven—three linesmen and one back. Boys' High has two, Tech High two and G. M. A., Marist and Decatur have one each.

Armin Waugh, of Tech High, stood far above the rest of the prep quarterbacks, not only running his team well, but breaking the prep record this season for ground gained from scrimmage. He is probably the fastest man in the prep league, running the dashes on the Smithy track team, and holding several records.

Sam Colvin Boys' High quarterback, stood out this season, as did Booth of G. M. A.

Hunsinger Good.

John Hunsinger, of University, was another prep man who stood head and shoulders above the rest. Hunsinger is one of the best broken field runners since the days of Stumpy Thomason, though he is not as fast as Waugh he is heavier and has a powerful drive that has enabled him to gain through the line when necessary. Besides being a good offensive man he is a good defensive player and it was seldom that an opposing back got by him.

In picking a fullback it was a close decision between Winn of Boys' High, and Campbell. Campbell was given the position because he not only had drive and speed, but was able to open holes in a line where there wasn't any. Winn worked behind a line that was playing together for its second season, while the G. M. A. forward wall was green, and not working very well.

The remaining halfback position was given to Henry Morris, of Decatur, not only for his ability to gain ground but on account of the higher education to which his toe has been subjected. Bill Harper, Boys' High flash, ran Morris a close second for this position through his work in the Purple-Tech High clash.

Other backfield men who were considered were Brooks, of Marist; Sorrel, of G. M. A.; Hadley, Hammond and Hutt, of Tech High; Gavin, of Decatur; McHenry and White, of U. S. B.

There was a wealth of line material among the prep teams this season, and some difficulty was experienced in making what we believe to be the best pick.

Ditt Murray, captain and center of the University eleven, played a jamup game at this position all season, and was easily picked for the all-prep position. This marked his third year as a snapper-back and he played a cool steady game, making very few, if any, bad passes, and always holding on to the ball when the signals were messed up. He was good at backing up the line, breaking through and stopping plays behind the line on many occasions in the game this season. Coffee, of Boys' High, and Wade, of Tech High, were considered for this place. Beckey Speaks and Goofy Maddox are about the best pair of guards in the prep loop. Speaks plays a great game on offense and it would be hard to find a better defensive player than Maddox. Maddox was the cause of Tech High's lone touchdown in the Boys' High game, breaking through and intercepting a backfield, pass and running 56 yards for a score.

Green and Turner were the best pair of tackles and their work throughout the season has been above the average. Both men are good at breaking through the line and laying the opposition's attack low before it can get started.

Langford and McCleskey came in for most of the honors at the flank positions this year. Langford is very adept at the art of snagging passes from a member of his own team, and snagged quite a few this season. It was largely by taking to the air that Marist won most of its games this season and the combination usually read Brooks to Langford. Jack McCleskey ended his prep career by playing a great game against the Smithies last Tuesday, and as usual proved that it is very hard for a team to gain around his end. McCleskey cannot only stop most thrusts at his side of the line, but gets down under punts and gets the safety man before he can run the ball back for any considerable distance.

Among the other outstanding linesmen were Wade, Vess and Davis, of Tech High; F. Winn and Fincher, of Boys' High; McSherry, of Marist; Pasquarello and Broadfield, of G. M. A.; Goldsmith, Coursey, and Freeman, of U. S. B.

On the whole it has been a very interesting season among the preps and although it should be ended, now that Santa Claus has come and Christmas is almost here, Tech High and University haven't had enough yet, and will play each other for the first time in three years on December 16 at Spiller's.

It All Depends

If, according to the popular opinion among its members, the G. I. A. A. upholds the decision of Arbiter Stegeman ordering Riverside and Monroe to play for the 1926 title, the game will take place at Grant field next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to Carter Barron, who was authorized to secure the field by his brother, "Red," coach of the Monroe Aggies.

Riverside was willing to play the game in Atlanta, and it was left up to "Big Red" as to where the game would be played. He decided on Atlanta, and Carter secured permission from the Tech authorities. A meeting of the G. I. A. A. will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, and take action on protests against Mr. Stegeman's decision. In the past all rulings made by the arbiter have been upheld.

POLICY BOYS TO OPEN CAGE YEAR TUESDAY

Final preparations will be made the coming week for the inauguration of the Insurance league, which will open up on Tuesday, December 14, at 7:30 p. m. All games will be played on the Atlanta Athletic club court.

At the last meeting the following officers were elected: C. E. Brooch, of the Royal Insurance company, president; "Rabbit" Smith, of the Southeastern Underwriters, secretary and treasurer.

With admission free of charge, a large crowd of fans is expected to turn out to spur their favorites on.

Tom Slate and Sam Glassman have been named as referees in this league, with "Fat" Elrod as alternate.

The schedule for the opening night is as follows: Fireman's Fund Insurance company vs. Commercial Union at 7:30 o'clock, Referee, Glassman.

Southeastern Underwriters association vs. Royal Insurance company, at 8:30 o'clock. Referee, Slate.

Insurance Company of North America vs. Hartford Fire Insurance company, at 9:30 o'clock. Referee, Glassman.

The Spalding M-valve ball will be the official ball to be used in all games played in this league.

Winter Polo Gaining In Favor Out West

If plans of Major Carlton F. Burke of Los Angeles, materialize there will be a great deal of high class polo in southern California this winter. Wing Commander Wise, who played No. 3 on the Princemere team of Boston, is expected to be one of the experts appearing there. Major Burke is anxious to bring the Argentine stars to Los Angeles.

Cornell's Uphill Fight Sensation of Gridiron

Cornell's uphill fight in the Dartmouth game was one of the most sensational ever staged on a college football field. Sixteen points behind starting the final period, Dobie's charges put on a spurt that enabled them to eke out a one-point triumph in the last few minutes of play.

Conference Approves Rose Bowl Game and Adjourns

NOTRE DAME WINS OVER SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, 13-12

Rockne's Footballers Turn Back Tradition In Nosing Out Win

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Los Angeles, December 4.—A smart and fighting Notre Dame football team carried off a 13-to-12 victory over a lion-hearted, line-crushing Southern California eleven, before 77,000 thrilled spectators on Los Angeles Coliseum field this afternoon. Sheer drive gave way to Notre Dame's passing skill, and a long pass, Parisien to Neimic, decided the struggle in the last three minutes. The same pass trick was used for strong gains four times during the game, each time in a different combination from the thrower to the receiver. On the winning play, Parisien cut back and to the left, and apparently had headed toward the scrimmage line again for an end run, drawing the secondary away from Neimic, who galloped off toward the corner of the goal line pursued only by Captain Cravath.

The Trojan leader diagnosed the play too late and was three yards behind Neimic in an ineffectual dive when the latter planted the ball in the goal zone. Southern California lost its chances to win or tie because it had no kicker who could boot for the point after touchdown. Notre Dame made its first touchdown in the second quarter when Riley sneaked the ball behind his back and raced seven yards around end.

Quarterback Morton Kaer and his successor, Howard Elliott, made the two touchdowns for the losers.

Seventy-seven thousand, embracing the society and political lights and all the movie personages, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Chaplin, saw a team which should have conquered by sheer might, go down before a team which was its superior in smartness.

Trojans Battle Irish.

The Hoosiers took the California team's line battering in the first quarter, and emerged with the first touchdown of the game early in the second period. O'Boyle broke through left tackle on a split buck from the 42-yard line and gained 26 yards. On the very next play, quarterback Riley hid the ball behind his back, sent most of his players galloping to right end and Southern California took after Dahman. Riley then dashed around the weak end, scooting behind a two-man interference and gained the final seven yards for touchdown, with his opposition too far away to threaten. O'Boyle kicked goal for the extra points and that lone point decided the struggle.

Southern California came back with a vehemence. Morton Kaer made one run of 20 yards to the 42-yard line. From this point Kaer went over right tackle for two yards and on the next play varied his attack to the overhead, throwing an 18-yard forward pass which arched into the hands of Behrendt, an end.

Behrendt ran it to the two-yard line and on the next play Kaer sliced through right tackle, and slid on his back with the ball clutched to his stomach and a tackler on top of him. Brice Taylor, Southern California's negro place kicker, grazed the underside of the cross bar and failed by inches.

Kaer Taken Out.

The 7-to-6 margin lasted until the third quarter, when Don Williams replaced Kaer.

Kaer was pounded into the turf when tackled by Hearden and Flanagan and had his left side bandaged. The local team's candidate for all-American honors tried to continue play, but was carried out and Williams replaced him, going in when the Trojans had the ball on their own seven-yard line.

Williams hit the line twice for five yards and punted to Riley on the 42-yard strip.

Flanagan's punt was blocked by Scheving, tackle, and knocked straight into the air. It landed somewhere along the Trojan players' bench, 27 yards off the side line, but Captain Jeff Cravath, of the Trojans, had anticipated the action and straddled the players' bench to catch the oval when it came down.

From that point the Trojans began their goalward march from the Notre Dame 43-yard line. The next play ended the third period and on the following five plays Williams took the ball each time and made 22 yards on off the tackle dashes and end runs.

For variety, Laraneta circled Voedisch's end for seven yards and Williams took up the attack again. Williams took the ball again on the next three plays and from the 9-yard line battered and drove his way straight through the line to a touchdown.

Missed Kick for Point.

This time Morley Drury, halfback, missed the goal kick. But the margin of 12 to 7 looked big enough to win the game with seven minutes to play. Remembering how his team had lost its chance at the Pacific coast conference by similarly missing two goal kicks in the Stanford game, a 13-12 defeat—Drury took all the time in the world to aim his toe. His boot hit the left upper cross bar, wavered, and dropped back onto the field. The final touchdown disclosed the second and only other weak point in this year's powerful Trojan team.

That was the locals' weak forward passing defense.

Parisien, Notre Dame's fourth quarterback, started an attack which was based wholly on deception.

On a hidden ball play, he went through center four yards to the 45-yard line. He then circled back and to the left and got off a beautifully placed pass into John Niemic's hands. The latter was downed on the 20-yard stripe.

Two plays and two substitutions, while the Trojans were forgetting that last pass, left the ball in the same position. Then on the third down with three minutes to play, Parisien repeated the pass to Niemic in the same spot on the field. Niemic took three strides and planted the winning touchdown while half of the entire crowd of 77,000 seemed to go mad with joy.

Try Long Passes.

The Trojans tried desperately on long passes after that but were short of the midfield when the gun ended the great battle.

In point of statistics, two teams have rarely played a more even game. Each made 10 first downs. In yardage gained from scrimmage, Southern California outscored Rockne's team, 192 yards to 163.

The game produced two individual duels which exceeded even the team struggle in intensity. One was a ground gaining matter between Morton Kaer and the Notre Dame aces. Kaer had gained 76 yards when his left side was bruised and he had to quit in the third quarter. Flanagan, of Notre Dame, made 39 yards from scrimmage: Niemic made 35; Quarterback Charley Riley tore off 42 yards.

The other duel was a personal affair between Captain Cravath, of the Trojans, and August Boeringer, Notre Dame's all-American hope at center. There was not a play in which Cravath did not make his 175 pounds and his football intuition count.

N. D. (13)	Pos.	S. C. (12)
Maxwell	r.e.	Behrendt
McMannon	r.t.	Cox

Officials: Referee, Frank Birch (Earlham) umpire; John McCord, (Illinois); field judge, Arthur Badenoch, (Chicago); head linesman, J. Wyatt, (Missouri).

Oglethorpe Cagers Start Work Thursday

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

The Stormy Petrels will enter the cage world this season entertaining great hopes of having three excellent teams—the varsity, the freshman and the co-ed. Workouts will begin Thursday, and many candidates are expected to answer the roll calls.

Coach Harry Robertson will have direct charge of all basketball activities at Oglethorpe during the coming season. Several assistant coaches, however, will be used. The names of the assistants have not yet been disclosed.

Prospects Are Good.

The prospects for all three teams are unusually bright, the varsity's chances being considered better than either of the other two teams. Last year's freshmen quintet will be on hand Thursday to work out in varsity uniforms for their initial try for the big team. And it will be a difficult proposition for any veteran of last year to win a varsity berth in the face of such competition. These rat basketeers were the sensation of the state last year among freshmen competition, winning from some of the best freshman teams in the south. They defeated the Petrel varsity last year in a regular game, 48 to 16, which furnishes a basis of comparison between the individual performers of the two teams.

One of the best performers of this rat five was Jack Massey, who captained the aggregation. Jack hails from Columbus, Ga., where he was an outstanding forward on the Columbus High school team, being captain of that quintet for two consecutive seasons. Year before last, the year before entering Oglethorpe, he was a forward on the Columbus Y. M. C. A. team, which at that time had a good team, winning from such teams as Mercer and Georgia.

Floyd Bass and "Shimmie" Sheridan also were considered good players on this team. Bass was an all-prep man two years ago at G. M. C. He plays center, is tall and rangy, is a good defensive man and is a very good goal shooter. Sheridan played forward for Piedmont college prior to coming to Oglethorpe. He is often referred to as a "hawkeye" shot.

Bell and Clements Back.

The two remaining members of this team are Cy Bell, flashy Petrel halfback on the football squad, and Heyward Clements. Bell received his early basketball training at Gainesville High school, being used as a running guard. Clements, standing guard on this five, was an all-prep star in North Carolina two years ago.

"Nutty" Campbell, I. W. Cousins, Ed Garlington and Rip Chestnut are also back from last year's varsity. Also from the second-string material of the last year's freshman team there is Bill Moore, Willie Taylor and Joe Fine, who are all pretty good on the basketball court. Out of this array of stars Coach Harry Robertson should be able to mold a varsity combination that will cope with the best in the south.

This year's freshman team and the co-ed team are expected to be represented with good players. There are several good players in school that expect to make a bid for berths on the junior Petrel quintet. And some of them are outstanding players, coming from some of the best prep schools in the state. Very little is known about the co-ed team, but the newcomers are reported to have a good reputation as basketball players. This team also will return practically all of the last year's aggregation.

Gene Must Be Right; It Rhymes With Money

Gene Tunney, the new world's heavyweight champion, says his name is pronounced at rhyme with "money," and not "Mooney."

EPWORTHERS WILL BEGIN YEAR MONDAY

The Atlanta Epworth League Union Athletic association will start its regular schedule games Monday night with 30 teams registered. The teams will be divided into five leagues, three boys' and two girls' loops. The boys' leagues will be called A, B and C and the girls' leagues will be the A and B leagues.

The games will be played on the association's new basketball court at Wesley Memorial church, Monday and Friday have been decided on by the board of directors as the regular playing nights and the games will start at 6:30. Four games will be played each night and the girls' games will be mixed in with the boys' games.

Saturday nights will be set aside for the Epworth all-stars' special games which will be started as soon as the season gets under way.

JenningsMay Pilot Cleveland Indians

Cleveland, Ohio, December 4.—(AP) Reports that Hughie Jennings, former manager of the Detroit Tigers, is to succeed Tris Speaker as manager of the Cleveland Indians of the American league, reached here today from Scranton, Pa., Jennings' home.

Jennings, who returned recently from a sanitarium where he spent a year following a breakdown, refused to confirm or deny the rumors, but asserted that he will return to baseball this spring. He denied that he is to return to the New York Giants, where he held a berth as assistant manager until the breakdown more than a year ago.

Sanford Is Again Head; Basketball Meet in Atlanta

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP)—Football, the Hercules of modern sport, received the major attention of the fifth annual assembly of the Southern Conference which closed here late today. Aside from drastic legislation to preserve the amateur status of the Southern intercollegiate game, the conference laid the foundation for the improvement of officiating at football frays and lengthened the gridiron season by adding the first Saturday in December.

Professional football athletes have no standing whatever in the conference circles now. New by-laws adopted from resolutions passed at the 1925 session bar the professional player from officiating at conference games or coaching in conference institutions. The rule is not retroactive, however, and coaches and officials who prior to last season participated in professional games, are not affected.

The University of Alabama will go to Pasadena, Calif., to play Stanford university on New Year's day in the annual tournament of roses. Unanimous permission was accorded by the conference which also adopted an amendment to the by-laws to make it legal for conference teams to play in post season contests with the consent of the conference. Last year the rules were waived.

Official List.

Three football officials soon will begin to compile an accredited list of their profession in conference territory. They are clothed with authority from the conference to draft rules and regulations for classifying officials as to ability and experience. Harry B. Springer, Clearwater, Fla.; A. R. Hutchins, Lake Wales, Fla., and Fred Castator, Atlanta, compose the organization committee.

The conference was unanimous in approving the project which originated in the annual session of the Southern Football Coaches' association Thursday night.

In addition the conference will finance the preliminary organization which will be known as the Association of Southern Football Officials.

The rules and regulations of the new association will be subject to approval by the executive committee of the conference.

Wide variance in weather conditions between the northern and southern portions of the conference led to the adoption of the new by-laws lengthening the football season. Far south colleges want to drop September games because of the hot weather which prevails at that time.

No More Members.

It was the sense of the conference that its membership should not be increased although no new membership proposals were acted upon. The present membership of 22 is considered unwieldly and President Sanford urged in his annual address that no attempts be made to enlarge the body.

Important among the new eligibility rules from the standpoint of academic life was one specifying how long a man must attend college to be eligible from one year to another. A man who plays on a team one year and leaves college without completing a half year's academic work, may return the next year, but will not be eligible to play again until he has completed a half year's work. Football players who drop out of school after the close of the season and return the next September will not be eligible under this ruling.

The summer baseball rules were not further tightened. The playing of summer ball is already virtually prohibited since the college player cannot receive money or play on teams which are engaged more than three times in one week.

Fighting Considered.

Boxing and wrestling in conference institutions was placed under the rules of the National Collegiate Athletic association except that no student will be allowed to compete in more than one event in any team contest.

Elections resulted in the choice for the sixth consecutive time of Dr. S. V. Sanford, dean of Franklin college, University of Georgia, as president; H. N. Edwards, University of South Carolina, was re-elected vice president, and Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, of the University of Kentucky, was again chosen secretary.

The conference will again meet on December 4, 1927, at Lexington, Ky. The following measures were adopted by the southern conference at its fifth annual assembly.

ALABAMA TO TRAVEL SOUTHERN ROUTE.

University, Ala., December 4.—Alabama's football squad and party will travel the southern route to California for their game on New Year's day with Stanford, if tentative plans announced here today are made definite upon the return of Coach Wallace Wade.

Present plans call for the departure on Tuesday, December 21, of the Crimson party for Pasadena. Three stops en route are planned, each for eight hours, at San Antonio and El Paso, Texas, and Tucson, Ariz. By such an arrangement the Crimsons will dock at Pasadena on Christmas morning. The return, according to this tentative plan, will be made by the same route, leaving California the Sunday after New Year's day.

While in Pasadena the Crimson party will be quartered at the Vista del Arroyo hotel.

Chicago hasn't defeated Illinois in football since 1922. That year the Maroons, boasting a fairly strong eleven, whipped the Zuppke aggregation, 9-0.

South Has Bright Future In Scholastic Track Meets

Tech's Track Coach Sees Greater Output In Seasons To Come

BY HAROLD E. BARRON.

Coming from behind, the south is on the threshold of a new era in scholastic and amateur track competition throughout the nation and the world, and southern stars of the future can be looked forward to come forth in far greater numbers than in the past.

The quality of the performances on the southern track has taken rapid advances in the past few years, the best performances in the south very closely approaching the best performances in the north. The main difference is that for every stallar performer in the south there are several in the north, but the number of good track men in Dixie is increasing at a very rapid rate.

The northern trackman has the advantage of the winter indoor meets but the southern cinder path artist has in his favor the earlier warm weather in the spring. Often outdoor practice at the schools farther north begins with the snow still on the ground and very heavy wraps must be worn.

Competition Needed.

The good southern performer should try to get into competition with the best performers in other parts of the country as he will not only improve his performance by acquiring new pointers but will gain much in confidence. He will not be in a serious mental state of worry before the event if he has become used to meeting the best performers, and has come to the realization that they, like himself, are only human.

It is only through perseverence and "stick-to-itiveness" that an athlete can hope to get to the top. He cannot train and work hard for a short time and then lay off a while and hope to accomplish the best results. He must be regular and consistent in his practices and gradually build himself up and perfect his form by going from the easier to the harder stages in moderately increasing steps.

The American Olympic committee recently held a meeting in Washington, D. C., to lay plans for the United States' Olympic team of 1928. It is about time that the attention of the southern athlete be called to the meaning of this meeting. It is a notice that the machinery of the Olympic games is going forward for the entertainment of the athletes from all parts of the world at Amsterdam, Holland, where the games will be held in 1928.

Call to Trackmen.

The meeting is a call to all trackmen to prepare for the tryouts which will be held in the different sections of the country and the finals which will be held in the Harvard stadium. For the college men the different conference meets will be the tryouts, while the club men, composed of all amateurs who are not in college, will have their test in one of the cities in the section where they reside. In the southeast, including North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Tennessee, the tryouts for the Paris games in 1924 were held in Atlanta on Grant field, and will probably be held there again. The time of the meet is about the first week in June.

The place winners in the events which are good performers are then sent to Boston for the final trials a week later, where the competition consists of the best from the Army and Navy trials, and those who qualified in the competition in the conferences and in the club meets. The country is divided into eight sections and the best from these eight sections meet at the Harvard stadium to determine who shall bear the banner of the United States at the Olympic games.

List of Events.

The complete list of events to be conducted in the tryouts are as follows:

Hundred-meter dash; 200-meter dash; 400-meter dash; 800-meter run; 1,500-meter run; 3,000-meter run; 5,000-meter run; 10,000-meter run; 3,000-meter steeplechase; 110-meter hurdles; 400-meter hurdles; 10,000-meter walk; running high jump; running broad jump; running hop step and jump; pole vault; javelin throw; discus throw; putting the 16-pound shot; throwing the 16-pound hammer; 10,000-meter cross-country run; the pentathelon and the decathelon.

The first four or five place winners in these events at the final tryouts at Boston are picked to represent the United States at the Olympic games.

The team assembles for a reception in New York and gets a send-off from the big city.

Now Is Time.

This year is the time to begin active preparation for the Olympic tryouts. It takes time to perfect form and to build up the body that it can stand the strain that always accompanies keen competition with a trip to Europe as the stakes.

The burden of encouraging the track men to aspire for a place on the team and possibly a world's championship rests with the friends and coaches of the men who are making good on the school, college and club teams. It must be remembered that the competition this year in a certain event may be considerably thinned by next year, the time of the trials. The strain of competing at the Harvard stadium for a trip abroad must be reckoned with in the calculations of the ambitious southern track man.

Many a top-notcher on the dope sheets is in such a mental state the day of the trials that his performance is much below his best and men with less impressive records and no mental hazards come through with a good performance and cop a place on the team. To put forth the best efforts it takes the same calmness in big meets that is characterized by the good performers in the ordinary meets.

Details Important.

An acquaintance with the men who have their names in the Olympic games demonstrates one principle that has dominated the most of them. This fact is the attention to the details of their events. The men have cut the events to pieces, mastered these pieces, so to speak, and then have assembled these pieces into the whole again.

Illustrations of this chopping up or decomposing an event are as follows:

Bud Houser, the shot-put and discus champion, pays a great deal of attention to the strength of his fingers and wrist. Every morning and night he uses dumbbells to strengthen these members. Hurdlers at night use a chair to snap the back leg over, and try a little walking as in a walking race to loose up the hips. They practice snapping the fist as in boxing.

To Run-Run.

Pole vaulters do hand stands. Frank Foss, the champion in 1920, could raise himself from the floor into a double decker bed without jumping. Dick Landon, the high jump champion, was a dancer and a high kicker who ranked with the good ones on the vaudeville stage. The broad jumpers with the hitch kick get it by walking through it while hanging in a gym on flying rings and then gradually getting the muscles into the act by traveling faster. They exaggerate heights in easy jumps and perfect their take-offs so that they can run and strike the take-off board with their eyes shut.

Paddock exaggerates his sprinting by supporting himself upside down on his back, neck, head and arms, and slashing his legs as if he were in a race. Helfrich was a stickler for sleep and the proper amount of exercise, and was always regular and consistent in coming to practice.

The weight men also use weights heavier than those used in their events that they can depend less upon momentum and more upon the work of their arms and body. Coordination and control of the muscles counts very much in the success of an athlete.

Paddock aptly expressed his success in running by telling an ambitious youth who asked for reason for his speed, "The way to learn to run is to run."

Blakes Composite

The selection of an all-southern eleven by tabulation of the picks of sports writers and editors from all sections of the south was completed Saturday by Morgan Blake, of the Atlanta Journal. This selection is an annual work of Blake's and gold footballs are given to the eleven selected.

Following is Blake's pick:
Winslett, end, Alabama.
Luckey, tackle, Georgia.
Tharpe, guard, Tech.
Holmes, center, Alabama.
Barnhill, guard, Tennessee.
Pickhard, tackle, Alabama.
Marshall, end, Tech.
Morton, half, Georgia.
Spears, quarter, Vanderbilt
Barnes, half, Alabama.
Rauber, fullback, W. & L.

UNDEFEATED IN 31 STRAIGHT GAMES

LaGrange High football team has won 31 consecutive high school games without defeat. LaGrange has also won the Georgia High school football championship for the past three years, having won the 1926 title by defeating Albany in a post season game, 13 to 6. Reading from left to right front row is Hartis, Adams, Wagner, Redman, Grant, Smith, Ferrell, and Hammett. Second row Taylor, Bryant, Mitchell, Robinson, Daniel, Brazil and Mills. Standing, Manager Kersey, Barrett, Ware, Cleaveland, Power, Benton, Captain Bolden and Coach Gressette.

RESIGNATIONS PROVE BOTHER TO JOHNSON

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, December 4.—President Ban B. Johnson, of the American league, is keeping the wires hot in an effort to retain for his circuit the services of several of the greatest baseball players of all time.

Not so long ago, there wasn't an all-star team possible without the inclusion of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins in the line-up.

Within a few weeks, all three have lost, of given up, their jobs as managers of American league teams. To make matters worse, from Johnson's point of view, two former popular stars of the younger circuit have signed to manage clubs in the National league.

Of the seven big league managers who have been fired or retired since the 1926 season closed, five were under Johnson's jurisdiction.

George Sisler, deposed as manager of the St. Louis Browns, probably will not leave the league as a player, and it is equally probable that he will play first base for Phil Ball's club next year.

Relieved of his managerial duties, Sisler has few peers as a firstbaseman, and now that Connie Mack has rid the Athletics of a real "white elephant" in Bud Hauser, and has acquired a real first sacker from the minors, there is little likelihood of the Brown's star transfering his allegiance within the circuit. Waivers, of course, are out of the question.

Fohl Is Dropped.

The case of Lee Fohl is quite the opposite. Fohl failed at Boston and is dropped from the list of eligible big league managers without regret.

Cobb, Speaker and Collins, however, are not only capable managers who have shown they could drive their teams into the thick of a pennant race, but are tremendous drawing cards, as well. And big league baseball is organized for profit.

Johnson's idea would be to shift Collins to the post of manager of the Cleveland Indians and have Speaker try his hand at Boston.

The question of salary stands in the way of the first of these suggestions. It was Cleveland's failure to meet Speaker's salary requirement which led to his resignation of the big chief of the Indians. Whether Mrs. James Dunn, who owns the Cleveland club, wants to pay Eddie Collins sufficient salary to tempt him to accept the management of her team remains to be seen.

As for accepting the Boston post, Speaker has not made up his mind. There is no doubt but that the famous outfielder would be tremendously popular in the Hub. It was as a member of the famous outfield trio—Speaker, Lewis and Hooper—that Tris won most of his fame.

Speaker Through.

Speaker has announced that his playing days are over. He still is good for more than 160 hits a season, but the old underpinnings have gone back on him, not a strange occurrence when one considers that Tris is in his thirty-ninth year.

It is hard to see how Speaker could succeed as bench manager of the Red Sox, a hopelessly weak outfit, when he failed at Cleveland with a real good team. The same applies to Ty Cobb, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the Boston job.

Ban Johnson's interest lies not in dictating or suggesting who should manage which team. It is based solely upon the waning popularity of his league compared with the rival circuit.

Donnie Bush and Stuffy McInnis, former American league stars, have signed to manage the Pirates and the Phillies, respectively. That they will be more popular than their predecessors is probable.

There are no more National league managerial berths open at present, although there yet may be something doing in an eastern club. But if Speaker, Cobb and Collins pass to the minors, which is unlikely, or into retirement, their going means fewer dollars in the coffers of the Johnson circuit, for the time being, at least.

PRO PLAYERS BARRED FROM S. C. COACHING

Jacksonville, Fla., December 4.—(AP) No football player who engages in a professional football game will hereafter be eligible to officiate at a conference contest or become a coach in a conference institution, the southern conference today voted.

The decision was made when the conference formally incorporated into the by-laws two resolutions which were offered at the last annual session.

An amendment to require each conference institution to schedule at least five conference games each season was rejected. Had the by-laws been adopted it would have virtually eliminated teams on the borders of the conference from chances to gain championship honors because the geographical nature of the conference makes it impossible for them to meet five conference opponents.

An amendment proposed by David B. Morey, of Alabama, Polytechnic Institute to allow conference institutions to maintain a training table for the evening meal for football teams was rejected.

K. O. ROBERTS KAYOS DUNDEE IN ONE ROUND

San Francisco, December 4.—Joe Dundee, of Baltimore, conqueror of Mickey Walker and challenger for the welterweight championship, caught a Tartar in Eddie (K. O.) Roberts of Tocoma today, and was knocked out in the first round of their scheduled 10-round bout here.

Roberts, who entered the ring on the short end of 5 to 1 odds, had knocked Dundee to the canvas twice in the first session, but each time Joe struggled to his feet. Five seconds before the bell rang for the end of the round, the Baltimore boy was knocked down a third time, and as it was obvious that he was unconscious, the referee raised Roberts' hand, while Dundee's seconds carried their man to his corner.

Three thousand persons witnessed the fight which was one of the big fistic surprises of this year of upsets.

DuncanGym Plans Free Boxing Show

The Duncan gym has inaugurated the winter wrestling and boxing season. The Duncan gym is trying to increase the public's interest in these sports and efforts are being made to give the public first-class entertainment free of charge.

Bennie Reagan, one of the best bantamweights in this part of the country, has agreed to box on this program. He has been matched with Marty McCue, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

There will be five other four-round fights on the program and each is evenly matched, therefore giving plenty of action in every bout.

Dr. Lanford, one of the claimants of the heavyweight wrestling title of Atlanta, will also appear.

Ray Terrell will meet all comers at 130 pounds in a four-round bout.

Milo Potucek will wrestle all comers at 150 pounds.

Following is the program arranged for Friday:

Boxing.

Bobby Fruit vs. Moe Warshaw, 120 pounds, four rounds.

Tommy Ellis vs. Charlie Jones, 135 pounds, four rounds.

Marshall Duncan vs. Leo Nahlik, 145 pounds, four rounds.

Charlie Duncan vs. Harold Carver, 160 pounds, four rounds.

Bennie Reagan vs. Marty McCue, 118 pounds, four rounds.

Wrestling.

Dr. Lanford, 208 pounds, vs. Eddie Harris, 160 pounds, one fall, 30-minute limit.

Ladies are cordially invited to attend this program.

City Cage Loop Plays Wednesday

The City Basketball league will play its regular schedule games Wednesday night on the Atlanta Athletic club court. A business meeting will be held at the club at 7 o'clock just prior to the first game. At present there are only seven teams in the league and there is still an opening for one more team. The schedule for the week will be announced later. The seven quintets that make up the league now are Southern Bell, Atlanta Terra Cotta, Georgia Railway and Power club, Atlanta and Lowry National bank, Knights of Columbus, Federal Reserve and the Gulf Refining company.

Georgia Rat Numbers Are Awarded 32 Men

Athens, Ga., December 4.—Thirty-two members of the 1926 Georgia freshmen football squad will be awarded numerals for their work during the season just closed, according to the announcement of Coach Stanley G. Backman.

The men to receive numerals include Gunnels, Allen, Watson, Davidson and Palmer, ends; McLaughlin, Stelling, Nixon, Frisbie and Williams, tackles; Whelchel, Payne, Hill Rowsey, Herndon and Voight, guards; Thompson, Harris and McDonald, centers; Paris, Zant and Fisher, quarterbacks; Cook, Rothstein, Barrow, Kelley, Donehoo, Etheridge and Edmondson, halfbacks; Riddle, Gerdine and Jackson, fullbacks.

Coach Backman's charges played seven games during the past campaign, ending with the clash with the Florida freshmen last Saturday at Lakeland. Four of the seven games resulted in Georgia wins.

The Bullpups were victorious in engagements with the Fort McPherson soldiers, Mercer, Auburn and Madison A. & M. school. Losses were sustained at the hands of the frosh elevens of Tech, Alabama and Florida.

This is the fourth freshmen team to be graduated to the varsity since Coach Backman has been at the helm. Until this year, he had been defeated only twice in 21 games, both times by Alabama in the closing minutes of play. The freshmen team of 1924 was undefeated, another high mark in Coach Backman's stay at the university.

Although the record of this year's freshmen team does not compare favorably with past performances material of a high order comes up to the varsity with the call next September and there are a number of these men expected to create more than the usual stir on the varsity eleven.

Those Tuskegee Tigers.

The Tuskegee Tigers vindicated the judgment of the experts who picked them to beat the Hurricane of Atlanta university, but even in defeat the Hurricane exhibited the spirit to win and a spirit which will push them over another year.

One thing was evident on both teams, they have had excellent coaching, not the kind of coaching which relies alone on the native ability of a ball carrier to make the gains, but the kind of coaching which perfects blocking and interference to take their proper position in the offense.

The score of 14 to 0 did not indicate the true relative power of the two teams. That is, misplays by Atlanta aided greatly in the scoring of Tuskegee. The fact that the Tigers took advantage of the mistakes of their opponents speaks well for the coaching of the Tuskegee outfit, and they deserve the touchdowns they scored, but one cannot refrain from giving the Atlanta team much credit for the fight they displayed in the face of odds.

Thanks To Stumpy.

This column praised the work of Bill Hutt, sophomore halfback on the Tech High team who took his place among the stars in the Miami High game Friday, and we do not intend to retract the statement, but we have just discovered why Mr. Hutt is "doing as he do."

It seems that Hutt is the pupil of none other than the great "Stumpy" Thomason, whose record with Tech High does not need recounting at this time. "Stumpy" and Bill live side by side and "Stumpy" has taken it upon himself to make a second "Stumpy" out of the youth. He coaches him in private and grooms him for action before every game. Judging from the way Hutt performed in the Miami game, "Stumpy" is doing a good job of training.

Room For More Argument.

Another game has been decided by the point after touchdown. The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame vanquished Southern California Saturday by a score of 13 to 12, and the margin was one small point procured by a boot after the touchdown.

That game, along with the Tech-Georgia game of this year, the Michigan-Ohio State game, and many others this season, will again revive the controversy anent the abolition of the point after touchdown.

There are good arguments on both sides of the question. The pro of the thing is that two teams who drive over two or three touchdowns apiece should be acclaimed equal and neither should suffer defeat by the margin of one point after blood has been sweat and spilled to gain the six points on the touchdown.

The opponents to the abolition plan vision an epidemic of tie games in which each team would score a like number of touchdowns and neither would be able to win by point after touchdown. If the rule were abolished it probably would result in more attempts at field goals and thus would change the entire complexion of the game. It is something to think about.

The victory of Notre Dame is another proof that every team which plays a string of games in a season is more than likely to have one Saturday on which they are out of shape. The Irishmen lost to Carnegie Tech and then beat one of the strongest teams of the Pacific coast. The answer is this: any team from any college could have given the South Benders a great battle last Saturday, but this week they "CAME BACK." It is the story of football over again.

Shepherd Winner Of Ga. Horse Show

Athens, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Kirk Shepherd was awarded a handsome loving cup as best horseman in the second annual University of Georgia R. O. T. C. horse show staged here this afternoon. R. TULANE BOOKS 7 CONFERENCE GRID BATTLES

New Orleans, December 4.—(AP)—With but one indefinite date, Tulane's football schedule for 1927, announced today, is composed entirely of conference elevens.

Three roads trips are on the schedule, the Greenies journeying to Atlanta to meet Georgia Tech, to Nashville to clash with Vanderbilt, and to Baton Rouge for the final game with Louisiana State university.

The schedule follows:

October 1—Mississippi A. & M. at New Orleans.

October 8—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

October 15—Pending.

October 22—Vanderbilt at Nashville.

October 29—Maryland at New Orleans.

November 5—Auburn at New Orleans.

November 12—Sewanee at New Orleans.

November 24—Louisiana State university at Baton Rouge.

JONES ENTERS HEALTH SEAL TOURNAMENT

As the result of a telegram which Jesse W. Sweetser, British amateur champion, has sent to A. W. Tillinghast, prominent golf course architect and a veteran player, suggesting that a Christmas seal tournament be organized to rivet the attention of about four million golf players on the fight being made in this country to wipe tuberculosis out of existence, a tournament has been scheduled to take place at Absecon, Atlantic City, December 8, 9 and 10, which, it is said, will bring together in a pre-holiday contest some of the most brilliant players in America and assemble a gallery of unusual distinction.

Sweetser's suggestion was sent from his cottage home at Asheville to New York city and after hurried conferences over the telephone and otherwise, the event was quickly arranged. The tournament will take place at the famous Seaview club, that exclusive course being made available through the generosity and interest of Clarence H. Geist, capitalist of Philadelphia.

From various parts of the country golf players, many of them famed for past achievements, and others ambitious to win high honors in the game, are sending their entries either through local anti-tuberculosis associations or direct to the national chairman, A. W. Tillinghast, 33 West 42nd street, New York city. Among the best known players thus far enrolled are Bobby Jones, of Atlanta; Richard A. Jones, Jr., of Westchester county, New York; Finlay S. Douglas, president of the Pine Ridge club; John G. Anderson, amateur golf champion of France; Howard W. Perrin and Maurice Risley, the latter a leading player of Atlantic City; J. Wood Platt and Max Marston, of Philadelphia.

The program of the tournament follows:

Wednesday, December 8; qualification round; 18 holes, six sixteens to qualify.

Thursday, December 9; first and second rounds, 18 holes.

Friday, December 10; a. m., semi-final rounds, 18 holes; p. m., final rounds, 18 holes. Starting time will be posted at hotels and clubhouse and the rules of the United States Golf association will govern all play.

There will be mixed foursomes on the final day and prizes will be awarded to the winner of the qualification round; winner of the tournament; runner-up and winner of the defeated eight; winner, runner-up and defeated eight winner in the other five flights. Those on the course whether players or spectators, will be required to wear Christmas seal badges which, for the three-day event, cost two dollars, and for a single day, one dollar. The hotels in Atlantic City are preparing for a large pre-holiday influx of golfers, not only because of the prominence and skill of the entrants now being enrolled, but because of the constructive suggestion made by Jess Sweetser, who believes that golfers should, as a body, take a hand in the present-day scientific fight for better health conditions.

That New York City, Boston, Newark and Philadelphia will send to the tournament brilliant players, is evidenced by the fact that the Penn Athletic club in the last named city is preparing to send a group of its best golfers and that a committee of prominent citizens, favoring golf and better public health generally, with Joseph L. Bailey as chairman, is making ready for the part Philadelphia will play in the three-day event. It is stated that the plan for next year, and thereafter, is to run off Christmas seal tournaments during the year in all of the 48 states, the crowning event to take place for final winners, somewhere on the Atlantic seaboard, just before the holidays.

Gridiron Attendance Records Are Broken During 1926 Season

New York, December 4.—More than 15,000,000 spectators witnessed college football games in the United States during 1926.

Attendance figures at 120 leading colleges show an average increase over last year of approximately 10 per cent.

Goal From Field Proves Popular Scoring Weapon

No season in the 50 years of the present intercollegiate game has returned so many goals from the field. Not only in numbers do these scores lead in comparison with former years, but the performances are on a par with the best of by-gone days. The number of victories achieved in this manner far exceed the number that distinguishes any previous year in the annals of the sport.

The longest kick, drop or place, scoring a goal from the field was a lift of 55 yards by a drop kick, shot by James J. Fitzgerald, of Tufts, across Bowdoin's crossbar. At the head of the column, however, arises Young America for a place in this review.

Lodge, end of Western State Normal school, of Spearfish, South Dakota, in a game with the School of Mines of that state, scored three drop-kicks from the 52, 50 and 40-yard lines—a perfect day for school boy Lodge.

From Far West.

Appropriately a player from the far west stands by the side of Fitzgerald. Field Phelps, of the Colorado college team, against Western State, drove a drop 59 yards between the latter's goal posts. Phelps comes into the chronicle in another way for he is among the leaders in point of numerous goals for the season—five.

From another angle, perhaps, Frank Grube, of Lafayette, is entitled to a place in the first rank of drop-kickers. This remarkable field goal shooter kicked three goals from the field from the 48-yard line, and all by drops. His victims were Albright, Dickinson and Pittsburgh.

In the 45-yard class we find Eugene Cook, of Washington, with a drive of that distance against Washington State. Howard Harpster, of Carnegie, contributed a 43-yard goal to the downfall of Notre Dame. Humphrey Howe, of Springfield, with a 45 drop scored upon New Hampshire State and that mighty centurion of the kicking battalion, Paul Scull, of Pennsylvania, with a victorious drop-kick of 45 yards beat Columbia. Close to this group and with a record of a 43-yard drop against Harvard, comes Philip Bunnell, of Yale. Instantly, Paul Scull, of Pennsylvania, returns in our records with a 40-yard victorious field goal against Penn State. With him come Bernard Kilroy, of Boston college, who shot a 40-yard drop over Boston university's crossbar and William Slaughter, of Blue Ridge, who duplicated the performance against George Washington.

The 35 Men.

Space compels the presentation of nine conspicuous 35-yard goals from the field in tabular form:

Thomas J. Hamilton, Navy against Princeton.
Thomas J. Hamilton, Navay against Princeton.
Paul Smith, Michigan "Aggies" against Michigan.
Paul Smith, Michigan "Aggies" against Adrian.
Edwin Dooley, Dartmouth against Harvard.
Russell Williamson, Colgate against Syracuse.
Robert Hoen, Union against Norwich.
Paul Scull, Pennsylvania against F. & M.
Ivan J. Steahman against George Washington.

It is the roster of conquerors by the field goal method that blazes. In addition to the victorious kickers already cited gleam the names of Earl Baruch, of Princeton, who beat Yale with a 30-yard drop; Forest Peters, of Illinois, who won likewise from Iowa; Herbert, of Boston university, who overcame Holy Cross; Leary, of Lawrence, who won from Marquette; Forest Peters again, who in this way beat Hopkins; Fred Creamer, of Delaware, with a victory over Springfield; Stephens, of Nebraska, with the scalp of the Kansas "Aggies."

Rauber Again.

Louis Rauber, of Washington and Lee, who put a plaster upon Maryland and George Marsh, of Roanoke, who kicked to defeat the aggressive eleven of Hampden-Sydney.

Marsh deserves special attention, for his iron nerve and clever foot won three games this fall for Roanoke. In addition to the Hampden-Sydney game which he won, 3 to 0, Marsh defeated by a field goal Virginia Military institute and also Lynchburg.

It is not possible at present to name with certainty the player who has scored the most field goals during the season, although the records thus far available indicate as that champion, Thomas J. Hamilton of the Navy, with a grist of six, and Mid O'Hare, of Clarkson, with the same number.

Reports to the United News from Athletic authorities in every part of the country indicate an increase in public sentiment in football.

The game which pays the bills for other college sports played to the biggest aggregate "gate" of its history.

When the season reached its climax in the record-breaking spectacle of the Army-Navy game at Soldiers' field, Chicago, Saturday, a sum approximating $25,000,000 had been paid to the treasurers of athletic associations to the credit of the gridiron game.

In the south, university authorities report greatly increased interest in football. In the Missouri valley attendance figures were larger than ever before and receipts one-third higher than in 1925.

The western conference alone played to 1,500,000 spectators, who paid $2,534,197 for tickets.

On the Pacific coast, despite competition from professional teams featuring college stars of other years, attendance increased at the leading universities.

In the east the since defunct "Big Three' played, as usual, to capacity crowds for the major games, but receipts rose with the adoption of higher prices for tickets.

Harvard collected $270,000 at the Princeton game alone, charging $5 for every seat in its comparatively small stadium.

Yale, with one of the worst teams Tad Jones ever turned out, played at New Haven to crowds totaling 231,000 persons.

There was less tendency this year to emphasize individual performances, but the public's loyalty to the game was undiminished save in isolated instances.

At Urbana, the University of Illinois authorities reported a decrease of 35,000 in the attendance at games with other western conference teams compared with last year's figures. This was attributed to the absence of "Red" Grange and the 13 to 0 defeat at the hands of Michigan early in the season. The Illini packed in 58,601 spectators for the game with Pennsylvania.

After the crowd of 110,000 which attended the Army-Navy game at Chicago, other attendance figures look small, but Ohio State played host to 94,000 at the Michigan game and gathered in $170,000 at the turnstiles.

Attendance figures and gate receipts for the home games of the "Big Ten" were as follows:

	Attendance.	Receipts.	Largest Crowd.
Chicago ..	235,000	$510,000	48,000
Illinois ..	225,000	400,000	58,661
Michigan..	195,000	350,000	48,000
Ohio	183,000	340,000	94,000
Northw'n.	179,500	325,000	44,500
Minnesota.	155,842	266,000	58,500
Wisconsin.	123,000	180,000	40,000
Iowa	43,000	100,000	24,000
Purdue ..	41,000	47,350	15,000
Indiana ..	20,265	15,847	7,500

Attendance at Chicago's home games increased by 40,000 over that of 1925, despite the fact that Alonzo Stagg had a poor team.

At Marquette there was an increase of 30 per cent.

Northwestern, with the best team in its history, tied for the "Big Ten" championship, doubled last year's attendance, took in $325,000 and decided to increase the seating capacity of its new stadium before next season.

California had a weak team, but the attendance at Berkeley was greater than in 1925 and the receipts were $613,000.

Athletic authorities at other colleges reported increases as follows:

Georgia Tech—Attendance in 1925 was 131,525; this season, 137,294.

University of Alabama—1925, 73,000; 1926, 95,000.

University of Georgia—"Big increase."

Mississippi—Increased interest and attendance.

Missouri—Receipts one-third higher than last year.

St. Louis University—Average of 9,000 per game, which is larger than in 1925.

Wisconsin—Attendance increased from 89,000 to 123,000. Receipts from $98,000 to $175,000.

Pittsburgh—Total attendance 257,000, an increase of 10 per cent over 1925.

WESTERN LOOP FINDS POSER IN MEETING

Asheville, N. C., December 4.—(AP) The Western league tonight appointed a committee to interview Deak Roberts, president of the Texas league and learn if it is agreeable with the Texas league for Tulsa and Oklahoma City to withdraw from the western and become a part of the Texas league.

Mr. Roberts declined to make any comment on the move although the committee saw him when the league meeting adjourned for dinner tonight. "I will put the matter up to the club owners and managers on Monday when they get here," he said. "I have no authority to act in the matter."

Until the league can reach a decision on the withdrawal of the two Oklahoma cities there is no chance for the consideration of other business.

It is said that James Crawford, president of the Tulsa club, offered the league $25,000 for the privilege of withdrawing and that Oklahoma City offered the same amount.

Mr. Crawford would make no comment of the action of the league but was in conference with Mr. Roberts shortly after the meeting adjourned. The meeting was to be resumed later tonight.

Rogers Finding Pro Road Rocky

Philadelphia, December 4.—(AP)—Charley Rogers, speedy back of the University of Pennsylvania, is experiencing difficulty in obtaining opponents for the team of 1926 college stars he intends leading into the professional football field next month.

He also is having trouble in obtaining some of the players he expected to sign up for his team, at least two of them, Bud Connaughton, Georgetown, and Jack Butler, Pennsylvania, having announced that they would not play professional football this season.

Rogers had made tentative arrangements for his team to play the Philadelphia Quakers, of the American Professional league, here December 11, but Leo. L. S. Conway, president of the Quakers, announced tonight that his league had gone on record as opposed to any of its teams meeting professional teams composed of this year's college stars.

Mr. Conway said Mr. Edwards' stand also probably would result in the cancellation of the game between Rogers' team and the New York Yankees, scheduled for next Sunday in New York. He added that he understood the National Professional league had taken a similar stand regarding professional teams composed of 1926 college players.

Griffith Lines Up 21 Prospective Hurlers

Clark Griffith is determined to have a winning pitching staff next season, and already has lined up 21 hurlers for 1927 spring training. Only three members of his present corps of flingers—Walter Johnson, Stanley Coveleskie and Fred Marberry—are sure of their jobs and Curley Ogden and George Murry, youngsters who did very well in the 1926 campaign, will be forced to fight it out with the newcomers for the other places on the Washington pitching staff.

University of Iowa swimming pool, where the National Collegiate A. meet will be held next April, is made up of five tanks in one and is the only American university possessing a high-diving apparatus.

Auburn Wins Annual Road Race at Birmingham

FEW VICTORIES MADE ON PASS, FIGURES SHOW

BY PARKE H. DAVIS.

Figures are fascinating in their amazing revelations. Here we have watched forward passes whizzing through the air for the past ten weeks and yet few of us, indeed, have seen games directly won by the thrilling play. It is indirectly, or as approach plays that the figures reveal forward passes as wreaking their damage. Our review today, however, must be limited to presenting the longest successful flings of forward passes, the longest scoring runs with complete forward passes, and a brief glance at the most conspicuous games won directly by a forward pass play.

Edwin P. Dooley and Myles Lane, of Dartmouth, achieved the longest scoring forward pass of the year on all of the gridirons of the country. In the game with Norwich, Dooley flung a pass 55 yards into the tenacious hands of Lane and the latter raced 12 yards further for the touchdown. This performance therefore outranks Dooley's famous fling of 50 yards to Henry Bjorkman against Cornell in 1924.

Dooley and Lane also are to be credited with a 40-yard complete pass against Hobart, from which Lane ran 15 yards for a score.

O'Keefe Hits Mark.

The longest run with a complete forward pass, 88 yards, goes to Rupert O'Keefe, of Marquette, familiarly and affectionately known to his public as "Jerry." This stupendous dash occurred in the game with Auburn. The pass was thrown 12 yards by Joseph Leary and thus started on its flight from a point behind Marquette's goal line, thus making an interesting contribution to the debate on the advisability of essaying a pass from that position.

The second longest scoring run with a complete pass, amazingly, also goes to Marquette. Bert Nason in the game with Lawrence took a 5-yard pass from Rupert O'Keefe and ran 70 yards to his adversary's goal line. A second conspicuous long run made in this manner was the dash of 65 yards by Harry J. Jacobs, of Temple, who took a 5-yard fling from Grover Wearshing in the game with Swarthmore. The mighty Carnegie Tech team presents two record forward pass plays. In the game with Pittsburgh, Howard Harpster threw a pass five yards in length to Wilson Donahue and the latter ran 60 yards to Pittsburgh's goal line. In the struggle with Temple, Grover Wearshing, of Carnegie hurled the ball 15 yards to Arthur Cresse and the latter raced 50 yards to Temple's goal line. Delaware also indents itself at the top of the ledger. In the latter's game with Gallaudet, Fred Creamer threw a pass 15 yards to David Loveland and the latter dashed and flashed 55 yards down the field for a touchdown.

Russell Lloyd, of the Navy, also is entitled to mention for his race of 50 yards against Purdue with a ball which had been tossed 10 yards to him by Howard Caldwell.

These Effective.

Not one of the above great feats, however, affected the result of the game. Here are a few forward pass plays which won the battle in which they occurred.

Rupert McGunigle, of Yale, threw a pass 15 yards to Stewart Scott and the latter leaped 10 yards to a touchdown and a victory over Dartmouth. Sheldon Hecker, of Niagara, flung the ball 20 yards to Charles Moran and the latter ran 30 yards more to beat St. Bonaventure. This same superb pair of forward pass men repeated the feat against Canisius and thereby won another victory. Fred Sweeley, of Dickinson, hurled a pass 15 yards across Schuylkill's goal line to Wilmer Slivinsky and down went Schuylkill to defeat. A forward pass, Garber to Richards, of Swarthmore, beat Susquehanna. A fling, Spears to Owen, of Vanderbilt, overcame Georgia. A hurl, Coltart to Nannigan, of Maine, destroyed Colby, and a throw, Borelli to Stout, of Muhlenberg, conquered Lebanon Valley. And there you are.

RUTH REMAINS SHINING STAR OF YANKEES

New York, December 4.—Probably no pennant-winning team of the past ever required as much mending and patching before the following season as do the New York Yankees, champions of the American league.

Miller Huggins, having given New York its fourth American league pennant in six years, must go right to work tinkering upon the Yankee machine.

While the world's series is not a fair test of a ball club's performance throughout an entire season, it looks as though the Yanks were still composed largely of Babe Ruth.

Herb Pennock proved a great pitcher, and so must be counted in; Lou Gehrig played a lot better ball at first base than anyone believed he had in his system; Earl Combs helped Ruth in the outfield and Joe Dugan, despite his fallible trick knee, is still a good third baseman, but one whose effectiveness is impaired by his injury, especially on balls hit to his right.

The other Yankee pitchers are veterans: Bob Meusel is nothing to write home about in the outfield, and six tanks could be driven abreast through short field, where Mark Koenig was observed trying desperately for Roger Peckinpaugh's record during the world's series.

Tony Lazzeri is an unknown quantity, one at times who shows a world of stuff and at others shows like a bush-leaguer. "Push-'em-up" Tony deserves another year's trial before judgment is passed upon him.

Behind the bat, Benny Bengough, with Collins and Severeid in reserve, gives Huggins sufficient strength in that department.

The Yankee manager needs new pitchers, a new shortstop, a utility infielder, and an outfielder—not too large an order if Colonel Ruppert loosens up on the purse strings. But the rebuilding process, which may start with the greasing of the skids for some of the 1926 champions, is already quietly under way.

Hail "Devil May Kaer" As Ruth of Football

"The Babe Ruth of football." That's the name given to Morton "Devil May" Kaer, southern California quarterback this season. Kaer has been scoring a record number of touchdowns—football's home runs—for the last two years. Last season he counted 19 to lead the nation in this honor. To date he has scored 10 in six games. Kaer is unable to add field goals or goals after touchdown points to his total scores because he has to hold the ball on these occasions. Many writers and officials along the Pacific coast are boosting Kaer for the all-American team.

RECORD SCORING PLAYS OF 1926

COMPILED BY PARKE H. DAVIS, NATIONAL RECORDER.

Longest run-back of a kick-off, 99 yards, Gerald A. Thompson, Georgetown.

Longest run-back of a punt, 90 yards, Glenn Davis, Colorado Agricultural college.

Longest runs from scrimmage, 90 yards, Rupert O'Keefe, Marquette; also 90 yards, W. E. Amos, Washington and Jefferson; also 90 yards, Gilbert Welch, Pittsburgh; also 90 yards, Wilson, Rochester.

Longest run with a complete pass, 88 yards, Rupert O'Keefe, Marquette.

Longest runs with an intercepted pass, 99 yards, Arthur Roberts, New York university; also 99 yards, John Buckowy, Quantico Marines.

Longest complete pass, 55 yards, Edwin B. Dooley to Myles Lane, Dartmouth; also 55 yards, William Spears to James Primstead, Vanderbilt.

Longest runs with fumble, 99 yards, Russell Lloyd, Navy; also 99 yards, Jerome, Boston college.

Longest run with a blocked kick, 45 yards, Paul Hill, Bowdoin.

Longest field goal by a drop-kick, 55 yards, James J. Fitzgerald, Tufts.

Longest field goal by a place-kick, 45 yards, Benjamin Friedman, Michigan; also 45 yards, Frank A. Farrington, Bowdoin; also 45 yards, Pat Moulton, Alabama.

Largest number of goals from the field: Season, 6, Thomas J. Hamilton, Navy; also 6, Mid. O'Hare, Clarkson.

Largest number of touchdowns, 20, George Wilson, Lafayette.

Largest number of "extra points," 23, Harry Wilson, Army.

Largest total of points scored for season, 124, Fred Koster, Louisville.

MASTU KICKS GOAL TO BEAT MOCCASINS

Chattanooga, Tenn., December 4.—(AP)—Standing on the 47-yard line early in the fourth period this afternoon, Quarterback Matsu, of William and Mary, booted a beautiful dropkick just across the goal posts for the winning point against the University of Chattanooga eleven, the final score being 9 to 6. It was a fiercely-fought game in which William and Mary's line drive in plays outside and inside tackle vied with Chattanooga's end running and forward passes to produce a series of rushes up and down the field. The tide of battle surged from goal line to goal line and both teams made frequent stands with back to wall. Wallace's line plunging, Barrett's running and receiving forward passes and punting by Wyatt and Newbern featured the local play, while the pile-driving of Macon, kicking of Matsu and rugged performance in the line by Todd and Grove, with Eason's defensive play, were William and Mary's principal assets.

On the first scrimmage of the game, Wyatt lay down far to the left, rose up as the ball was snapped and took a forward pass 40 yards shortly afterward. Scott got a fumble at midfield and the home backfield ploughed to a touchdown, Wallace making the score. From this point the visitors' line assumed the mastery.

Early in the third period a 50-yard punt by Newbern put the ball on the visitors' three-yard line. After the visitors punted out, Lautzenheiser, making his third dropkick trial, was blocked by Eason and rolled to midfield. The Indians then hammered to a touchdown. After the next kickoff Matsu's 75-yard punt over the goal line put the attack in Chattanooga territory and Matsus' dropkick for the victory came a few moments later, early in the fourth period. In the closing minutes two forward passes, Lautzy to Barrett, netted 42 yards, but the Indians braced at their 20-yard line and a forward pass grounded over the goal.

FEATHER TITLE CONTENDERS "UP IN AIR"

New York, December 4.—The featherweight situation, which has been blown about on the hot air of the rival managers since Lou (Kid) Kaplan relinquished the title, has been clarified materially by the recent victory of Honeyboy Finnegan, of Boston, over Chick Suggs, of New Bedford.

When Finnegan handed the clever little negro a lacing in the Hub recently, before a record crowd, he established himself as the outstanding contender for Kaplan's title. Perhaps Finnegan is not yet champion, but he is nearer than any other featherweight.

It now remains for Red Chapman, a fellow townsman of Finnegan, to box Benny Bass, the rugged little Philadelphian, and for the winner to battle Honeyboy for the championship.

All four of these youngsters can make the weight, although a dearth of featherweights has caused them to step out of their class several times during the year. Suggs is the lightest of the lot, and has aspirations to be bantam champion as well. The little negro does not seem to be affected by the business of making weight.

Speaking of the featherweight situation, Kid Kaplan never received enough credit for voluntarily retiring from his position as champion. In these days when boxing is so much a business, and big business at that, the Connecticut boxer had plenty of opportunities to "sell" his title. It would have been a simple matter for Kaplan to have let one of the featherweight contenders outpoint him—and to have cleaned up $60,000 thereby. But Lou, although the offers were made, preferred to shoot square.

GeorgetownDrops Navy, Pittsburgh

Washington, December 4.—(AP)—Georgetown university's 1927 football schedule, announced tonight, includes contests with Syracuse, West Virginia, LaFayette and Boston college. LaFayette and Boston college take the place of Navy and Pittsburgh, played this fall.

Syracuse and Boston college are the only teams that will not be met on the home gridiron. The schedule follows: Lenoir, Susquehanna, Syracuse, West Virginia, Waynesburg, LaFayette, Boston college.

Arizona U. Uses Wildcat For Football Mascot

University of Arizona had a full grown wildcat of the mountain variety named Rufus as mascot for its football team. Rufus made the trip to the sidelines this season in the chaperonage of a freshman. They had to harness Rufus and give the freshman heavy leather gloves. The harness on Rufus and the leather gloves he wore did not keep the freshman from being nervous.

JUDGE LANDIS WILL ATTEND BASEBALLMEET

Asheville, N. C., December 4.—(AP) Judge Kennesaw M. Landis, high commisioner of baseball, arrived here today to attend the meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. The judge refused to make any comment concerning a move within the minor leagues to pay part of his salary and would not comment on the Ruppert plan, which would call for a commission from both majors and minors to work out a new status for the commissioner.

"I have nothing to say," the judge told newspapermen meeting his train. "I hope none of you are running high temperatures."

The board of arbitration, which was to have gone into executive session this morning had not met at noon. The Western league expects to meet late in the afternoon.

UNCLE ROBBIE KEEPS FAITH IN M'WEENY

One of the most impressive figures in all the range of the southern training camps last spring was that of Douglas McWeeny, pitching exhibition games for Brooklyn. He was long and lean and wire drawn. His face was typically Irish. He had blinding speed, sharp curves and good control. He seemed to be cool and game. He had been up in the majors once and he came back that time with a wonderful record on the coast. What more could a young pitcher have? What more could a manager want?

Uncle Robby fairly beamed on his last joined nephew. "He will make a great pitcher," quoth Robbie, pointing his pudgy forefinger at the graceful and most effective McWeeny.

But it was not so. After a most thorough trial last season (he took part in 42 games) the coast marvel did not succeed in breaking even on the summer's toil. He won 11 and lost 13. Nothing to rave about. And yet Uncle Robbie repeated in the fall his prediction of last spring—"McWeeny will make a great pitcher." And as your Uncle Robbie is both wise and wonderful in his dealings with pitchers, McWeeny is herewith set forth as the principal subject of today's Hot Stove league debate.

Checkered Career.

McWeeny is 28 years old, and he had a long and checkered career before ever he came to the Robins. He was born in Chicago where his father walked a policeman's beat for many years. First played ball in St. Ignacius college. Learned the plumber's trade. Entered the U. S. service in 1917, and it was at the Great Lakes naval station that this young Irishman really learned about the game of baseball. Jeff Pfeffer, the big pitcher, was his teacher.

When he left the service the ex-plumber turned to the game in earnest. His first engagement was with Minneapolis in 1919. He was farmed out to the Three Eye league. He did so well that the Chicago American league club secured him in the middle of 1920. He won seven and lost eight for the Sox in 1921. He was called back in 1924 and then sent to Minneapolis on another deal. "I was the deal closer in those days," declared McWeeny.

And then one cold morning in February, of 1925, McWeeny waked up to find himself sold outright by the discouraged Sox owner to Frisco. And that was the year he came into his own. He won 20 and lost six games and in addition won or saved 14 games as a relief pitcher. He led the coast league in earned runs per game with the fine average of .276. He also led the pitchers of his league in strikeouts and won two games of the little world series.

Falls in 1926.

On the major league records of 1926 McWeeny did not live up to his coast reputation nor did he come up to the hopes or even the expectations of Robbie. But still there was that about him, his coolness and courage, his long, lean leverage, his whiplike pitching motion, his stuff, his disposition, his improvement as the season wore on through the strain and grind that made Robbie stick to his first impression on this coast phenom.

McWeeny has all the unction and color typical of his race. But he has had some hard knocks in the big league struggle and he has taken them well. "I used to think I knew it all," he said sadly, "but now I know I don't know." Anyway, McWeeny has everything that a great pitcher ought to have and a lot that many great pitchers do not possess. He is one of a staff of fourteen pitchers the chief of the Robins will take south next spring and both he and his manager expect wonderful things from his whipsnake arm next summer. McWeeny, Petty, Elliot and McGraw, here are four Robins whose double A records mark them as the very flower of the bush from whence they came.

One or the Other.

"I'd like to buy a good second-hand motor boat."

"Well, you can get both kinds. Good and second-hand."

TURN TO FISTS

BY ROY GROVE.

Within the next few years Germany will rule the boxing of Europe. They are leaving no stone unturned to develop men deprived of military training since the armistice.

Today Germany is boxing mad. There are, easy to say, about 50,000 amateur boxers in Germany who are gradually being developed to the professional class to compete with all nations and to impair the standings of our own great professionals.

They learned a great deal from the war. They saw and heard of our own, and also that of England and France's system of prize-fighting, and the great returns, financially and physically.

Since the war Germany has developed heavyweights that other nations of Europe have been a hundred years trying to bring to the front.

The next five years will find them traveling the ocean to battle our heavies, and for a real fight at that. There will be none of the English beefer type. They will send us many Carpentiers.

Boxing in Germany is replacing their military training. They are doing the next best thing for their own protection. German organizations more than double those in this country and 10 times that of Europe.

Franze Diener is probably one of their best and may be the early challenger of Gene Tunney. He showed his skill when he defeated the fast-moving Knute Hansen on points, over a 10-round route.

Franz works very smooth and quick, for a nationality touted to be slow and of super-wrestling tactics. Germans developed in this country make very satisfactory fighters. Paul Berlenbach is the most famous of these. There are many Pauls today in Germany.

The leading German professional boxers are Breirenstraetter, Diener and Sampson, of the heavyweight class; Weiser, middleweight; Herse, welter; Friedman, bantam, and Stein, flyweight.

Donie Bush Styled An Aggressive Leader

Baseball men look for aggressive leadership of the Pittsburgh Pirates next season by Donie Bush. The new pilot of the 1925 world's champions, succeeding the quiet and reserved Bill McKechnie, brings with him a reputation for rough and fearless leadership in the American association, where for two years he guided the destinies of the Indianapolis team. A star shortstop in his major league days at Detroit, Bush did not hesitate to speak his mind when he considered plays of poor judgment. Battling with arbiters frequently resulted in his banishment from the field.

Hoppe Has Good Chance To Win Cue Championship

Willie Hoppe is expected to give a real demonstration of his prowess with the cue when he meets Erich Hagenlacher in a challenge match for the 18.2 balkline billiard crown in New York, January 7, 8 and 9. The contest will be 1,500 points, in blocks of 500 a night.

After a long rest Abe "Attel" Goldstein, former bantamweight champion, of the world, is returning to the lists under the direction of Charley Cook. Goldstein's last fight was a no-decision affair with Bud Taylor in Terre Haute, Ind., five months ago.

ALLITERATION PROFITABLE FOR BRADLEY

BY ROY GROVE.

New York, December 4.—This racing game is nothing but a rich man's game and don't let them tell you any different. We read of the many winnings of the stable and its individuals of the track and picture the owner in diamond studs.

Diamonds and wealth he may have, but—he never made it racing a stable of blue bloods or owning high pressure horses or even tracks.

Colonel Bradley's horses may be taken as an example, an example because they have won so much and at the same time are the most talked of horses on the continent. Down to the "blue grass" they are still talking of the running of "Bubble" and his pacing mate, Bagenbaggage.

The colonel's horses won $260,618 in purses for the season of 1926. Although a tremendous sum, it is nothing to compare with the amount expended in grooming, preparing and keeping this stable in racing condition. The whole game for the colonel is a pastime and a losing proposition if you ask Bradley.

Bradley had three wonderful horses in 1926. Bubbling Over, Bagenbaggage and Boot to Boot. Although Bubbling Over is the most renown, it is interesting to know that he won very little money for the colonel With less than one-half the fame of the one, two Derby winners for last spring, Boot to Boot was the most effective and brought in the greatest results.

Boot to Boot's earnings for the season were $111,095. Bubbling Over won only $53,815, and of this amount practically all of it was taken in at the Kentucky Derby, that $50,000 racing classic of the world.

Even at this losing rate, the ensuing year was Bradley's most successful. Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage ran first and second at Kentucky. Bagenbaggage and Boot to Boot ran one two in the Latonia Derby and these same two horses finished in the same places at New Orleans. Later Boot to Boot won the Ohio Derby and the American Derby at Chicago.

And for this he loses, and gains in a greater love for his horses and the game.

It is a peculiar coincidence with Bradley, he names all his horses with names beginning with "B." No one seems to know just exactly why, except for luck. All his winners this year were so named, and he has many others, such as Blended, Bewithus, Buzzy Wuz, Barcollo, Beneficient, Blabbermouth, Bottom Dollar, Blue Mask, Breakfast Bell, Bit o' White, Bill Sharp, Bob Cohill, Bachelor Bird, Blue Pencil, Bright Shawl, Belenland, Buckwheat Cake and numerous others.

Bradley had one great horse that was named otherwise, though, before he could get to him with his A, B C's. That was his great sire, North Star III. This wonderful horse is the father of Bubbling Over and Boot to Boot, Blossom Time, Blue Warbler, Beauty Beall and many Kentucky winners. North Star III is about 23 years old and was originally brought over here by Bradley from England.

The colonel has a great heart for his runners and when their day is finished they are turned to green pastures to roam at will.

His first thoroughbred was Friar John, that was as far back as 1895 and this horse won 65 races on various tracks in five seasons and when his racing days were done, Bradley just simply turned Friar John loose to wander around, never again to take a harness or hitch.

Expect College Hockey To Boom in Detroit

With the opening of the new arena in Detroit, college hockey is expected to boom in Michigan as never before. But it will be 1928 before the game is played on any scale at all, as the new structure probably will not be opened until the 1927 college season virtually is over. Yet in another year, no one will be surprised to see Michigan, Michigan State, Notre Dame, Minnesota, Wisconsin, University of Detroit, Michigan Mines, and perhaps several eastern teams playing in the Olympia at various times during the season.

Georgia Tech Stars Run Close Second To Winning Harriers

BY JULIAN SAKS.

Birmingham, Ala., December 4.—Bill Tate, of the B. A. C., and former University of Georgia track and cross country star, won first place in the 17th annual Birmingham race held here Saturday afternoon by the Birmingham Athletic club. Tate covered the three-mile course in 16 minutes, eleven and two-fifths seconds, closely followed by Collum, of Auburn. Ellsworth Richter, B. A. C., came third.

Auburn took first in the general meet, with Collum second, Morrow fourth, Wigam eighth, Duncan thirteenth and Waters eighteenth for a low score of 43. Georgia Tech took second with 61; Mississippi A. & M. third with 71; B. A. C. fourth with 89; Georgia fifth with 123; Mississippi college sixth with 139; Alabama seventh with 145, and Birmingham-Southern eighth with 149.

Lowers Old Score.

Auburn finished with a very good score as Georgia won the meet last year with a score of 63, and Auburn lowered that 20 points by winning with a score of 43. Bill Tate, the individual winner, was awarded a gold medal. Collum, of Auburn, second, received a silver medal, and the rest of the first ten each received a bronze medal. These were Richter, B. A. C., third; Morrow, Auburn, fourth; Smith, Mississippi A. & M., fifth; Wright, Georgia Tech, sixth; Rainey, Mississippi A. & M., seventh; Wigam, Auburn, eighth; Brewer, Georgia Tech, ninth, and Young, Tenth, Georgia unattached. The six men on the Auburn team, Collum, Morrow, Duncan, Waters, Wigam and Helms, each received a silver medal as prizes for the winning team.

The Auburn team took back with them to the Plains three cups, the general meet cup, which will be kept one year; the Southeastern A. A. U. cup, and the cup offered to the winning southern conference team, the last two being permanent cups.

Cup Has Unique History.

The general cup has a rather unique history. It has been offered by the Birmingham News to be kept for one year by the team winning the general meet and to become the permanent possession of the team winning it three times. This is the seventh annual Birmingham road race and no one has yet won the cup permanently. The B. A. C., Mississippi A. & M., Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia had each in succession won the cup twice but none of them have been able to put across the third victory. Each year it seems inevitable that some team should win the cup permanently, but so far it has not found a permanent home. This is Auburn's first claim on the cup. This is the second time in the three years following Tech's two wins that the Yellow Jackets have been runners-up.

Finishing Order of Teams.

Following is the order in which the teams finished the race:

1.—Auburn, 43.
2.—Georgia Tech, 61.
3.—Mississippi A. & M., 71.
4.—Birmingham A. C., 89.
5.—University of Georgia, 123.
6.—Mississippi College, 139.
7.—Alabama, 145.
8.—Birmingham-Southern, 149.

Individual Winners.

1, Bill Tate, B. A. C.; 2, A. J. Collum, Auburn; 3, Ellsworth, Richter B. A. C.; 4, W. L. Morrow, Auburn; 5, Smith, Mississippi A. & M.; 6, Tom Wright, Tech; 7, Rainey, A. & M.; 8, Wigham, Auburn; 9, Brewer, Tech; 10, Young Georgia, unattached; 11, Mullins, Mississippi A. & M.; 12, Pickett, Tech; 13, Duncan, Auburn; 14, Chason, Alabama; 15, Griffin, B. A. C.; 16, Williams, Tech; 17, Wilson, Birmingham Southern; 18, Waters, Auburn; 19, Becton, Georgia; 20, Yonce, Georgia; 21, Morrow, Tech; 22, Mann, Mississippi A. & M.; 23, Bailey, Birmingham Southern; 24, Davis, Mississippi; 25, Silburn, Mississippi; 26, Barrs, Georgia; 27, Peacock, Tech; 28, Mark Mississippi; 29, Jordan, Alabama; 30, Rassberry, Mississippi A. & M.; 31, Murphy, Mississippi; 32, Green, Georgia; 33, Herman; 34, Orr, Georgia; 35, Davidson, Alabama; 36, Helms, Auburn; 37, Teague, B. A. C.; 38, Kendrick, Alabama; 39, Head, unattached; 40, Perry, Birmingham Southern; 41, Morrison, Birmingham Southern; 42, Lindsay, Mississippi; 43, Terrier, B. A. C.; 44, Reeses, Alabama; 45, Stephenson, Birmingham Southern; 46, Krebs, unattached; 47, Williams, Alabama.

MANY STARS OF BIG TEN END CAREERS

BY ROY GROVE.

Now the famous football stars of the past few years will end. Men who stayed, played and even out played the famous "Red" Grange. Their end has come and they are destined to the business world or the coaching lines where their names will be no more than passing words.

But their memory lives and their history is made.

Probably the most famous in passing stars who played their last game, in a collegiate sense, is Benny Friedman. This great passer and "all-American" passes at last and is taken out of the game by Father Time.

Also finishing with him is Moon Baker, backfield star of the purple. Pug Daugherity, of Illinois, Barnum, of Wisconsin; Marty Karow nad Clarke, of Ohio State, all men beyond ordinary allotments of backfield material who "play no more."

Illini Hard Hit.

Illinois is hard hit by the close of the season. Zuppke loses his main spring, also both of his ends; Shively, one of the leading guards of the conference; Leonard and Gallivan in the backfield, and Knapp at guard.

Zuppke must build his 1927 team from the substitutes and freshman squads.

That grand old coach at Michigan will have all he wants to do in football at this time, also the chance to show what he can do on the gridiron when he loses eight of his men. He will miss Flora at end and Dewey and Levette, shining guards; Heston, who works with Friedman; Webber, Heath and McIntyre. That's a great deal for a man who has concentrated on such a wonderful working machine.

But Yost can hold the weeping head of Wilce, at Ohio State, and figure he's lucky. The state mentor loses 16 of his squad of a perfect working organization.

12 Buckeyes Lost.

Sixteen Buckeyes ended their careers with the Illinois game, 12 of them being letter men.

The loss by graduation will shatter the present Ohio team. Bill Hunt, half; Bruce Blanchard and Bob Siemmons, quarterbacks; Alex Klein, star center; Herbert Slough, sub quarter; Ed Hess, a guard of all-conference caliber. Julius Kreglow, Fred Mackey, Bill Reed, Ray Roshon and Kim McCarthy, guards; Parker Bloser, sub end, and George Worlein, sub half, depart with Karow and Clark. Roshon, Worlein, Slemmons and Bloser have not won letters.

Phelan Heavy Loser.

Jimmy Phelan holds "Cotton" Wilcox for his 1927 team, and bids 12 men good-by. They are: George Houston, half; Smiley, quarter; Luke Gladders and John Isley, fullbacks; Jake Spencer, Larry Deephouse and Henry Mireau, guards; Herman Winkler, Preston Snow, tackles; Captain Tom Hogan and Harold Malone, ends; Reginald Threlfall, center.

Wisconsin loses in addition to Harmon and Barnum, Kreuz, fullback; who has been on the shelf, and a McGiveran, a fast and shifty back, bunch of linemen ,Burrus, Leitl, Straubel, Kasiska, Wilke and Larson.

Burt Ingwerson will not suffer so heavily. He loses two of his ends, Captain Smith and Rice; Hines, a tackle, and Olson, his star lineman; O'Neal, a sub back, and Hogan, the quarterback, who has been a very good drop-kicker.

RECORDS SHOW FEW FUMBLES DISASTROUS

Fumbles, fortunately, have played an unusually small part this fall in football. Many followers of the sport believe that they should be eliminated as a scoring play by the enactment of a rule forbidding a run with a captured fumble but giving the ball to the side recovering it. It is argued by the proponents that the enormous activities necessary to prepare a finished football team ought not to be nullified by an accident which contemptuously is called a fluke.

But take the game as it is and glorify the players who scored conspicuously with a fumble. First, comes Russell Lloyd of the Navy, who in the closing moments of the game with Colgate, when the Navy eleven seemed beaten, picked up a fumbled ball on his one-yard line and ran 99 yards for the longest run of the year in an intercollegiate game and also for a victory. Only two yards less was the second longest run with a fumble, a dash of 98 yards by Jerome, of Boston university through Tufts. "Meb" Davis, of Franklin and Marshall likewise achieved glory by scooping up a Columbia fumble and leaping 91 yards for a touchdown. So, too, did Jefferson Burrus, of Wisconsin, against Minnesota. Milton Weaver, of Albright, breaks into the record with an 80 yard race with a loose ball for Temple's goal line. Norman Scarvie of Gallaudet in a 75-yard flight so scored on Schuykill and Bayer of Wabash paralleled the performance against Purdue.

A famous fumble play will be the 70-yard dash of Myron Stevens of Maryland through Yale, and sharing the glorious damage of the 99-yard dash of Russell Lloyd of the Navy against Colgate, is the 55-yard dash of Andrew Osterbean of Michigan with a ball fumbled by Minnesota. This touchdown tied the score at 6 to 6 and thereby furnished the base upon which Michigan negotiated the extra point to win the game.

Smith—"So you have just regained your eyesight. How did you support yourself during the time you were blind?"

Jones—"I was a baseball umpire."

Generals Seeking Centre and Vandy

St. Louis, December 4.—(AP)—Negotiations are under way for 1927 football games between Washington university and Centre college, Vanderbilt university and the Quantico Marines, but will not be concluded until after the Missouri valley conference schedule is completed at Des Moines Friday and Saturday, Dr. W. C. Edmunds, Washington athletic director said.

"While we should be favorably disposed to consider all three of the opponents for our next year's program," Dr. Edmunds said, "we feel bound to wait until our regular schedule is made at the Des Moines conference."

Kickers Better Covered in 1926

Long runs with blocked kicks have been scarce this fall, so well have the kicking elevens protected their kickers. The longest scoring run with a ball recovered after a blocked kick was a dash of 45 yards by Paul Hill of Bowdoin through New Hampshire. This performance is further worthy to head the list of these runs because it won the game in which it occurred. Biddison of Johns Hopkins made a touchdown after a run of 35 yards with a recovered blocked kick. Black of Bates in this manner scored upon Brown and Lohr of Wabash similarly crossed the goal line of Minnesota.

The majority, far and away, of scores with blocked kicks occur near the victim's goal line. This is because teams here really try to block. Hence the autumn list of touchdowns scored after runs of less than five yards are numerous. Among the most conspicuous are Sturhahn's score for Yale against Harvard, Gormley's touchdown for Georgetown against Fordham; Towle of Brown against Norwich. In this manner Ferrell of New Hampshire scored upon Colby, Barnhill of Tennessee upon Louisiana State; Brown of Illinois upon Coe; Collins of Canisius upon Niagara; Schmidt of Colgate upon Syracuse and Clemons of Florida upon Southern.

OLDSMOBILE PLANS PLANT EXPANSION

Plant expansion that will increase Oldsmobile production facilities one-third is now being made by Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich., according to an announcement made by I. J. Reuter, president and general manager.

This expansion program is being made along conservative lines, actuated by the demands of the Oldsmobile dealer organization for more cars, according to the statement issued by Mr. Reuter. During the past year retail orders were received in greater numbers than the manufacturing facilities of the factory could produce cars, even when operating at peak capacity.

"For the past two years Oldsmobile has held strictly to a policy pledged to progress," said Mr. Reuter. "This policy requires meeting consumer demand for quantity as well as quality. Our expansion plans have been made to meet this demand, which represents the annual increase in public preference enjoyed by Oldsmobile. This expansion provides for a daily production of 500 Oldsmobiles."

This expansion involves both the addition of building space and increased equipment to the large plant already including approximately 2,000,000 square feet of space, located on a 74-acre tract of land.

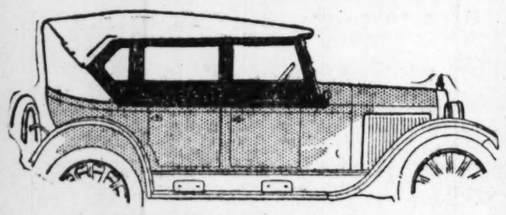

An additional building is being added to the heat treating plant that will double the capacity of that part of the Oldsmobile factory. This building will be equipped with the largest type of automatic and continuous running heat treating furnaces, together with the other equipment. In this department cam shafts, axles, drive shafts and many other vital parts of an Oldsmobile are heat treated to increase strength and wearing qualities.

The chassis assembly line facilities are being practically doubled to provide for the assembly of the greater output of the other departments. New and additional machinery will be installed in the axle, motor, sheet metal and other plants to increase their production capacity. Body building facilities also are being materially increased.

During the first eight months of 1926—the latest complete figures available—the sale of Oldsmobiles increased 70.6 per cent over the same period last year, which was the best year in Oldsmobile's 29 years in the automobile industry. These figures are taken from actual new-car registrations.

The published gain for the entire automobile industry during the same period was 14.75 per cent, less than one-fifth of the increase achieved by Oldsmobile. These consistent gains being made by Oldsmobile have necessitated the expansion program now under way.

The Best Car To Drive

NO OTHER type of car equals the open car equipped with a Glassmobile all-season enclosure for all year 'round driving pleasure and economy.

No invention since the self-starter has done so much to give you driving satisfaction.

Glassmobile weighs only slightly more than side curtains and can be put on or taken off about as easily as you can adjust sedan windows.

Studebakers' Coincidental Lock

The coincidental lock on all Studebaker automobiles, a lock that controls both ignition and steering wheel by pressing a small lever, answers one of the problems of the Underwriters bureau in curtailing automobile thefts.

According to a bulletin just issued by the insurance committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce one of the greatest causes for automobile thefts in America is the failure of owners to lock their cars. And the reason for this negligence is the inconvenience of locking devices on most motor cars, says the bulletin.

A quarter of a million automobiles valued at $218,000,000, were stolen in 1925. Of these only 80 per cent were recovered, leaving an unrecovered loss of $35,000,000, which does not include the loss incurred in repairing, recovering and establishing ownership of stolen cars.

"Strong emphasis placed on the human equation indicates that locks which can be operated with greater convenience than the older types would tend to reduce thefts," the N. A. C. C. bulletin points out.

Studebaker engineers anticipated this need more than a year ago when the coincidental lock was adopted. This is located on the steering post. The owner of the car can make his vehicle thief proof by pressing a small lever and removing the key. That operation locks the steering wheel in a fixed position and shuts off the ignition. There is a separate ignition switch to allow the ignition to be turned off and on, if desired, without affecting the steering wheel lock. The lock is easy to operate, easy to find, and is practically impossible to break.

The same key that unlocks the steering wheel and ignition opens the doors of the car and controls the lock on the spare tire carrier. Thus the owner need carry only one key. The locking device is so simple that he is under practically no inconvenience and will rarely, if ever, neglect to lock his car.

Edward T. Strong Appointed President of Buick Company

The announcement of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors corporation, that Edward T. Strong has been appointed to the presidency of the Buick Motor company is accepted in automotive circles as an expression of appreciation for the work which Strong has done during his 15 years with Buick, the last ten of which have been in the capacity of general sales manager.

Mr. Strong assumes his new position as one who has already demonstrated to the entire Buick organization his ability to administrate the affairs of the company. Since assuming the position of general sales manager ten years ago, Strong has been responsible for the sale of 1,500,000 Buick cars, a volume which for nine years in succession has placed Buick at the head of all companies belonging to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in the value of product marketed. Strong is also credited with building up the present Buick dealer and authorized service organization, which is considered one of the two or three leaders in the automobile field. This organization extends from coast to coast and in many foreign countries.

Makes Statement.

Upon receiving his appointment Mr. Strong issued the following statement: "During my years of experience with the Buick organization I have been greatly impressed with the universal fitness for their positions of the men with whom I have been associated. I feel that no better group could be gathered together to handle the affairs of the Buick Motor company. One cannot refrain from recognizing the value this organization has been to Buick and I know that I can depend on these men to support me in the work that is to be done. I am sure that our association together will continue to be mutually beneficial."

The new Buick president enters his office under auspicious circumstances. Buick, largely through the efforts of its excellent organization, is firmly entrenched as an outstanding leader in the automobile industry. Under Strong's managership, the sale of Buick cars has steadily increased from year to year. Out of the 1,750,000 cars which Buick has built and marketed, about six-sevenths were sold during the ten years in which he was sales manager. The sales for 1926 alone will total 250,000 cars. Some indication of the record-breaking pace which Buick has set is found in the sales figures for recent years as compared with the 250,000 total for 1926. In 1924 the sales were about 169,000 cars, and in 1925 the total was 200,000. About 80,000 of the present Buick models have been delivered to consumers during the first three months since thier introd ction August 1.

Years of Training.

Strong prefaced his sales managership with years of training which started when he became an expert at setting up farm machinery. From this job he graduated into the selling end of the business and made an enviable record. His company finally amalgamated with another which brought the famous I. H. C. gasoline engine into the market, and Strong was one of those selected to exploit the new product. Soon he was selling I. H. C. delivery cars, and in selling them to others he sold himself on the possibilities which lay before ambitious men in the automobile field. With characteristic ambition to began looking around for a suitable opportunity.

He found it with the Buck Motor company. This concern had already won a strong position for itself in the industry through its introduction of the now famous valve-in-head type of engine. With his usual enthusiasm, Strong plunged into his new job as special traveler for Buick. His success in this work brought him promotion of an important nature. A vacancy occurred at the Buffalo branch of the company and Strong was picked for the job of manager. He succeeded almost at once in greatly strengthening this unit. Not long after Buick was looking for a manager to take charge of the Indianapolis branch, and Strong was again selected. He put this strategic territory in such condition that it became one of the most important in the Buick group.

Made Sales Manager.

His next promotion came when the office of manager of the Chicago branch became open. Strong's record qualified him for the position. In a short time the Chicago branch was a model for the rest of the country, and was being used as a training school. Finally the chance came for the big step upward, and again Strong's record showed that he was the man to go up.

The next ten years gave Strong, in his position as general sales manager of the Buick Motor company, unlimited opportunity to demonstrate the genius which had brought him to the top. It took no longer than the summer of 1918, less than two years after his appointment as head of the sales department, for him to convincingly demonstrate his capabilities.

The annual award of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce of first choice of display space at the national automobile shows was and still is a prize coveted by all members of this body. The award goes annually to the member company which does the greatest volume of business during the preceding year. Strong and his sales organization won this honor for Buick in the second year of his sales managership, for the 1919 shows. Buick has continued to win this award every year since then, the national shows in 1927 making the ninth time it has been so honored.

Such consistent sales leadership required a dealer and service organization of very high quality, and Strong is given credit for building it to its present state of efficency.

There are now about 4,000 authorized service and dealer stations distributed throughout the country. These are under the administration of a grou of distributors and factory branches, located in key cities from coast to coast. The organization is so closely knit that even the most remote service station is within 24 hours of a factory branch. The branches carry a complete line of genune Buick parts. Thus any point in the United States is within convenient distance of a service station, with quickly available, genuine Buick replacement parts always near at hand. A service organization at the factory is devoted to keeping the group authorized service stations at the peak of efficiency.

Mr. Strong is a robust man of unlimited energy, and vitality. He has learned the secret of gaining the confidence and cooperation of his associates, which accounts in large measure for his success as an organizer and executive. He has always made work his chief pleasure, but realizing the importance of physical fitness, he seeks relaxation when possible in outdoor sports such as boating and horseback riding.

NEW REO COMPANY READY FOR BUSINESS

Opening of the Reo Sales and Service company at 117 Peachtree street was announced Saturday by representatives of the Reo Motor Car company. The new concern is equipped to extend to patrons of the Reo a higher type, more efficient and prompter service than ever before in Reo history.

J. H. Lemmons, special factory representative of the company, is in complete charge of organizing the sales department, and H. H. Bleiler, of the Reo engineering staff, is in charge of installation of the parts and service department. The local concern will be under the direct supervision of the Reo company headquarters.

Other members of the personnel were selected after careful consideration of their representative qualifications from local Reo talent.

J. M. Dickson will direct the parts depot. He is one of the oldest parts managers in this section of the south and for 15 years has been prominently identified with Reo machine dealers.

S. E. Pooser, supervisor of shops, is a veteran Reo engineering expert and is recognized as an authority in his line.

A complete line of parts will be carried in stock in the new store room, and equipment to guarantee prompt and efficient service to Reo owners already has been installed.

Window Display Features 'Baby' Range

Mr. Dodgen, floor manager of the retail store of the Georgia Railway and Power company, 75 Marietta street, has arranged an attractive window featuring the Roper range. The Baby Roper is being featured, (a toy range exactly like the big Roper), which has won its way into the hearts of the little girls of Atlanta. During the range sale especially attractive values have been offered in accordance with the power company's policy during its special sales.

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR GARAGE ASSOCIATION

At an interesting and enthusiastic meeting of the Atlanta Garage association Wednesday, December 1, at 1308 Citizens and Southern bank building the following officers and board of directors were elected:

C. G. Parsons, Cone Street garage, president.

John Hargrave, Hargrave Bros., vice president.

J. S. Cannon, Cannon Motor Co., secretary-treasurer.

J. B. Moore, Ansley garage; E. S. Myers, Ivy Street garage; W. H. Warren, W. H. Warren Co., directors.

The three officers and the three directors constitute the official board of directors for 1927.

The Garage association's membership is made up of a majority of the leading representative garages of the city, and is affiliated with the big Atlanta Automobile association, whose membership comprises representatives from practically every automotive trade line in the city.

Hupmobile has Swept to the Top of the Eight Market

Today the eight is the most wanted and the most talked about type of car in America.

This significant change—this swing away from the six of higher price—had its beginning two years ago, with the coming of the Hupmobile Eight.

For Hupmobile, as an Eight, was and is more than previous eights had been, and more than the six—by reason of its different principle—can hope to be.

To the smoothness and ease of the eight, Hupmobile added the super smoothness and ease of its own perfected straight-eight.

Hupmobile gave the eight an economy it had never known before—a generosity of gas mileage that surpassed even many sixes.

Hupmobile, with engineering and manufacturing sanity, built simplicity where had been complication before.

Hupmobile supplied an agility of getaway, a swift response to the throttle in any gear, that instantly makes it dear to the heart of the motoring veteran.

Hupmobile gave its smoothness, not only to the normal driving speeds, but to all its speeds up through the highest priced.

These things Hupmobile did, and is doing, and the motor car market responded with a rush.

It quickly swept Hupmobile into place as the largest-selling straight-eight in the world; and Hupmobile found itself at the front of the nation's third momentous motoring evolution.

First, the four supplanted the early one-cylinder and two-cylinder types. Then, the six came into wide favor. Now, the process is repeating itself with the Hupmobile Eight.

To the individual buyer, these things are paramount as pointing his next motor car investment.

To the motoring public as a whole, they mean that Hupmobile has overthrown the last barrier that separated them from the ultimate type of motoring enjoyment and satisfaction—the eight.

ALL PRODUCTION MARKS SHATTERED

Again shattering all production records in the history of three-speed automobiles, the Chevrolet Motor company, this month, closes its greatest year with an output of 728,697 cars—an increase of more than 40 per cent over the previous record year.

The unparalleled public favor which has attached itself to the Chevrolet car has enabled the company to exceed by 209,637 cars its own record of 1925 when 519,060 units were produced.

Under pressure of the most sensational demand the great organization has ever witnessed, factory wheels turned at a record clip throughout the year building a Chevrolet car every 12 seconds of each working day. Daily production averaged 2,450 cars and reached a high monthly level in September when daily output averaged 3,381 units.

Output for the year far exceeds that of the combined total production in the first 10 years of Chevrolet production, 1912 to 1921, included.

"Production records, which Chevrolet has been able to establish very consistently, are especially gratifying, primarily because they reflect the increasing public confidence in the organization and its product," said W. S. Knudsen, president Chevrolet Motor company. "We thoroughly appreciate this tribute to the Chevrolet car and we shall strive to merit the continued high indorsement, which the motoring public has conferred upon our product," he declared.

Chevrolet established a new monthly output mark in September when 81,158 units were produced. This achievment followed several months of record-breaking production. April, May and June, with respective production of 71,157, 74,617 and 77,241, each established successive records. July production was restricted somewhat to permit the tooling and other changes necessary to effect several further improvements in Chevrolet models. August production then snapped up to 75,551 units, only 690 fewer cars than were built in June, which stood as Chevrolet's high record month until outdistanced by September.

With production capacity for 1927 greater than ever before, Chevrolet, next month, enters on what promises to be a new record year for the world's largest manufacturer of three-speed transmission cars.

Darnall Motor Company's High Powered Sale Force

This group of men are responsible for so many Oakland and Pontiac cars on the streets of Atlanta. Under the direction of L. Ralph Wright, sales manager, this outfit is kept keyed up to the highest pitch at all times. Their sales achievements this fall speaks for itself the quality of leadership they are under. They are, left to right: R. J. Redding, Mr. Beagle, Burt Sykes, Eric Nelson, L. Baker Moon, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Walker, George M. Darnell, R. J. Donaldson, L. Ralph Wright, Horace McHan, Al Burtz, Mr. Goodrich and Mr. Turner.

TIRE PRICES NEAR NORMAL STAGE

Akron, Ohio, December 4.—With the price decrease of November 15, automobile tires are back again at their old level before crude rubber forced the first price increase in the pring of 1925.

The cost per mile of tire service is less than ever before in automotive history, for in the past 18 months of higher tire prices, remarkable advances have been made in tire manufacture, according to Miller tire officials. Through constant improvement tire manufacturers are steadily adding thousands of miles to tire life, even in the face of decreased prices.

Recent decrease was effected despite the restriction of available rubber imported to this country to 80 per cent of the former amount, it is observed. Restriction became operative November 1, due to the British Stevenson restriction act, because prices for crude rubber during the preceding three months had been slightly less than 42 cents a pound.

Rubber manufacturers here make no forecast of what the future will bring, in the face of a decrease in the amount of raw materials available and lowering of prices, which automatically causes an increased demand.

Early in 1925, due to a variety of causes, the price of crude rubber rose steadily, followed later by increased tire prices. A break occured in July of this year, made possible by lowered prices of crude rubber. The final reduction brought some tire prices even lower than their respective prices before the rise started. Rubber factories are running steadily to meet the big early winter tire demand.

OVERLAND DEALERS MEET HERE

More than 200 Willys-Overland dealers of the southeast zone Thursday discussed problems of distribution with heads of the organization and later were entertained by Gilda Gray and her troop of dancers.

Trix Jackson, Hazel Jones, the Imperial entertainers, and others also provided entertainment features for the meeting.

Reports at the meeting showed that Willys-Overland sales in this territory have set an all-time record, and predictions of the biggest year in the history of the company's operation here were freely made.

Charles M. LeRoux, branch manager of Atlanta, was host, and dealers declared that Atlanta and its environs is the best convention and entertainment center in the entire country. Mr. LeRoux was given a vote of thanks before the session adjourned.

R. M. Rowland, sales promotion manager, of Toledo, and C. J. Rogers, member of Mr. Willys' personal staff, were principal speakers. They reviewed achievements of the concern and declared that the industry, although at the present time one of the largest in the entire country, is still in its infancy.

The meeting Thursday was the annual zone gathering of dealers, and is an event looked forward to by those connected with Willys-Overland. Expert engineers outlined advantages of the new jobs and stated that their new product is a superior product.

Miss Gray and other entertainers offered an elaborate entertainment program of dances and songs.

HARRY SOMMERS, INC. ,LEADS RACE

Despite reports of depressed business in Georgia and especially among cotton growers, Atlanta Chrysler dealers are leading the entire district in sales, according to advices from the Chrysler Sales corporation. All Chrysler dealers in the entire country have entered a gigantic sales race for a $15,000 purse to be divided among winners.

And as thrilling a finish as ever any horse ran in Old Kentucky or merry England is forecast with scores of distributors vieing for honors on five tracks. Harry Sommers, Inc. Atlanta dealers, Saturday received word that it is leading the Pimlico track contestants by a substantial margin.

All dealers are classified and divided according to sales advantages and handicaps are provided for dealers located in sparcely settled areas. This is designed to place them all on as nearly an equal basis as possible.

The races close officially December 11, and Atlanta salesmen are pledged to redouble their efforts this week in order to clinch their lead and participate in the "spoils of victory."

The telegram received from Chrysler headquarters by Mr. Sommers Saturday follows:

"Grand national sales contest bulletin giving standing of fourth furlong just out. Atlanta has jumped into first position on Pimlico track. Congratulations to you and your organization. Suggest you pass this information along to all your organization and spur on to greater efforts to maintain this lead. Get out the long spurs and ride 'em hard."

A furlong in the race represents a week, and the fourth metaphorical mile post has just been passed. There are five tracks as follows:

Pimlico, Latonia, Tia Juana, Belmont and Saratoga.

So Atlantans and Georgians through the Atlanta branch are now spending not as much but more money for Chrysler machines than ever before, and have invested so heavily in the new machines that Atlanta distributors have forged ahead in the even and bid fair to cop first honors.

The purse will be divided among sales forces of winning establishments and managers of winning distributors will be honor guests of headquarters at several national banquets.

Included among the Pimlico entrants in addition to Atlanta are the following cities:

Omaha, San Francisco, Detroit, Kansas City, Cleveland, New York and St. Louis. These cities are supposed to be on the boom, but Atlanta, the Gate City of the South, is leading them all in sales reported Saturday to national headquarters of the Chrysler corporation.

GARFORD INTRODUCES 1 1-2 & 2 TON TRUCKS

Increased smartness of design and appearance, added speed, lower chassis height, and a driver's compartment that affords maximum comfort and convenience to the truck operator, are some of the features which combine to make the new Garford model 30 one of the most interesting offerings in the field of light haulage equipment. Deliveries are now going forward to Garford distributors.

Principal among the items of design which contribute to the attractiveness of this new unit are (1) a new and improved radiator design; (2) a new adaptation of streamline design, extending through hood and cowl; (3) crown fenders, and (4) a low-set chassis, on smaller, pneumatic-tired wheels, wheels.

Mechanical features are on a par with improved exterior appearance. The power plant is rated at 25.6 h.p. (S. A. E. rating). Cylinder bore is 4 inches and stroke, 5 1-4 inches.

The cylinder head is removable—an important feature in quick and economical servicing. All four combusiton chambers are accurately and uniformly machined, which results in uniform compression and a more even flow of power.

Improved cooling efficiency is afforded by the use of an improved, continuous fin-and-tube type radiator. A fan assembly, with vee-type belt, easily and quickly adjustable, and a centrifugal type water pump, with balanced rotor and non-corroding parts, add further to cooling efficiency.

The transmission and clutch are built integral with the engine. The transmission has four speeds forward and one reverse, and is especially well adapted to extremely severe hauling conditions. All bearings are easily adjustible. The gears are of finest quality nickel steel, with ample face width to withstand stresses and to operate quietly.

The multiple dry-disc clutch, in addition to embodying standard features of design, incorporates an important new featur, i.e., an Alemite connection in the left side of the transmission housing, which permits proper greasing of clutch throw-out bearing.

Strength, simplicity, accessibility and low upkeep expense are evidenced in the design and construction of the rear axle. The drive is of worm and gear type. Lubrication is positive and adequate for thorough protection of all wearing surfaces. The housing is oil-tight, sand and dust-proof.

Garford 30 design also embodies an exclusive and patented Garford spring feature, proven by years of service. The rear spring shackles have a three-point contact which, while interfering in no way with spring acton or flexibility, insures greater protection against road shocks and also permits lower frame height. The springs, proper, are of flat type, and carry the load on a reverse "cant" which materially reduces the rebound.

Other detailed specifications are as follows:

Crankshaft—Drop forged alloy steel, statically and dynamically balanced.

Lubrication—Force feed to all main bearings. Oil is also delivered to timing gear compartment. A pressure relief valve between pump and bearings insures uniform pressure. A bayonet type oil level indicator shows the quantity of oil in crankcase, and a pressure indicator on instrument panel shows oil pump operation.

Frame—Pressed steel, 6-inch channel section. Hot riveted and amply reinforced with cross members and gusset plates.

Front Axle—I-beam section, drop forged in one piece.

Springs—Semi-elliptic, 10 leaves front and 13 leaves rear. Alloy steel throughout. Patented Garford 3-point shackle on rear springs.

Wheels—Metal (S. A. E. Standard).

Tires—Pneumatic, 32x6 inch front and 34x7 inch rear. Solid tires optional, 34x4 inch front and 34x7 inch rear.

Millen Sets Trees.

Millen, Ga., December 4.—(Special.) Arbor day was fittingly observed here Friday with appropriate exercises in the high school auditorium. The program was under the auspices of the Woman's club of Millen and was enjoyed by a large audience.

Three memorial trees were planted, one to Governor Clifford Walker, Governor-elect Hardman and Professor F. A. Brinson, of Millen. Scores of other trees were also planted.

Franklin Coupe Lowest Closed Car Ever Made

What is said to be the lowest closed car ever built, a Franklin sport coupe measuring barely five feet from roof to ground, is shown here with Mrs. Augusta Bloodworth, prominent in Atlanta's social circles. It features the cruiser lines characteristic of one other de Causse creation, the Franklin sport runabout, and is marked also by the continental style elements that distinguish the entire series 11 Franklin line. As a demonstration of the enthusiasm motorist have received this car throughout the country, this is the first one to reach this territory, having been ordered since last April, and is being displayed by the Franklin Motor Car company, local Franklin distributors, 151 West Peachtree strete.

SALES MANAGERS MEET THURSDAY

What promises to be an extraordinarily interesting meeting of the Atlant Automobile Sales Managers' association will be held Wednesday, December 8, 12:30 luncheon, Capital City club, when the members of the association will be addressed by Wayne Hearne, a national authority on the problems confronting automobile sales managers at this time. Mr. Hearne is here specially to address the sales managers of the automobile dealers, and to tell them some things he has learned from sales managers in other big cities of America, and to acquaint them with the facts necessary to their success as sales managers at the present time. Mr. Hearne has, in the last year, addressed large gatherings of automobile men in all of the big cities of the country, and Atlanta is particularly fortunate in securing him at this time. The sales managers are urged to bring their assistant sales managers with them.

The Sales Managers' association was organized about two months ago, under the leadership and sponsorship of the Atlanta Automobile association, and its membership is made up of the retail sales managers and their assistants of every automobile dealer in the automobile association membership. The officers at the present time are Clarence Knowles, president; Elie McCord, vice president; T. P. Hicks, secretary treasurer. The active management and secretarial work of the association is handled through the executive offices of the Atlanta Automobile association, of which C. V. Hohenstein is executive secretary, 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE

They are all lords of time and space who ride the Reo road... that carefree highway whose end lies three years farther on than that of the average car. For they have mastered the moments with the tip of a toe on a Reo's throttle. And moments mean the miles that lie between here and there... whether "there" is across the town or across the continent.

There's only one way to know that Reo road—sit behind the wheel of a Reo and unravel many miles of it. There's one waiting for you so why not try it today.

These Improvements are Important

There are two general classes of motor car improvements. Those made primarily for their effect on the public—and those made primarily for their effect upon the car.

You will perceive at once that Dodge Brothers new five-bearing crankshaft, two-unit starting and lighting system, air cleaner and other recent improvements, are the sort that represent genuine value.

They are sound and substantial betterments, producing definite and marked results, and as such they are typical of Dodge Brothers methods and product.

MOTOR INDUSTRY IS HEALTHY, SAYS LETTS

The healthy condition of the motor car industry in Great Britain and the growing success of the Willys-Overland line in the foreign field are the high notes sounded by Sir William Letts, managing director of Willys-Overland Crossely, Ltd., Manchester, Eng., in an interview during his annual visit at the Toledo (Ohio) factory of the Willys-Overland, Inc.

Here on his 25th visit to America, each one made in the interests of the automobile industry, Sir William declared that the English Willys-Overland company is experiencing a very successful era with the most complete line in the history of the organization.

On his arrival in Toledo Sir William gave the first hint of Willys-Overland plans to keep in advance of the European manufacturers in supplying the old world with cars of a popular type.

"I came here to consult with John N. Willys on important matters regarding an increased manufacturing and assembling program at our Manchester factory," Sir William declared, "and I believe he has another surprise for me in the shape of something very interesting for our English and export market, and I am most anxious to know what it is. Mr. Willys promised that he would always keep ahead in supplying the European market with the right model."

The message of prosperity in the motor car industry in England is received with great interest in American financial centers since the general prosperity of this industry reflects to the good of business conditions in general. This in spite of the adverse affects of the prolonged coal strike. The chief effect of the coal stoppage, he said, has been to interfere with the supply of raw materials.

More than 264,000 persons attended the Olympia automobile show recently staged in London, Sir William declared, adding that the Willys-Knight cars and Whippets received a warm welcome. Commenting on the popularity of the Willys-Knight cars in Europe, Sir William said:

"These cars are very popular, not only in England, but on the continent as well. The Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine used in this car is of the same type in the Daimler cars, which are used by their majesties, the king and queen of England, and by many of the most distinguished people of Britain.

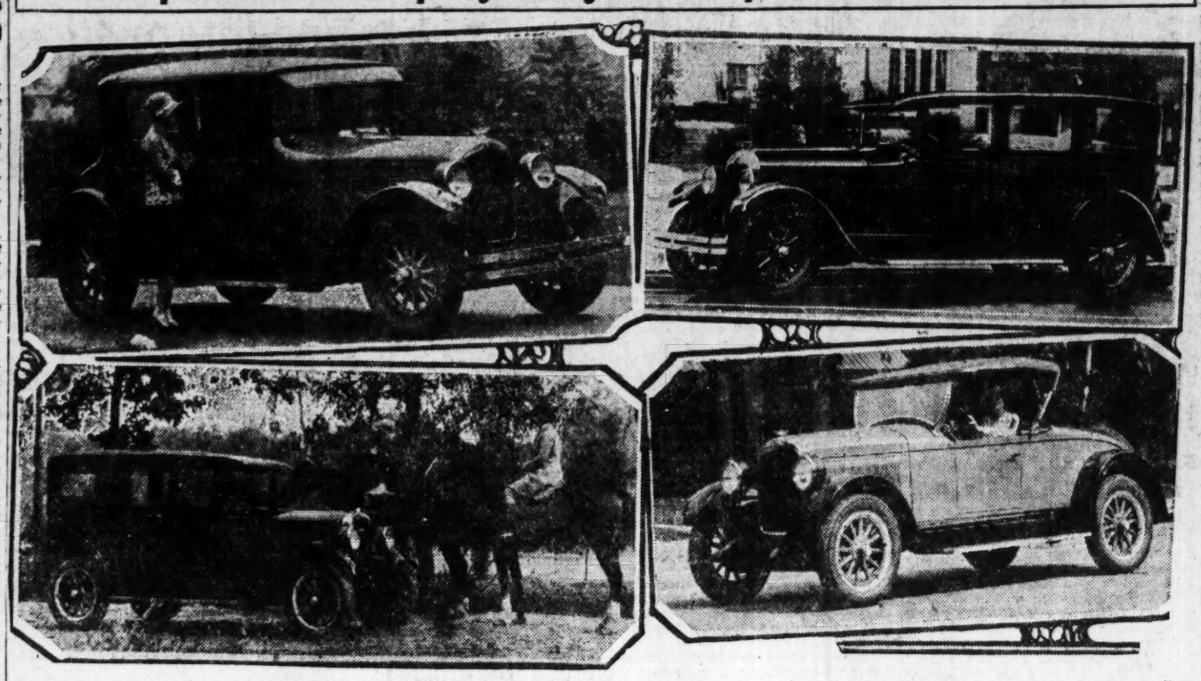

"Also there is a great future for the Whippet in Europe. It was the center of attraction at the Olympia show. It became highly popular at once and now there are large numbers of them on the roads throughout the British Isles. It is recognized as a car of extraordinary value.

"Four-wheel brakes," Sir William said, "are firmly established in Europe. In fact, a car not so equipped is a noticeable exception."

Referring to the new Daimler "double-six," which was shown for the first time at the Olympia auto show, Sir William declared: "This is regarded as one of the most advanced cars ever produced in England and it is interesting to note that the engine is of the sleeve-valve type as is standardized on the Willys-Knight line."

Sir William Letts enjoys the distinction of being a leader in the automobile industry in Europe. He is past president of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders of Great Britain and his plans and announcements are always keenly received by the industrial and financial barons of the old world.

BUSY YEAR AHEAD SAYS C. M. LE ROUX

C. M. LeRoux, manager of the Willys-Overland branch in Atlanta, whose administration as president of the Atlanta Automobile Association expires January 1, in a recent interview states:

"A number of very serious and interesting problems will confront the entire automotive industry during the year 1927. Foremost among these is the matter of legislation, local, state and national. There seems to be a tendency in some quarters, for some reason, to pick on the automotive industry, and to establish regulations that seem to have for their object somewhat unreasonable restrictions and regulations regarding the industry. The Atlanta Automobile association, made up of 150 leading automotive dealers of Atlanta and vicinity, and including in its membership representatives from practically every leading automotive trade line, is making preparations for a very busy session of the 1927 Georgia legislature in June. Of course, the use of automobiles requires regulations, and demands the establishment of certain restrictions, but, at the same time, these provisions should be of a character that will not unnecessarily hamper the progress of the industry, and interfere with the proper use of automobiles. The great majority of the Georgia legislature have always taken a very liberal and far-sighted attitude in these matters, and we expect this same fair and liberal treatment at the hands of the incoming 1927 legislature.

"Outside of this, there are some serious questions before the national congress, and the Atlanta association is cooperating actively with the National Automobile Dealers' association, whose membership is made up of automobile dealers throughout the country, and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, whose membership is made up of the car and truck manufacturers, with a view to protecting the rights and privileges of the industry at the next session of congress."

NEW NAME FOR BAGGS-LANGFORD CO.

Clyde Langford, formerly associated for many years with the Baggs-Langford Motor company, Ford dealers in Atlanta, has taken over the business and in the future the concern will be known as the Clyde Langford Motor company, it was announced Saturday. The new establishment will be located at 135-137 South Pryor street, the home of the Baggs-Langford company for many years.

In announcing the change, Mr. Langford stated that the entire personnel of the old concern would be retained because of its efficient management of the business in former years and that additional equipment to give added service to patrons already has been installed.

"Adequate facilities to assure efficient and prompt service to customers already have been installed," Mr. Langford said. "This was not to replace our equipment already installed, but to meet the ever growing business which has forced us to expand and enlarge our equipment. The confidence of the people and our increasing patronage has forced us to provide additional machinery and service. We are now ready and fully equipped to supply the demands of even the most fastidious."

The Baggs-Langford concern began business in a modest way several years ago, but under the direction of Mr. Langford and his associates has reached its present pretentious proportions, and has become one of the largest Ford distributing agencies in this section of the country.

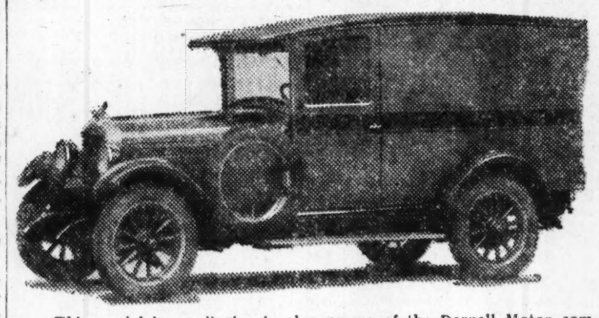

Many of the best known and most capable automobile experts in the entire south are now affiliated with the company.

Wylie Trussell is secretary and treasurer; Pat Saunders, sales manager; Weyman Jones, superintendent; A. M. Freeman, cashier; A. N. Burman, shop foreman; W. S. "Bill" Paris, parts manager; Rich Hightower, assistant parts manager.

Included on the sales force are Charles P. Ozburn, C. M. McIntyre, Joe H. Finch, Claude P. Lyle, Jim Nash, H. B. Coleman and Fred E. Buiel.

Mr. Langford and his organization Saturday received the congratulations of other dealers in this section in the change of ownership, and predictions of a greater achievement of success were freely made among automobile experts.

W. M. HULL SPEAKS TO SERVICE MANAGERS

At a largely attended, enthusiastic meeting of the members of the Atlanta Automobile Service Mangers' association, last Thursday evening at 7 o'clock on the Cecil hotel roof garden, three interesting and instructive addresses were delivered, as follows: "Auto Bodies," by W. M. Hull, of the Franklin Motor Car company; "Brakes," by Roy Young, of Thompson-Cauthorn company, and "Front Wheel Shimmy," by Frank Fletcher, of the Martin-Nash Motor company. Following the addresses, the meeting was thrown open for an open forum discussion of the above subjects, which proved most instructive and helpful.

At this meeting the official constitution and by-laws, drafted by a special committee appointed for the purpose, was presented and adopted.

The Service Managers' association was organized about two months ago, under the sponsorship of the Atlanta Automobile association, and has been functioning in a most excellent manner. The officers of the association are: J. W. Riser, president; J. M. Bohler, vice president; M. B. Wilkes, secretary-treasurer. The active management and secretarial work of the association is handled by C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary of the Atlanta Automobile association.

Ford SALES AND SERVICE

The efficiency and standards maintained by the company iin the years past is characterized by the upbuilding and splendid name that has been made in the Atlanta field. Service, under the new name of the Clyde Langford Motor Company will continue on the high plane that has already been set. And in addition, the company pledges itself to keep pace with the growth of the industry, thereby offering all the developments and improvements possible.

New Used Car Sales Department

The Clyde Langford Motor Company is the first local authorized Ford sales and service representative to maintain a separate branch for the distribution and sale of used cars. This is a part of the program of expansion which has already been effected. This branch is conveniently located at Edgewood and Piedmont Avenues, and will be used exclusively for the handling of used cars. It is under the direct management of the Clyde Langford Motor Company and its policies adhere strictly to the fair and square methods of doing business for which the company has long been famous.

MODERN CARS USE MORE RUBBER

Probably few people not intimately identified with motor car manufacture, realize the great extent to which rubber is employed in the construction of the modern automobile.

Some idea of the importance of the use of rubber in contributing to finer motor car performance may be gained from the fact that the rubber industry employs more than 120,000 men directly engaged in producing rubber elements for the automobile industry.

Of course, a large share of this production consist of tires but there are also a great number of other rubber devices that the average owner knows little or nothing about but which are essential to the satisfactory operation of his car.

Nash is recognized today as having been most active in the employmnet of rubber in points throughout the construction of the car where rubber would be of greatest benefit. In fact, Nash uses rubber in more points throughout the car than any other builder of automobiles.

As far back as 1922 Nash inaugurated the practice of using rubber to insulate the motor from road shocks and from vibrations transmitted from the wheels to the frame and thence to the engine. This was accomplished by introducing rubber cushions at the four points of motor suspension.

There are two distinct advantages to this Nash practice for the rubber not only saves the motor from shock and vibration but it also eliminates noise that formerly developed when the motor was running and there was direct contact between the metal motor block and the metal frame.

In the steering mechanism Nash also uses rubber as an insulating agent. The steering column bracket is insulated to prevent vibration. Likewise the steering gear housing bracket is insulated from the frame with rubber "shims." And Nash uses rubber driving belts for the generator, fan, and pump, although this is more expensive than the customary type of belt.

Another point where Nash employs rubber is between the spring platform and the frame and this rubber is of special quality. Nash also found that when a car travels over bumps, what is known as a "variation in the angle of velocity" is set up in the universal joint and this develops vibration in the clutch. So Nash developed a rubber device for the center of the clutch disc to eliminate the possibility of such vibration.

The accelerator has rubber pads and rubber pads are placed on the pedals underneath the floor boards. These pedal pads serve to exclude dust and dirt from the front compartment and also stifle noise since they insulate the pedals from the floor boards. Another instance of Nash use of rubber relates to the slot where the parking brake, ordinarily called an emergency brake, goes through the floor boards. With the powerful, fully-equalized, Nash mechanical 4-wheel brakes, an emergency brake is never necessary so Nash has placed this brake at the side near the left front wall. And rubber is used here in the way of sheathing to insulate the parking brake from the floor boards.

On the dash Nash uses rubber "eyelets" through which the tubes pass that go through the instrument board. This insulation also eliminates noise. In addition to these specific points of Nash practice, Nash also joins in the customary procedure of using rubber for door bumpers, for radiator hose and for sheathing electrical wiring.

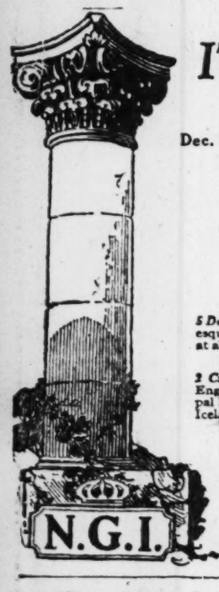

There is no question but that a great deal of the unusual quietness and smoothness of the Nash car is directly due to rubber and the manner in which Nash engineering has adapted the shock-absorbing, noise-muffling qualities of rubber to uses in an automobile.

BIG SALES INCREASE FOLLOWS HUDSON'S NEW LOW PRICES

Hudson Super-Six coaches, broughams and sedans, now at new low prices due to recent $100 reduction on all models, are proving the sales leaders of the season, according to sales executives of the Goldsmith-Becker company, Hudson-Essex distributors. They declare a marked sales stimulus has resulted from the reductions which were all the more surprising in view of the fact that they came shortly after the introduction of new and greatly improved Hudson models.

"Hudson certainly has knocked into a cocked hat the old idea that a car had to be expensive to be good," said Mr. Becker. "We now have the best looking as well as the best made Hudsons ever built, yet these wonderful bodies on wonderful chasses are selling at the most favorable prices we have ever known. It is no wonder the public is showing its appreciation.

"In these new Hudsons the chief of many mechanical improvements is the greatly improved system of carburetion and manifolding by which gasoline consumption has been reduced materially without sacrifice of pickup, power or flexibility.

"Hudson's always brilliant performance is actually bettered in the new models Power is greater. Pickup is quicker. Reliability is increased. Refinements and improvements centered around the famous super-six principle which for 11 yea has made automotive history, give more smoothness, freedom from vibration, while the new colors, new lines, new comfort, beauty and distinction of the cars are factors which are having a great deal to do with the splendid sales response."

Among the many advantages possessed by Hudson not commonly found in any but the most costly motor cars, Mr. Becker points out the following:

Full counterbalanced crankshaft, balanced flywheel, roller tappets, aluminum alloy pistons, nickel babbit bearings for camshaft, bronze-backed, babbit-lined main and connecting rod bearings, accessible timing chain adjustment, minimum crankshaft dilution due to inbuilt features, patented motor lubrication control, efficient new intake manifold and carbureter, gasoline filter inbuilt in vacuum tank, exceptionally sturdy frame with five cross members and rugged axles front and rear.

EDWARD T. STRONG,

PONTIAC'S DE LUXE MODELS DISPLAYED

The first shipment of the new Pontiac Six De Lux Delivery, which it has been rumored for some time would be added to the Pontiac line by the Oakland Motor Car company, was received this week by the Darnall Motor company, local Oakland-Pontiac dealers, and is now on display.

This news is of paramount importance to the business world using commercial automotive transportation, as the advent of this de luxe delivery car makes available for the first time in a low-priced business vehicle the smoothness, traffic agility and stamina inherent in a six cylinder car. It is the only car of its type priced below $1,000.

To the rugged, dependable Pontiac chassis has been added a body specially designed by Oakland engineers—affording beauty of line and color combination seldom found in any type of delivery car. Chassis and body are sold as a unit.

The body is of the inclosed panel type, finished in balsam blue duco, with wheels to match; belt panel on sides and back in burning bush orange duco and striping on body, hood, louvres and wheels. Body moulding, fenders and other metal parts are black. Wood and metal body construction is employed, all joints being mortised, glued, screwed and braced where necessary. The side panels are of wood and metal veneer, cemented together to prevent rattling and vibration.

The roof is of slatted construction, covered with rubber waterproof top material and floors are of hardwood, protected with steel strips running lengthwise of the body. There is a door on each side of the driver's compartment, with adjustable glass windows, raised and lowered by high speed window regulators. There are two doors at rear, each with window, and two Pontiac six sedan folding front seats, upholstered in Fabrikoid.

Graceful roof lines extend over the windshield at the front to form a sun visor and over sides similar to best passenger car practice, together with drip moulding. The tire carrier is located on left front fender and the gas tank is accessibly located at the rear, suspended from the body rather than chassis.

The chassis, with speciay heavy duty rear springs and heavy duty, 6-ply balloon tires (29x4.75) provides for additional tional load. The tail light and license dracket are suspended from rear of body.

Two of the unique features of the De Luxe Delivery are the Fisher V. V. one-piece windshield and lowness of body to the ground, a distance of but 25 1-2 inches from top of body platform at rear (with full load). The loading space of the body is 77 cubic feet, with a rated loading capacity of 1,000 pounds. The gross weight loaded with rated pay load is 3,470 pounds.

Equipment includes automotic windshield cleaner, cowl lights, rear view mirror, convenient doorlifts, quality, hardware and lock on right front door. The car lists for $770 f. o. b. factory.

KEY PLAYS PART IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Probably no other instrument of practical and general use has achieved the fame and symbolic glory that is claimed by the little piece of hardware called a key, said C. S. Mentzer, of the Yarbrough-Mentzer Motor company, local Studebaker dealer, yesterday.

"The key has been made immortal in history, fiction, song, drama, and art," said Mr. Mentzer. "The 'keys to the city' have been famous for centuries. No celebrated guest ever visits an American city, town or village without being presented with the 'keys' to that community. The Prince of Wales has thousands of them. Queen Marie was given scores of these symbols of American hospitality. In fact, I believe that 'keys' presented in America to famous European guests would reach many times around the earth if placed end to end.

"Then take the key of Bluebeard's death room. Who has not read of this mythical story and knows of the importance that a key played in the famous tale? Song writers, those of both ancient and modern times, have used the 'key' theme in hundreds of ballads. Usually these songs speak of the key to love or the 'key to my heart.' Famous painters have used scenes of key presentations as their subjects. Fairy stories abound with 'key' plots.

"But there is yet another 'key story' that is rapidly growing famous in America and that is the "Keys to Happiness" plan of the Studebaker Corporation of America.

"A little Christmas jewel case containing two keys to the Studebaker automobile purchased are given to the buyer, who hangs the box on the family Christmas tree. The car is delivered Christmas morning or Christmas eve.

"We are now working on our 1926 'Keys to Happiness' campaign and we know we will make many new friends by it."

LEGION MEMBERSHIP GAINS IN GEORGIA

Gainesville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Captain M. S. Eddy, of Gainesville, chairman of the membership campaign American Legion, department of Georgia, has issued a letter to all post commanders, post adjutants and other legion officials, in which he says in part:

"The American Legion can today be regarded as a vast field army of 700,000 strong trying to combat everything of an un-American nature in the country.

"The secret of the success of its efforts lies in its power. Its power is its membership.

"That that power is increasing is most evident throughout the nation. It is especially so in the state of Georgia. The Georgia department is now coming into its own. Its eligibles are gathering to its colors now more than ever before."

BOY SCOUT CAMP FORMED AT SPARTA

Sparta, Ga., December 4.—(Special)—A boy scout camp has been organized here by Superintendent C. C. Chalker of the local public schools and about 25 scouts have already taken the oath of allegiance and are having regular drills and exercises required by the national scout council.

The scouts have regulation uniforms and plan to put on a parade before many weeks.

Up and Down Florida Seeking Information

BY O. J. WILLOUGHBY
Director Constitution Information Service.

Florida is ready!

A better winter awaits her visitors than has been possible in the recent past.

Hotel rates and service have in most instances reached normal.

More and better facilities for recreation are available.

Hurricane scars are healing rapidly. In fact, only a comparatively small portion of the state suffered noticeable damage, and of that area the destruction, except to shrubbery and flora, has largely been repaired or covered up.

The wild and hurtful speculation in real estate has gone on its way and only substantial development is noticeable in this line. The froth has largely passed and though its passing has caused distress to many buyers and sellers alike, a great many of the sound developments are moving merrily onward, and at least one new development, that of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, on the west coast, south of Sarasota, is showing remarkable progress.

Here, where only a forest stood when the writer visited the spot just a year ago, stands today a community of hotels, apartment houses, homes and the nucleus of a business section and agricultural "back country" that in the face of rapid deflation would appear to have been impossible of accomplishment in its entirety within eight months of 1926.

Hotel Rates Normal.

Throughout the state, east coast, west coast and on the ridge, hotel men assure the writer that rates will be lower and that service will be better than in the past three seasons. Many new hotels just opened help to make this assurance seem convincing.

Scarcely a community in the state does not boast of its new hotels. On the west coast, Bradenton, Sarasota, Venice, Tampa and St. Petersburg have one or more fine new hostelries. On the ridge, Ocala, Haines City, Lake Wales, Avon Park and other cities have new hotels open or about to open. On the east coast there are many, but particularly in the Palm Beaches and Miami section are new hotels noticeable.

New golf courses and other facilities for sports and recreation are likewise noticeable throughout the state. The devotee of the keanel clubs and stables will find many additional tracks this year, while the fisherman and followers of nimrod will find their usual paradise.

Roads Are Improving.

Roads in Florida and states north are improving rapidly. The new highway from West Palm Beach and Fort Pierce to the west coast through Okeechobee and Arcadia is now passable, while officials promise to have it entirely surfaced by the new year. There is other construction in Florida, but probably no other through route of equal importance will be opened so quickly.

The Scenic Highlands highway from Haines City to Lake Annie, where it connects with the above road, has been greatly improved by widening and straightening and offers a delightful variation from the coastal roads that is certain to attract a good bit of travel north and south.

Roads through Georgia are carrying the traffic with comparative ease thus far, and unless winter rains should prove unusually heavy, it is probable that one or more of the several routes across the state will be able to carry traffic at all times this season.

The recently announced plan of Georgia to build cross-state highways at the quickest possible time is being received with acclaim by all Florida and her visitors from every part of the country.

BIG PLANS FOR NATIONAL AUTO SHOW

New York, December 4.—In workrooms, studios and offices scattered here and there all over New York a miniature army of men and women is working these days in preparation for the biggest of the New York annaul expositions—the National Automobile show—which will be held in Grand Central palace January 8 to 15. The task is a stupendous one, so complex that it is almost never ending. Almost before one of these presentations ends S. A. Miles, the manager of the big display, begins planning for the one that will occur a year later.

For the coming renewal work has been under way for several months and, at the present time, with only a few weeks remaining before the 1927 models of motor cars make their debut, the machinery is running at high speed.

The approaching renewal will be the most comprehensive presentation of the motor car industry held in several years. It will include not only the newest models of passenger cars and accessories, but the January show will bring, as well, two very important new sections—light motor trucks and shop equipment. This means many dozens of new exhibitors.

To the huge factories scattered throughout the middle west and in some parts of the east the New York Automobile show likewise means a protracted period of preparation. Being the inaugural display of the year, it necessitates the finishing up of the new models so that they will make their finest impression on the motorwise throngs that visit the palace.

More and more the national automobile shows—that in New York followed by the one in Chicago—are coming to be regarded as barometers of the industry. On their showing in orders a majority of the manufacturers dictate their production policy for the entire season. This trend has become even more pronounced in the last two years, with the establishment of trade days for the manufacturers and their personnel, periods that are marked by purchases for factory production.

The addition of a shop equipment section in the coming show will add greatly to the volume of business by affording proprietors of service stations, shops, garages, etc., a direct oportunity to select their equipment. More than 50 makers will display their products, including cranes, hoists, runways, compressors, jacks, all types of electrically propelled tools, battery charging apparatus, welding and towing equipment and tire repair machinery. Much of this will be shown in operation.

In connection with the national automobile show there will be held again the world motor transport congress, which will attract delegates from nearly every country to see the latest developments of the industry in America and to study the methods that have placed this country in the commanding position it now occupies in the automotive field. Among the delegates will be some of the most notable manufacturers, engineers and dealers in foreign countries, and for their entertainment and education the national automobile chamber of commerce is arranging a most elaborate program.

SPECIAL OFFICER GIVEN TEN YEARS IN SUSPECT'S DEATH

Nashville, Tenn., December 4.—(AP) Sam Turney, 60, son of former Governor Peter Turney, was convicted of second degree murder here today, in connection with the death of Richard J. Halloran.

Turney in the capacity of a railroad officer, had arrested young Halloran, a railroad employee, on a charge of loitering about the railroad offices. The state's theory was that Turney struck Halloran a fatal blow with a flashlight while waiting for the police patrol wagon. Turney denied striking the blow, claiming that Halloran was intoxicated and fell, striking his head on the curbing. Turney's punishment was fixed at not exceeding 10 years.

LITHONIA PROPERTY SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Lithonia, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The property on Main street here that was owned by the Swift estate for 80 years and which was recently sold to the Davidson Granite company, was auctioned off yesterday for a total of $37,000. The Granite company paid $22,000 for the property about 60 days ago.

The purchasers announce they will erect modern buildings on the lots, which will include several stores, a filling station and a home for the Lithonia Woman's club.

An Atlanta auction firm conducted the sale.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

ATLANTA REALTORS WILL GO TO ALBANY

With indications that a large number of real estate men throughout the state will attend the annual convention of the Georgia Real Estate board to be held in Albany on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, the Atlanta board is planning to send a large delegation, it was announced Saturday.

A program dealing with real estate has been arranged for which speakers have been secured who are considered leaders in the lines upon which they will talk. Every real estate man will be benefited materially by attending the convention, the officials stated.

According to Dana Belser, president of the Atlanta board, the Atlanta delegation will consist of 25 or more members. Arrangements were made for those attending to leave Atlanta at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night, December 7, on the Dixie Flyer, and to return Thursday night, December 9, arriving in Atlanta Friday morning.

The members of the board who have signified their intentions of attending are: Ward Wight, Frank C. Owens, Jesse Draper, M. S. Rankin, R. R. Otis, O. O. Hale, E. M. Chapman, W. P. Walthal, Geo. M. Brown, C. D. Cabaniss, Brooks Mell, Dana Belser, J. C. Baldwin, Sam P. Cromheim, G. W. Withers, Harllee Branch, H. H. Robinson, Bayne Gibson and others.

Delegates attending from the Atlanta board will be notified by mail, giving in detail all other arrangements as to attending the convention at Albany, it was stated.

Who's Who In Real Estate

BY MIKE BREEN

Shake hands with John A. Dailey, who, as a member of the sales staff of the L. W. Rogers Realty and Trust company, specializes in business and investment properties, and who, incidentally, is the proud papa of a three-months-old John A. Dailey, Jr.

Mr. Dailey is serving his fourth year with the Rogers concern, and despite unusual activity and acute interest at home during the past month or two, he has managed to keep going one of the best sales record of any gentleman in his line in the city.

L. W. Rogers is one of the largest and best known real estate firms in the south, as is well enough known, and handles all classes of real estate.

Mr. Dailey has made a specialty of business and investment properties and has made great progress in that line during his four-year affiliation with the Rogers company. It was at Mr. Dailey's suggestion that Rogers company accepted cotton at 15 cents a pound as part payment on property sold during the recent slump in cotton prices, creating many new friends for the company and binding faster the ties that held the old.

"Atlanta is the fastest growing city in the south today," said Mr. Dailey, commenting on the real estate situation in Atlanta. "At present there is an acute shortage of good apartment houses. Our firm has received several inquiries in the past few week from people who are desirous of purchasing Atlanta apartments. Business is active with us and our outlook for the spring is nothing if not optimistic."

The gentleman you have just met—John A. Dailey—is a college graduate and a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He was a member of the varsity football team and was as prominently identified with the top rung in his other college activities as he was on the athletic field.

DANN LAUDS DRIVE TO ADVERTISE CITY

"The new industries and citizens that will be brought to Atlanta through the $1,000,000 advertisement campaign being sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce mean a larger Atlanta and consequently increasing real estate values," it was declared by T. C. Dann, head of the T. C. Dann Realty company, which owns the Westwood Terrace development, in discussing the advantages of the campaign from the real estate point of view.

"In asking Atlantans to subscribe to the advertising fund, the various organizations concerned, and particularly the real estate dealers of the city, are morally obligated to sell Atlanta to Atlantans in turn. If our own citizens are to be the first to profit by the increased prosperity, as they are entitled, they can best do so by buying Atlanta physically, that is, buy in property.

"Every real estate dealer in Atlanta is duty bound to encourage the movement. Where my own company is particularly concerned is through its policy of "buying on the rim" of the city, which feature it encourages. If the city grows as Atlanta has, let alone the added impetus that will be derived from the advertising campaign, the property on the edge of the city, just beyond the corporate limits, is certain to enhance in value at the most rapid rate.

"An example of this can be cited in our property at Westwood Terrace. Though opened not long ago, the subdivision has enjoyed sales amounting to more than $130,000, and the enhancement of the property values has been obvious, so much so, that we plan to increase all unsold lots."

ACTIVITY IN RURAL REAL ESTATE GAINS

Activity in rural property was shown by the success of the sale Thursday of a parcel owned by the Davidson Granite company, at Lithonia, according to announcement by John P. Oglesby, president and manager of the Oglesby Realty and Auction, which handled the sale.

The Oglesby company, which has its home offices at the Ansley hotel in Atlanta, has not confined its operations wholly to the territory of Georgia this year, it was stated. "We have held sales this year in Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and a number of sales in Texas," officials stated.

NAVAL STORES END SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Brunswick, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The season for naval stores operation is closing with one of the best years in the history of this industry in the pine tree belt of the southern states.

The spring was unusually late and receipts for the first months of the naval stores season were curtailed because of the cool, backward spring. Otherwise, however, 1926 has been one of the very best naval stores years ever known; particularly is this true of the fall season.

Receipt of naval stores at ports show an increase for the months of October and November of more than 40 per cent over the corresponding months of last year.

Naval stores producers seem to be impressed with the necessity of limiting production for the ensuing season to the point at least that the crop for next year may not be larger than that of 1926.

Roseland, Beautiful New Atlanta Cemetery, Ready for Formal Opening, Officials Say

Two views of the new cemetery at Stewart and Cleveland avenues, showing concrete driveways being laid.

Roseland, Atlanta's new cemetery, at Stewart and Cleveland avenues, is ready for opening, according to announcement Saturday by officials of the developing company.

The developers have been improving the property and developing its natural beauty so that they would have their beautification plans well under way when the formal opening announcement was made.

The program of improvements is wide and varied in scope, calling for the expenditure of thousands of dollars, it was stated. It includes concrete driveways throughout the property, 1,750 feet of which is now being laid. Surrounding the burial lots and extending inward 50 feet is an evergreen park, planted in shrubbery, flowers and excellently landscaped. The entrance archway on Cleveland avenue is being erected of fine Georgia marble, the officials stated.

The natural beauty of Roseland is being developed by the skill of nationally-recognized landscape architects. In the center of the park will be a lake formed by the intersection of two streams. The banks will be sodded and circled by a concrete driveway.

The development and operation of Roseland, which contains a perpetual care plan with the Georgia Savings Bank and Trust company as trustees, it being carried on by well-known Atlantans, including C. S. Honour, Mrs. Ida T. Honour and Miss Maggie E. McMaster, with J. L. Skinner as sales manager.

Jeter and Stewart Form New Real Estate Concern

FRED P. JETER AND J. ALLEN STEWART

Announcement was made on Saturday that Fred P. Jeter and J. Allen Stewart, well-known young real estate men, had organized the Jeter-Stewart company, with offices in the Norris building.

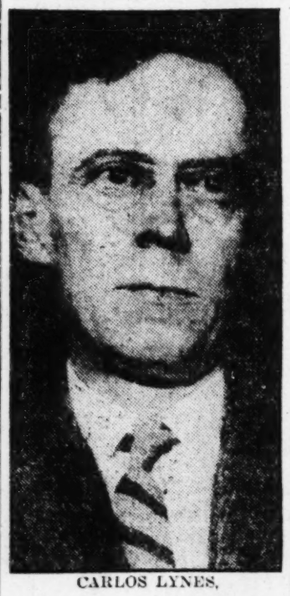

They will do a general real estate business with particular emphasis on the renting of high class apartment houses and other property, including business property, they declared. They will also handle sales.

Both members of the new organization have had a wide experience in real estate.

A. S. Adams-Cates Company To Handle Loans in Atlanta For Big New York Bond House

Mortgage Bond Company Has $4,500,000 Outstanding in Greater Metropolitan Area of City.

A. S. Adams-Cates company yas recently appointed financial correspondent for the Mortgage-Bond company, of New York, one of the largest and most active concerns of its kinds engaged in developing this section, it was announced Saturday by officials of the two companies.

CARLOS LYNES,

Manager of the Loan Department of A. S. Adams-Cates Company.

The Mortgage-Bond company, which specializes in residential and apartment house loans, but is unlimited in its scope, extended its interests to Atlanta and the surrounding territory more than 20 years ago. Since that time its expansion here has been constant until it now has $4,500,000 outstanding in loans in the metropolitan area of Atlanta, comprising approximately 1,200 loans.

George A. Hurd, president of the Mortgage-Bond company, and A. M. Hurd, vice president, who arrived in Atlanta about a week ago to complete arrangements with their newly appointed correspondents, made a thoroughly survey of the apartment house and residential conditions of this section.

"While there is some indication that building developments have caught up with the demand," A. M. Hurd stated, "we found the Atlanta real estate field to be in one of the healthiest conditions anywhere in the country. The scarcity of vacancies is gratifying. As to the ever increasing prospects of this section we have favorable prejudice that has been confirmed through our many years of contact.

"We have just appointed A. S. Adams-Cates company our local correspondent to handle our loans in the future and we are elated over our connection with a house of its standing. The law firm of Gillon & Tomlinson will continue to handle our legal work."

A. B. Cates, of the Atlanta realty firm, in discussing the recent affiliation as correspondent of the Mortgage-Bond company, called attention to the confidence the New York concern has in Atlanta property as shown by their huge investments here. "The company has correspondents in 30 large cities of the south and west," Mr. Cates remarked, "and its many years of activity have shown that its investments in the community are not spasmodic. It does not throw a large amount of money in the local market when it happens to have a surplus and then withdraw it in time of stringency. Instead, its investments here have been constant and steadily increasing."

Carlos Lynes, who has been with Adams-Cates for several years and locally identified with the loan field for more than 20 years, will manage the loan department of Adams-Cates company. He expressed himself as being highly pleased with the new connection in that it will enable him to care better for the financing requirements of his clients.

"The loaning power of our company has not only been greatly increased by the new affiliation," Mr. Lynes stated, "but no limitations on the amount that we can loan have been set by the New York firm."

ADAMS-CATES SELLS $17,000 PROPERTY

A. S. Adams-Cates company announced several sales made recently. The most important being that of the property at 110-112 Juniper street from David Woodward to Stewart R. Roberts. This property is improved with a double brick house and is located on a lot 110 by 175 feet. The consideration was $17,000.

Also from Sam Kline to a client, improved property known as 56-58 McDaniel street for $3,750.

From W. B. Disbro Lumber company to E. W. Cauthorn, vacant lot on the east side of Andrews Drive, 100 by 400 feet for $5,500.

Also vacant lot on Candler street for $1,400.

Also brick dwelling in Sylvan Hills, 959 Harte Drive, for $6,500.

Several large sales made by this firm, but not closed yet, will be announced shortly.

APPRAISAL WORK OF REALTY BOARD GAINS 100 PER CENT.

At the last monthly meeting of the officers and directors of the Atlanta Real Estate board, held in the form of a dinner at the Atlanta Athletic club Thursday night, December 2, all committee reports as to the activities of the board for the year were submitted for approval.

One of the most interesting reports was that of the appraisal committee. This report showed that the appraisal work of the real estate board has increased practically 100 per cent during the last two years, and that the total amount of property appraised was more than $8,000,000. The amount of each appraisal ranged from $200 to more than $1,000,000. The clients for whom the work was done include the United States government, Kennesaw Mountain Memorial Park association, Fulton county, the city of Atlanta, also many income tax appraisals were made as of 1913, and appraisals for inheritance tax purposes.

Dana Belser, president of the board, stated that "the people of Atlanta are realizing the value of having property appraised and they appreciate the efficient and prompt service that the appraising department of the real estate board offers the public."

Other reports submitted included a statement showing the financial condition of the real estate board, which was said to be in better shape today than ever before.

The directors and officers present were A. B. Cates, M. S. Rankin, R. R. Otis, E. L. Barrett, John J. Thompson, Frank C. Owens, Ward Wight and Dana Belser.

Cooperative Sale Of Hogs at Bainbridge Shows Much Increase

Bainbridge, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Cooperative hog sales in Decatur county have exceeded all expectations in the last year, according to the county agent, D. E. Sawyer, who states that from December, 1924, to 1925, the Decatur County Livestock association had only sold $3,000 worth of hogs for the farmers on the cooperative basis, but from December, 1925, to December, 1926, $28,000 worth of hogs has been sold at the Bainbridge market.

For the next cooperative sale, which will be held next Tuesday, three cars have already been listed and it looks now that it will be a four-car sale.

Plenty of fresh running water all over the county makes Decatur an enviable section for diversification in livestock particularly.

TAX-FREE INDUSTRIES VOTED AT SYLVESTER

Sylvester, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—J. T. Cochran and P. M. Lancaster were elected as members of city council of Sylvester and W. L. H. Alford and Clifford Grubbs were elected as tax assessors, all without opposition, at Wednesday's election.

The voters of the city at the same election voted unanimously for a five-year tax exemption of new industries.

TWO CITIES SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE IN WASHINGTON

Bellingham, Wash., December 4.—(AP)—Bellingham was shaken at 5:55 a. m. today by an earthquake whose direction was from east to west. It lasted from three to five seconds, rattled dishes in restaurants and homes and toppled over flower pots. The quake attracted little attention.

Port Angeles, Wash., December 4.—(AP)—A sharp earthshock shook houses at 5:45 this morning. No damage was reported.

Victoria, B. C., December 4.—(AP)—An earth shock which lasted 60 seconds was felt in Victoria a few minutes before 6 this morning.

Depot Is Stolen.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Complete railroad station was stolen at Magnolia Springs, near here. The station, a large, handsome building, erected as an addition to the Magnolia Springs hotel, which burned down recently, was missing when W. G. Spiker, the owner, went to ascertain if it needed repair. First appearances denoted that the station had been burned down but further investigation showed it had been razed and the material carted off. Negroes are suspected.

Georgia Educators Are Urged To Attend Dallas Convention

Macon, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Kyle T. Alfriend, secretary of the Georgia Educational association, announced today that letters have been sent to the presidents and chairmen of all county and city boards of education in the state urging that the boards send their superintendents to the meeting of the National Education association, department of superintendence and allied organizations, which convene in Dallas, Texas, next February.

Other appeals have gone out to the same boards from Fort E. Land, state superintendent of schools, and from Walter P. Jones, president of the Georgia Education association, to accomplish the same result, it is ascertained.

C. B. Rhodes, division passenger agent of the Southern railway, states that he has made arrangements for a special Pullman train to carry the delegation from Georgia to Dallas. This special train is to leave Atlanta over the Southern about 9:30 a. m. Saturday, February 26, and arrive in Dallas about noon the following day, operating by way of Birmingham, Frisco lines to Memphis, thence Missouri Pacific system tor Dallas, with an optional side trip to Hot Springs. Special Pullmans also will be provided, he stated, for delegations from Virginia, North and South Carolina, which will be picked up by the Georgia special in Atlanta.

It is anticipated that there will be at least 75 in the Georgia delegation.

Prohi Law Violations Bring Prison Terms In Savannah Courts

Savannah, Ga., December 4.—(AP)—Samuel P. Brown, of Savannah and Jacksonville, was today sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 and serve a year and a day in the federal prison in Atlanta for conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition law. The sentence was imposed by Judge Barrett in the federal court.

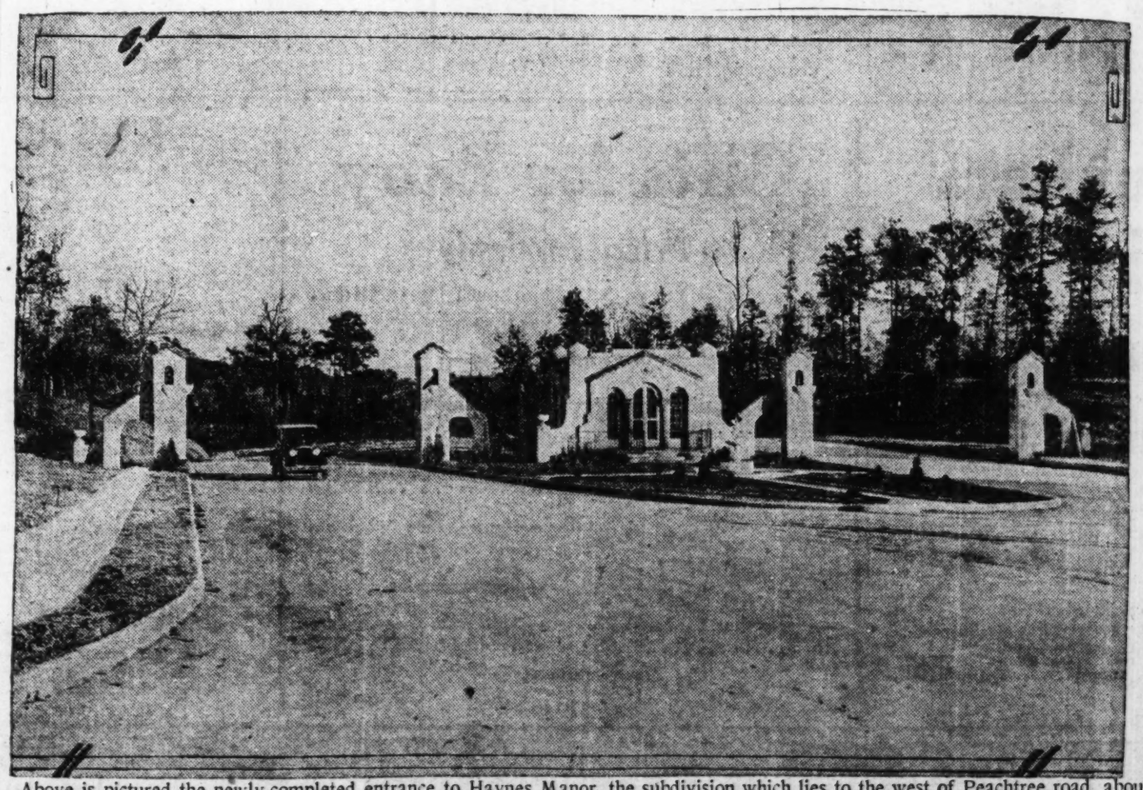

Brown was convicted after a lengthy trial and after W. C. Codman, Jr., of Boston and Miami, had entered a plea of guilty to conspiracy with Brown to violate the law. Brown will appeal to the circuit court of appeals, it was announced.

Manley Sullivan, of Charleston, was sentenced to pay a fine of $2,500 and serve 15 months in federal prison in Atlanta for conspiracy to smuggle liquor into this country and for smuggling liquor. Sullivan gave bond and will appeal his case also.

DECATUR BODIES PLAN CHRISTMAS FOR POOR

Bainbridge, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—Decatur lodge, Knights of Pythias, has already started plans for the happiness of the unfortunate at the Christmas season. A committee composed of J. C. Cawood, C. J. Williams, postmaster; C. A. Miller, Sr., T. W. Salter, J. J. Edge, M. Jensen and J. D. Chester will seek the cooperation of all other organizations in the city in sending out baskets of food, clothing and toys on Christmas eve and Christmas day.

Artistic Spanish Entrance to Haynes Manor

Adair Sales Show Increase Of 80 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Commenting on the November sales, W. P. Walthall, sales manager of Adair Realty & Trust company, stated that the volume of business completed by this company in November, as compared with that of November a year ago, showed an increase of 80 per cent, this increase being in line with a similar showing made by comparing sales for the month of October.

Mr. Walthall stated that the Adair agency has recently made extensive additions to its sales department, increasing the personnel to more than double the personnel to more than bling the amount of floor space used by the sales department in the Adair company's office.

By its policy of keeping up advertising and never letting down in spite of the dull times, this company has shown a remarkable increase in the sales business, Walthall said.

One feature brought out by Mr. Walthall is that values of real estate at this time are very conservative and the purchasers who buy now are getting the benefit of low prices.

Salesman Makes Good Showing.

W. Arthur Stokes, Jr., who recently joined the Adair Realty and Trust company's sales department, made a good showing for the month of November, according to statements given out by this company. Mr. Stokes has to his credit the sale of a brick bungalow, No. 107 Montgomery Ferry Drive, at $8,000; also a parcel at No. 486 Spring street, for $13,500, and a bungalow on Maddox drive at $8,500. Arthur Stokes has lived in Atlanta practically all of his life and has a wide acquaintance in the city. He was temporarily in the real estate business at Miami Beach, but in the early part of this year he returned to Atanta and became associated with the Adair agency, putting in several months of study as to real estate values in this city.

Gilbert Withers Leads.

In the contest for salesmen for Adair Realty & Trust company, Gilbert W. Withers topped the field for the month of November. He has to his credit a Briarcliff road home sold for John N. Malone at a price of $20,750; also a Morningside lot sold for $4,000. He handled the sale of a brick duplex on West Thirteenth street for $15,000; a lot on Argonne avenue for $3,500, and a two-story brick building on Edgewood avenue for $12,500. These five sales, all completed during the month of November, represent a fair amount of business for this compartively new salesman.

Benefits From Advertising.

Officials of the Adair Realty & Trust company trace one sale made recently directly to an advertisement of a specific parcel of property. This was a two-story, brick building, 140 Edgewood avenue, advertising at a price of $12,500 with definite terms of payment. The purchaser, Roland B. Hall, became interested in the property directly from reading this advertisement, and purchased the property soon after it was inspected.

Other Recent Sales.

Investment property located on the corner of Forrest avenue and Jackson street, was sold by K. E. Black to Dillon brothers for $20,000; this corner contains three building consisting of a brick apartment house, a brick duplex residence, and a two-story frame residence.

A two-story brick dwelling, 235 Briarcliff road, was sold for John N. Malone to L. S. Costley for $20,750.

A wide-board bungalow, 1 Rupley drive, corner of Adair avenue, was sold for Ida D. Fraser to Ida F. Carey for $7,350.

A building lot, fronting 130 feet on Oakdale road, was sold for M. C. McGinty to A. L. Morgan for $2,750.

A brick bungalow, 107 Montgomery Ferry drive, in Ansley park near the Golf club, was sold for Cherokee Savings company to E. D. Scruggs for $8,000.

A brick duplex dwelling, 17 and 19 West Thirteenth street, sold for C. W. Bond to W. M. Bullard for $15,000. As part payment a lot on Morningside drive was transferred from C. W. Bond to W. M. Bullard at a valuation of $4,000.

A brick apartment house, 278 Houston street, James Shepherd, owner, was sold to the Southern Mortgage company for $16,500. As part payment, James Shepherd transferred to the Southern Mortgage company dwelling at 923 South Moreland avenue, at a consideration of $5,000.

Property at 486 Spring street was sold for the Alpha Nu association to Green & Milam for $13,500.

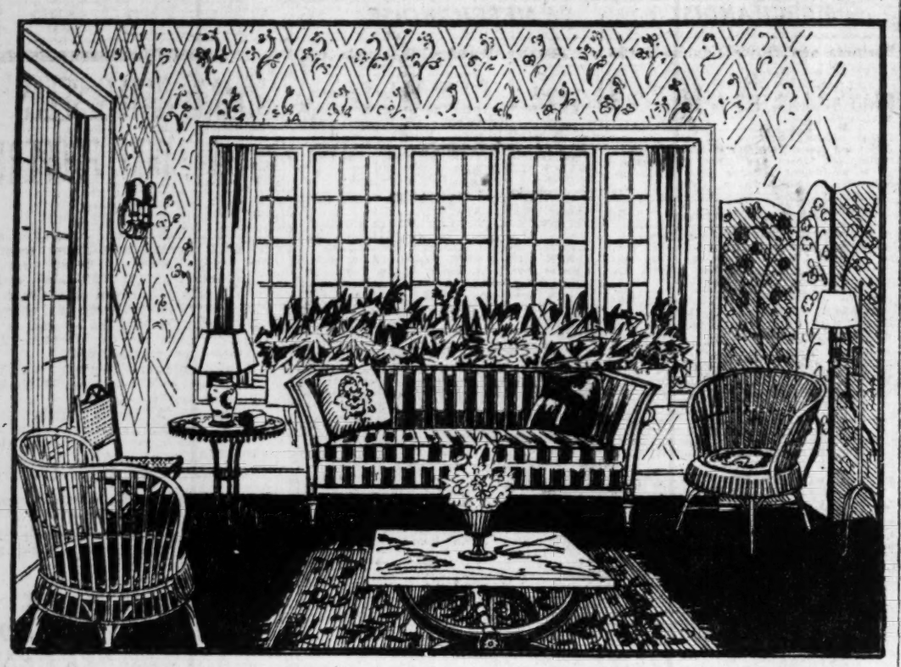

A two-story brick building, 140 Edgewood avenue, was sold for William Burckel to Roland B. Hall for $12,500.

A brick bungalow, 2225 East Lake road in Druid Hills, was sold for J. C. Senter to C. T. Bramblett for $9,500.

A two-story stucco dwelling, 215 Myrtle street, was sold for M. L. Blackman to W. Woods White for $15,750.

FURNISHING THE HOME

MARIAN MOORE

A Smart Sunshine Room for the Winter

We all respond to the variations of nature. The more sensitive among us become gloomy and lethargic when the sky is overcast, in accordance with the ancestral instinct which was to hibernate whenever the weather was not favorable to hunting, fishing or fighting. The necessities of modern life have more or less overcome this tendency, for our activities must continue through the four seasons; but when the summer comes, few are those who resist the call of nature; crowded towns are abandoned for camp, river and woods; the city-bound folk invade the parks—you know, you have just been through it all. But now that the vacation months are gone, the leaves falling and the days growing shorter, must we, looking back regretfully to our happy communion with nature, accept winter's verdict of gloom? No, indeed.

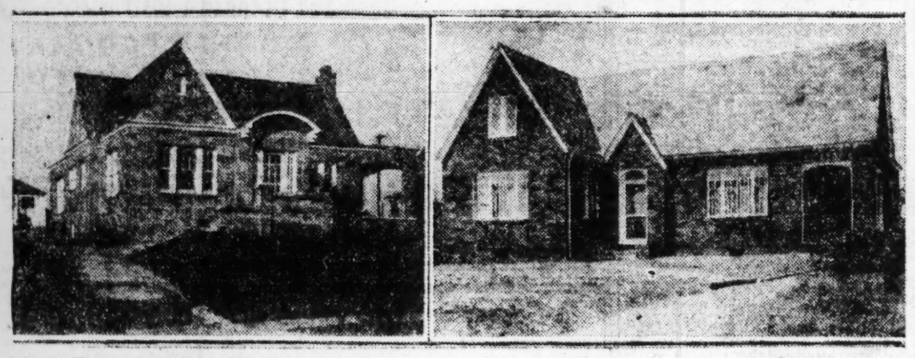

Just as we create artificial heat and artificial daylight in our homes so we can also product the cheering illusion of the out-of-doors, for its magic is mostly light and color. So strong is our reaction to color that any young mother loves her babies better in pink and white than wearing black and white checks; and I know a busy housewife who brightens her daily tasks by matching the colors of her cooking utensils with the product she is preparing: blue bowls for yellow dough, green ones for mashed berries; you get the idea? Her children watch her, entranced, and her husband still thinks that she is the most wonderful girl. Fifty per cent of all tantrums, childish and otherwise, may be due to indigestion; but 49 of the remaining 50 come from a gray sky or a drab home. A sunroom, then, is as necessary to mental health as a bathroom to sanitation.

A good way for the amateur interior decorator to decide on a color scheme for the sunroom is to purchase some gay cretonne for the draperies or some artistic wallpaper, and use the colors in the pattern as a guide. You will thus be sure of color harmony, and the proportions of each hue to be used in the room will be approximately the same as in the model. The room illustrating this article is decorated with a very modern wallpaper in slightly neutralized red, green and orange on a cream background. The woodwork may match either the background or the part of the pattern which is like the supporting framework for the floral motifs—here the crosslines which form the diamond figures and which are orange-tan. The and the screen, repeat the color combination of the walls. Plain draperies and plain cushions form a correct contrast to the figured areas and serve to establish a dominant hue. Orange-tan was selected because it is a warm color particularly appropriate for use in a sun parlor; one of the cushions is red; and the frame of the furniture—decorated wood and willow—is finished in neutral green. Toning down the color scheme and imparting to the whole room a peculiar distinction, is the floor covering of black linoleum. Of course, no sunroom is complete without ferns and blooming flowers, either in boxes or pots, decorated to match the furnishings. Here, the boxes rest on a shelf supported by brackets; but plants can also be placed on top of the radiators, if a radiator cover is used to provide the necessary moisture and air-space between the hot coils and flower shelf. Lamps should be selected and placed in the sunroom just as carefully as in the living room; English ivy climbing up a slender frame or a hanging fern basket will brighten a bare corner; while a yellow bird singing in its cage, and gold fish swimming round a green bowl often supply the live touch which complete the out-door illusion.

New Residents Swell Avondale Colony

Two representative Avondale homes which are making popular the Avondale payment policy of "ten per cent cash, one per cent a month." Left to right: 9 Exeter road, built by S. L. Adams, and 7 Exeter road, built by the Flagler company.

Occupation of four homes by new residents, construction of dwellings, and marked development of community life were reported Saturday as activities of the last week which have marked the steady progress of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city.

Plans were announced for expansion of the handsomely equipped Avondale Community club, one of the most attractive social clubs about Atlanta, to keep pace with the growth of the community.

One of the homes reported sold was the colonial bungalow at 19 Exeter road, purchased by Lewis J. Meng, who came to Atlanta from New Jersey as an executive of the Phenix Cheese company, of Oakland City.

W. A. Wells and his family have moved into the home built for them at 32 Clarendon avenue, a model dwelling of the attractive type for which Avondale has become distinctive.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thomas have moved into their new home at 1 Berkeley road. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Weeks, who came to Atlanta recently upon Mr. Week's executive connection with the Liberty Film Distributing company, has occupied their new home at 11 Avondale plaza.

With growth of the community, now said to be a matter of almost daily record, the Avondale Community club, occupying an upper floor of one of the buildings of the old English business block, with billiard rooms, card rooms, reception rooms, music and reading rooms, space for dancing and quarters in which a dining room and kitchen are to be placed, has become the center of many afternoon and evening gatherings of Avondale dwellers and property owners and their guests.

RIGHT ADDRESSES ON MAIL STRESSED

Efforts of local postal authorities to avert confusion arising from the renumbering of Atlanta houses and office buildings, in the handling of mail during the Christmas rush, have been renewed as the yuletide volume of mail increases to gigantic proportions.

During the past week, 60,000 slips asking that the public cooperate to the extent of addressing mail correctly, were sent to patrons of the postoffice by Postmaster E. K. Large. Another move on the part of postoffice authorities during the week was to send letters to numbers of business houses urging the correct addressing of mail, and to request answers to the query: "Of all the mail, express or telegrams coming to your members at both residence and business, what percentage carries complete, correct address?"

School children will be requested to aid this week in solving the postman's problem by observing "Correct Address Week." Postal authorities hope to stress the need of complete, correct mail addressing to the parents through the children.

Bandits Ape YoungerGang In Bank Raid

Rochester, Minn., December 4.—(AP) Tearing a page from the history of the notorious James-Younger gang, six bandits held up a Rochester bank today in southern Minnesota's most daring raid of its kind in a half century.

Just as the James-Younger gang attacked a Northfield bank in 1878 in broad daylight, so today six bandits with modern equipment challenged the city throng in robbing the Olmated county bank of $20,000 in cash and Liberty bonds.

Unlike their prototypes, these bandits used a speedy automobile instead of horses; rapid firing rifles and sawed off shot guns were their weapons, in place of the firearms of 50 years ago.

LARGE TO ADDRESS CREDIT MEN'S MEET

Postmaster E. K. Large will be principal speaker at a dinner of the Atlanta Association of Wholesale Credit Men Tuesday night, December 14, at 6:30 o'clock, at the Atlanta Athletic club. "Advantages of the air mail to wholesale trade in Atlanta" will be his subject.

Wilson's Sheep Provide Blankets For Coolidge

Newspaper Man Makes Unique Gift To President

Washington, December 4.—President Coolidge is the recipient of as unique a gift as ever came to the white house. It is a pair of magnificent gold-and-white blankets made of wool clipped from the sheep that President Wilson had grazing on the white house grounds during the war.

The donor is L. C. Probert, Washington newspaperman. Probert is a gentleman farmer on the side. When Mr. Wilson left the white house in 1921, he bequeathed his 12 sheep to Probert, who still has them—and their progeny. It occurred to "Dick" to convert the accumulated annual "clips" of wool into blankets and to present sets to some of the war president's close friends. In addition to Mr. Coolidge, other recipients include Joseph P. Tumulty, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson and Bernard M. Baruch.

With each set of blankets Mr. Probert has sent a card emblazoned with a medallion portrait of Woodrow Wilson and a vista showing the dome of the capitol, the Washington monument, and a peaceful stretch of grassy sward. Then comes this explanatory text:

"President Wilson, during the great world war, kept on the white house lawns a flock of sheep. Many who saw these peaceful animals contentedly grazing there while a world was aflame little realized that they were doing war duty. While they adorned the landscape, they kept the greensward trimmed down and thus released for war service the men who had been engaged in that work. They performed a further patriotic service. Their wool the president gave to the American Red Cross, which apportioned it among the Red Cross chapters of the states. At patriotic auctions, it brought as high as $10.000 a pound—the highest priced wool in history. How many American soldiers on Flanders fields were relieved of their pain by the ministrations made possible in part by these sheep no one knows.

"The great war president, in the dark days of that time, found peace of mind in having these beautiful, docile animals about him.

"When Mr. Wilson left the white house, this flock of sheep went to live at Homeland Farms, at Olney, Md., where they have since remained and increased in number until in 1926 they numbered more than 50. None of their wool ever has been sold in the channels of trade. It has instead been carefully preserved, to be manufactured into these blankets for distribution among the great war president's close friends and admirers."

SAVE BUILDING COST BY SAVING SPACE—

OUR White Enameled Steel and Porcelain Built Kitchens, fireproof, with every up-to-date kitchen appliance, costs ONE-HALF what the average kitchen costs. The Murphy-in-a-Door-Bed (not a folding bed), a metal bed that at night can be in your sun parlor, sleeping porch or a living room. In the day, without effort, placed in the closet, out of sight. Most sanitary and comfortable. The Murphy bed makes one room have the living accommodations of two rooms. Rents go down, owner's profits go up; more convenience and less housework.

MURPHY Cabinet Ironing Board, cheapest and best.

CHARIS

A delightful change from corsets. Charis is the answer to the question, "What shall I wear in place of a corset?" A dainty featherweight, one-piece garment that improves every figure, even the loveliest, and gives the vital support that every woman needs. Charis keeps the abdomen flat by means of an inside abdominal band which can be raised or lowered at will, and preserves that youthful straightline from bust to knee. None of the artificial "shape" of the ordinary corset; none of the overlapping and "riding" of corset and brassiere. Charis costs less than a corset of like quality and is priceless in comfort and body-freedom. Demonstration cheerfully given in your own home. Write or phone. Phone WAlnut 7904.

Please send me further information about Charis.

Customers With Cash

Several of our good customers have confided in us by stating that they have ample funds in the bank to buy any promising, well-located real estate investment. These people are not looking for homes; they all own good, comfortable homes; they are looking for something worth while to buy as an investment.

It is our experience that people of means are usually intelligent enough to compare various kinds of investments offered to them; they balance the good features of stocks and securities as against real estate; if they can find a real estate parcel which will pay a fair return on the money and promise an additional return in the way of enhancement they will consider buying.

These people have spot cash to pay for anything they select; we will be very glad to submit to them any worthwhile offerings.

OWNER has reduced his price from $32,500 to $27,500 and is willing to take in a smaller place as part payment. This is a two-story stucco residence, situated on a lot 150x485 feet. There are nine rooms, with four bedrooms and two baths; steam heat, servants' accommodations, side drive and garage. This is an opportunity for anyone wishing to buy a larger house and at the same time dispose of his present home. Let our salesmen show you this place.

Ansley Park

BEAUTIFULLY located on a lot 75x235 feet; on one of the best streets in this section. This is a two-story, 10 room home, well arranged, a large living room, containing a fireplace, a sun parlor and a dining room complete the front outline of the house; in the rear, over-looking a garden, is a comfortable library; extra lavatory downstairs; plenty of closet space, breakfast room and kitchen on the first floor. The second floor contains five bedrooms and two baths; off one of the bedrooms is a little sun room; the basement has a servant's room, laundry tubs, cement floor; there is a double garage. In the summer the rear lot is a profusion of flowers. Price $17,500.

A Home of Merit

SITUATED in Druid Hills on a lot 200x400 feet; lovely tile porch. This is a two-story brick residence, containing nine rooms and entrance hall; three tile baths, four large bedrooms, sleeping porch and storage room; mirror doors in all bathrooms; plenty of closet space; large, cement basement with laundry; steam heat, servants' house with bath, side drive and double garage. Price $40,000.

Garden Hills

IN this beautiful sub-division we have several very nice, new houses. This is a growing community, touching Peachtree road, where values are on the upward climb. The house we are offering is situated on Rumson Road and is a two-story, brick colonial residence, containing eight rooms, with four bedrooms and two tile baths, convenient and spacious arrangement on the first floor; all bedrooms are corner rooms; hardwood floors throughout; plenty of closet space; level lot, 70 feet wide, with a large shade tree in front yard. Price $17,250.

Ansley Park

THIS is a two-story home of brick construction; designed, built and always occupied as a home. It is located on a nicely elevated lot, with 100 feet frontage and over 200 feet in depth; an abundance of choice shrubbery adds to the appearance of this home. House contains an entrance hall, a large living room, library, dining room, butler's pantry and kitchen downstairs, while on the second floor there are three large bedrooms and two tile baths; trunk room, laundry room in basement, side drive, garage and servant's room. Let one of our salesmen show you this place. Price has been reduced to $19,000 for all cash.

RADIO IN THE HOMES

Conducted by Will Smith

CONGRESS TO WRESTLE WITH RADIO PROBLEM THIS SESSION

Two Measures Are Planned To Settle Confusion in Air

Both White and Dill Bills Designed to Give Government Control Over Radio, But Propose Different Methods.

Washington, December 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Congress, which convenes Monday, expects to listen in on the radio this winter to programs coming in not only on the receiving set at home, but also to the broadcasting of a number of its members from the floors of the house and senate.

In other words, radio legislation, which got sidetracked in the closing days of the last session, is slated for another turn on the main track of the legislative program.

Two radio bills, one the White bill coming from the house, and the other the Dill bill from the senate, were so unlike each other that both houses appointed a group of members to confer on the matter and attempt to adjust differences. This group of conferees met and static immediately issued forth. When congress adjourned July 3 the bills still were drowned out in the confusion.

Both the White and Dill bills are designed to give the federal government broader control of radio activities, but proposed different methods of going about it. Representative White, republican, Maine, feels that his plan is best, while Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, is convinced what he suggests would be better. Whether radio legislation is enacted at the forthcoming session probably will depend largely upon the attitude the authors of the two measures take.

The White bill proposes that the federal government exercise control over the ether through a bureau in the commerce department and also a radio commission to be created by congress. The Dill measure would place sole power to regulate the ether in the hands of a commission. This latter measure also is prefaced by a declaration, as follows:

"That it is hereby declared and reaffirmed that the ether within the limits of the United States, its territories and possessions, is the inalienable possession of the people thereof, and that the authority to regulate its use in interstate and foreign commerce is conferred upon the congress of the United States by the federal constitution."

MOVEMENT TO HALT FURTHER LICENSING.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, December 4.—With the conditions of radio broadcasting and reception becoming more and more chaotic, a movement is on foot to halt the licensing of additional broadcasting stations pending legislation regulating the entire radio field. The two houses of congress are at odds on the framing of a radio regulatory law and they may not be able to agree on a measure at the approaching short session of congress which will end by constitutional limitation on March 4. The next congress will not meet ordinarily until December, 1927, and a radio law could not be passed before the spring of 1928.

The prospect of the chaotic conditions continuing and even becoming worse in the next year and a half has caused Representative White, republican, of Maine, who is in charge of radio legislation in the house, to consider the advisability of the passage of an emergency measure.

In answer to a question as to whether he had considered the advisability of introducing any stop-gap legislation pending the enactment of a general radio law, Congressman White said:

"I have already drafted a resolution providing that until otherwise provided by law no license other than renewals of existing licenses shall be issued for radio broadcasting stations within the continental United States and am considering its introduction immediately upon the convening of congress.

Flooded With Letters.

Senators and congressmen are being flooded with letters from members of the great radio audiences complaining of interference by one broadcasting station with another to such an extent that radio programs cannot be heard and receiving sets are rendered valueless. These complaints come from all sections of the country.

President Coolidge regards some remedial action necessary, though he disclosed today in response to an inquiry that he has not had personal experience with the interference which plays havoc with broadcasting. It appears that the president does not get much time to listen in. After dinner in the evening he works till bed time in his library. Mrs. Coolidge knits and listens to the radio every night, but the president has not heard her complain of poor reception of the radio programs, probably, he thought because of favorable local conditions.

There are only 89 channels of the ether suitable to broadcasting and experts are of the opinion that there should not be more than two 500-watt stations to each wave length and that those two should be at least 2,000 miles apart. According to this calculation, there ought not to be more than 178 broadcasting stations operating in the country today in the present state of the radio art, yet there are 615 now licensed and operating.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover endeavored to prevent the development of the existing chaos by arbitrarily refusing to grant licenses for additional broadcasting stations. The attorney general ruled, however, that he was exceeding his powers in so doing and the commerce department was compelled to let down the bars and license all comers.

Relief in Courts.

The recent court decision prohibiting encroachment by a broadcaster upon the channel used by WGN, the Chicago Tribune station, Chicago, has pointed the way to elimination of some of the interference by judicial proceedings, but it is realized that the only comprehensive remedy is legislation.

The White bill, passed by the house in the last session, provides for radio regulation by the secretary of commerce with appeal from his decisions to an advisory commission. This measure is favored by the president. The senate substituted for the house bill the Dill bill, reposing control of radio in an independent commission. The two bills are now in the hands of a conference committee which has made little progress toward harmonizing them.

There is considerable sentiment in favor of scrapping both bills, passing the stop-gap resolution and getting a new start on radio legislation in the next congress, particularly for the reason that neither of the pending bills defines the grounds on which applicants are to be granted or denied broadcasting licenses.

"Unless the law states the rule to be observed, it would be political suicide for any one to attempt discrimination between influential applicants," said one radio authority.

BIG NEW BUILDING FOR BROADCASTING

New York, December 4.—Radio broadcasting will soon have the distinction of a great building dedicated primarily to its purposes, according to an announcement made today by Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company.

The 15-story structure, now being erected at 711 Fifth avenue, at the corner of Fifty-fifth street, will be known as the National Broadcasting Company building, as a result of negotiations recently completed. It will house the greatest broadcasting plant in the United States. Four entire floors, the 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th will be given over to the work of the National Broadcasting company. It is expected to be ready for occupancy in May, 1927.

Eight Studios.

The National Broadcasting company building will contain eight completely equipped studios designed for every type of broadcasting program. On the top floor an auditorium studio, large enough to seat an orchestra of 150 musicians, as well as to accommodate distinguished guests who may be invited on occasions, will occupy almost the entire floor. The ceilings of the studios on the 12th floor will contain glass panels, so that spectators seated on the 13th floor will be able to view the artists at the microphone. Loud speakers will be installed in practically each room occupied by the National Broadcasting company with the exception of the studios, thereby enabling listeners with the turn of a switch to hear any particular program being broadcast without interferring in any way with the actual transmission of the program.

"The most advanced principles of studio construction and plant control will be embodied in the National Broadcasting Company building," it is declared in the statement issued by Mr. Aylesworth. "It is a fundamental fact, not always recognized, however, that broadcasting reception can be no better than broadcast transmission. Heretofore plans for broadcasting studios had to be drawn with reference to existing facilities in one building or another. This will be the first time that the fundamental construction of a great building will be planned along lines that will meet the special requirements of radio broadcasting."

The general plan of construction calls for a central broadcasting plant from which a system of studios will rediate fan-wise. On the rim of this circle will be the artists' and general reception rooms. Each studio will have a separate control room adjacent to it.

Notwithstanding the fact that broadcasting programs will constantly radiate from the National Broadcasting Company building to a large part of the United States, there will be nothing in the outward appearance of the building to denote the purpose which it will serve. The great steel towers and antennae which formerly marked every studio connected with a broadcasting station, will be conspicuous by their absence. The antennae and towers will be miles away from the broadcasting studios of the company, under the system of remote control which the engineers of the National Broadcasting company are planning.

In addition to the studios, the building at 711 Fifth avenue will contain the executive offices of the National Broadcasting company, which has signed an 18-year lease with the Bethlehem Engineering corporation. Floyd de L. Brown represented the East Fifty-fifth Street corporation and the A. H. Mathews company was the broker negotiating the transaction.

Coincident with the announcement that the National Broadcasting company would occupy its new quarters about June 1, 1927, Mr. Aylesworth made public the fact that a management contract had been signed by the company with the Radio Corporation of America, whereby the program activities of Station WJZ will be directed by the National Broadcasting company.

Station WJZ, it is declared, however, will be the central service station for a new broadcasting network and will not be merged with the chain of broadcasting stations interconnected by wire with WEAF. Station WJZ, directed largely by its present personnel, will continue to broadcast its own programs and serve the same listening public which it has always commanded.

Unified program direction, it was pointed out, would not only permit the greatest possible broadcasting of fine programs to the public, but would insure non-interference of interest in the broadcasting of such great national events as might be put on the air.

KREMER TO SING FROM WJZ CHAIN

New York, December 4.—(Special.) Isa Kremer, the international balladist, and considered by many to be one of the world's greatest singers of ballads and folk songs, will be the featured soloist of the next Maxwell Coffee concert, to be broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC, WGY, WBZ and KDKA at 9:15, central time, Sunday night, December 5. This performance will close the series of ten concerts, the outstanding artists for which were announced several months ago. There will be a new series of Maxwell Coffee concerts, which will start on the week following, December 12, and which will bring to the radio audience a series as great as those they have enjoyed in these broadcasts in the past. The announcement of the names of the featured soloists to appear in the new series will be made shortly.

In supporting Isa Kremer, Nathaniel Shilkret, the director of the Maxwell Coffee orchestra, has prepared another of his unusually entertaining and interesting programs. This time Mr. Shilkret is to offer a complete concert of selections inspired by love—musical tales of famous love affairs, lovers serenades and love songs of all nations. One of the selections to be played in this concert will be the orchestral prelude to the Wagnerian opera, "Tristan and Isolde," the musical drama of the two lovers, who were so much in love with each other that even death could not part their two souls, for as legend tells us, from out their graves, grew entwined with each, an ivy and vine.

One of the outstanding features of the orchestral part of this concert will be the rendition of famous love songs from all nations, the famous "La Paloma" of old Mexico, "Don Juan Minuet," which is Germany's musical interpretation of love, and "Black Eyes," which, notwithstanding the title, is Russia's greatest love lyric. America has not yet found its outstanding love tune, and therefore will have to be omitted from the love song group. Another expression of love will be found in the rendition of the Indian love lyrics. In closing the program, the orchestra prelude to "Carmen," who is a much discussed lover, will be played.

The complete program follows:

1. Orchestra—Old Colonel March. N. Shilkret
2. Orchestra prelude—Tristan and Isolde. ..... Wagner
3. Soloist ..... Isa Kremer
   a. Dusha Solovushka ..... Gliere
   b. Colomba (folk song from Tuscani), arr. by Schindler.
   c. Bird's Courting song (from "The Hills of Vermont") arr. by Hughes.
4. Orchestra—Toselli's Serenade.
5. Orchestra—The Bartered Bride—Overture ..... Smetana
6. Soloist ..... Isa Kremer
   a. A Masse.....Jewish Folk Song
   b. Lison Dormait ..... Wackerling
   c. Gondoliera ..... Valence
7. Orchestra.
   a. "La Paloma" (Mexican Love Song) ..... Gradler
   b. "Don Juan Minuet" .....Mozart
8. Orchestra—My Heavenly Rest..F. Lehar
9. Orchestra—Black Eyes (Russian Gypsy Love Song).
10. Soloist ..... Isa Kremer
    a. Swiesda.....Russian Gypsy Song
    b. Lomir Sich Iberbeiten.....Jewish Folk Song
    c. When Honey Sings.....Carey
11. Orchestra—Indian Love Lyrics.
    a. Temple Bells.....W. Fruder
    b. Kashmin Song.
12. Orchestra—Carmen ..... Biset

FREED-EISEMAN CO. DOES BIG BUSINESS

New York, December 4.—The Freed-Eisemann Radio corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., reports sales for the month of October to have a retail value of over $2,000,000.

This represents, it is stated, the largest single month's business in the history of the company.

Along with this announcement comes the statement that the British subsidiary, Freed-Eisemann Radio of Great Britain, Ltd., has secured a license under the Marconi patents. The British company will not manufacture radio receivers but will import them from the American plant.

Although the mother company in Brooklyn is licensed under both the Hazeltine neutrodyne and Latour patents, it was found necessary to obtain a license under the British Marconi patents as well in order to have the right to sell in the British Isles the radio apparatus manufactured in this country under the aforementioned Hazeltine and Latour licenses.

It is stated that it is the policy of the Marconi company of Great Britain to issue no further licenses except to British companies manufacturing radio apparatus in Great Britain and that no more licenses will be available to American concerns who may establish selling subsidiaries in the British Isles.

SALERNOS TO APPEAR AT WGN TUESDAY

An interesting feature of the evening's program from WGN, Chicago, on Tuesday, December 7, will be the appearance of the Salernos, a duet composed of accordionist and guitarist, in a sparkling program of Italian folk songs and love ballads.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL H. SMITH.

We called this remarkable Stromberg-Carlson radio receiver the Packard of the radio industry in our story last night. Tonight we will insist we were right, but find that while that is the case it also holds another quality. It is also an aristocrat and a politician, for it conveys the greatest dignity to its conduct, yet in the cosmopolitan tone of its findings it is as common as an old shoe.

It will bring in every station in the 600 or more that are percolating this season with Mexico City, Havana and a number of the Canadian stations thrown in for good measure. It brought in so many for the old "Dial Twister" last night that his head is fairly swimming.

As warm as it was Saturday, we felt sure that our evening at the dials would be more or less hectic from static and other interference so common to the warmer weather. Of course, amateurish as we may be in the scientific end of the radio profession, we realize that much of our intereference is man-made and easily eradicated if one's patience is at all of the right kind.

Mastering Mastodon.

However, we did not "interfere" or "calk" ourselves last night in romping round the dials for we made up our mind that we were going to master this mastodon if it was the last thing we did in this world. Mastering the dials was not the job we anticipated, at least if it was not apparent in the results we obtained.

We did not set out for distance last night for we had two objectives in mind. In the first place, we wanted very much to hear the Atwater Kent radio hour provided by W. D. V. Hopkins, of the Hopkins Equipment company, for us here in Atlanta over WSB. We heard most of this and then turned to hear the Balkite hour from the WEAF string at New York where the Fansteel Products company, was broadcasting the New York Symphony orchestra under the direction of Walter Damrosch.

These two concerts were well worth our time. Walter Damrosch, having spent his life practically with the orchestra which was founded by his father and dedicating himself to its development and progress, is today, not only the dean of American conductors, but likewise probably the most noted. The New York Symphony orchestra is accepted throughout Europe and America as an organization without a peer. It takes a Packard of the radio world, such as this Stromberg-Carlson, to bring out all the delicate tones so necessary to the true reproduction of chamber music.

Sought Advice.

If one's receiving set is not so constructed to obviate distortion, the beauty of such music as was rendered during the Balkite hour is pretty much lost. The Dial Twister had this in mind Saturday and dropped in on Jack Fulton, of Fulton Brothers Electric company, for a little information on how the Stromberg-Carlson mastered its tonal quality.

Of course you understand this bird Fulton is given to long technical descriptions of one sort or another while the Dial Twister, having spent most of his life penning stories on a typewriter, doesn't know much about the technical end of the this radio business though he does know how to enjoy the results of the work put out by technicians.

Anyway, this is what Jack Fulton told the Dial Twister about the Stromberg-Carlson. If you will apply the same knowledge to your set you will get the same idea we are trying to pass along. It all has to do with voltage control, if you know what I mean.

What He Said!

"A unit having an adjustable voltage control," he said, "has been so designed in an effort to make the unit fulfill various conditions. However, without a very expensive and very delicate voltmeter on the panel of the unit it is impossible to ascertain the amount of current being used and consequently it is impossible to maintain the correct ratio between "B" and "C" voltages. So when this ratio is not correct, distortion is certain to result. Therefore, it becomes evident that the answer to the problem of maintaining good tone quality with a "B" socket-power unit is found in the manufacture of a unit to match the receiver with which it is to be used. For, in this manner fixed voltages can be used and a constant ratio between "B" voltage and negative bias may be secured.

"Stromberg-Carlson engineers have designed such a "B" socket-power unit, to be used especially with their five and six-tube receivers. Knowing the exact requirements of these receivers, it was not difficult to design the unit so that adjustable voltages could be done away with and definite, unchanging voltages used instead. In this unit the voltages are maintained by the use of large wire-wound resistors imbedded in vitreous enamel. These resistors are impervious to weather conditions and maintain constant voltages indefinitely. With such a unit distortion is impossible, not only because the correct ratio between "B" and "C" voltages is always maintained, but because of other precautions which engineers have taken to eliminate distortion and to prevent power line disturbances from entering the receiver.

"Special draining condensers have been provided across the input to carry off radio frequency currents and square-topped wave disturbances that are likely to enter the receiver from the power line. Then too, good tone quality is insured by the correct design of the filter circuit. An extra large condenser is connected across the output terminals of the unit to provide an adequate supply of current when especially heavy passages of music are being reproduced. Transformers and choke coils have extra large cores which also make for good tone quality.

"With such a unit natural and faithful reproduction may be secured through the impossibility of distortion creeping in by way of the plate current supply apparatus."

RADIO IN THE HOMES

Conducted by Will Smith

Strange 'Dead Spot' in Air Puzzles Australians

Australian radio experts are puzzled by a strange "dead spot" in the ether, according to reports from the Antipodes. While strenuous efforts are being made to overcome this bugbear of the broadcasters, listeners-in are drawing their entertainment program not from the nearest stations, erected with the aim to serve local territory, but from the furthest stations, making of broadcasting for the time being a hit-and-miss affair.

Fading first appeared with amazing suddeness in Gippsland, eastern Victoria, the more strangely because this area is served by station 3LO, Melbourne, one of the most powerful in the country. Where reception was expected to be most perfect a "blind spot" appeared and perished. It was noted, too, that the worst conditions in Gippsland were encountered at Port Albert, which is only about 100 aerial miles from Melbourne; at Sale, about 120 miles away, and Bairnsdale, 150 miles off, reception was a trifle better; whereas at Orbost, 175 miles distant, results showed a still more appreciable improvement. Then it was observed that the badly affected Gippsland area was getting excellent reception from the distant stations, 2FC in Sydney, 425 miles away, and 4QG in Brisbane, Queensland, 875 miles away. Reception from these stations was affected very little at the time that reception from local stations was virtually unintelligible.

Experts Tour Country.

Complaints from Gippsland induced the Broadcasting Company of Australia, Ltd., to send several experts to tour the country for hundreds of miles to study the puzzle. The mission succeeded in finding many more "blind spots" that had not been known to exist. Moreover, they discovered that the condition was fairly general throughout Australia—Queensland residents got good results when listening in to Melbourne, while the people of Victoria obtained best results when listening in on Queensland an New South Wales.

The report said: "While 4QG is received so clearly in Gippsland, the same trouble experienced by listeners closed to that station, as is now being felt by 3LQ listeners in Gippsland, while in Queensland 3LO's signals are reported to be almost perfect, both as regards strength and clarity."

Although unable to explain the causes of this phenomenon, the mission does set forth certain salient and important facts which they observed in the course of their study. In the first place the investigators eliminate the popular belief that the mountain ranges in eastern Victoria are the disturbing factor. No evidence of mountain fading was found, and this was confirmed by inquiries from constant listeners in the places visited. The mountains do not affect the wave wield, the report says, for in all cases the loop directions were found to be normal. The same comparative results were obtained whether using the aerial and ground system or the loop aerial.

Change of Season.

Change of season does, however, affect broadcasting. It is significant, the commission reports, that in every town visited where distortions was in evidence local listeners informed them that distortion of 3LO had first appeared at the beginning of winter in Australia.

A second factor influencing transmission is the hour of day. It was found, for instance, that at present in Gippsland people listening in with good receivers are able to get satisfactory service from 3LO in laylight hours, but that after sunset it is necessary to tune in on distant stations for entertainment.

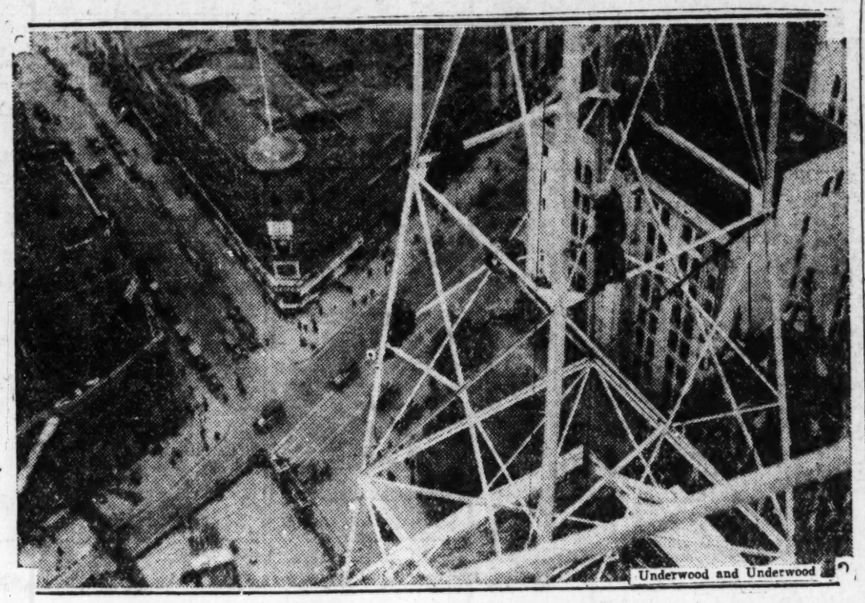

Another interesting conclusion of the mission is that there is apparently no connection between the causes for fading among the various stations. The signal purity from 2FC is attributed to the fact that transmission is made in that case on a long wave, 1,100 meters. Yet 3LO, which is having most of the trouble, is broadcasting on 371 meters, while 4QG, whose meter length is not much greater than LO's—385—is one of the least affected stations.

LISTENERS IN INDIA PAY LICENSE FEE

In India, as in Canada, a license is necessary for every receiving set used to pick up concerts and entertainment. The license in Indian is approximately $3.75 and is collected by the government. Eighty per cent of this fee is paid to the Indian Broadcasting company, Limited, recently formed to promote broadcasting in India. It has an authorized capital of approximately $565,000, divided into 150,000 ordinary shares, each of $3.75. For importers of wireless apparatus 2,500 shares have been reserved. Ten per cent of the importation value of all wireless apparatus is paid into the company.

Two stations, each rated at 12 kilowatts, are being built. One will be in the Bengal presidency and the other in the Bombay. The cost of each station will be $75,000 and the yearly maintenance is figured to be a similar amount in each case.

Two Risk Lives To Erect "Highest Radio"

Radio Trade Notes.

A new vacuum tube has been placed on the market under the name of the Strongson self-shielded copper-plated tube. The glass tube is copper-plated, the plating being grounded to the "A" minus filament, giving an absolute magnetic confinement to each tube, according to the manufacturers.

A new unit known as the "A" auto-power is being manufactured and marketed by the Westinghouse Union Battery company. This unit is produced in four models—6 volt 60 cycle, 6 volt 25 cycle, 4 volt 60 cycle and 4 volt 25 cycle. The 60-cycle models can be used on the 50-cycle current and the 25-cycle models on the 40 cycle.

A high-capacity storage battery in a rubber case to which is permanently attached a trickle charge rectifier comprises the unit. It is plugged into the house lighting mains and is then ready for operation.

Fifteen Types of Radio Tubes Big Aid to Quality Reception

With advent of the new and improved detector tube, Type CX-300A, and the successful development of the power tube, E. T. Cunningham, Inc., now has fifteen distinct types of radio tubes in the field. Progress in this specialized branch of the radio industry is an indication of the rapid advance made by the radio industry as a whole.

In 1915 there was only one type of Cunningham radio tube on the market. By 1920 there were only two types. The early tube was a Jack-of-all-trades. It was designed to serve in every socket of all standard radio equipment; and, considering the variety of tasks that it had to perform, was remarkably efficient.

Better Tone Demanded

Radio owners, however, as well as radio engineers, were not satisfied. There was a constant demand in those pioneer days of radio for better tone quality, higher efficiency and greater amplification. This demand led to the development of special types of tubes designed to perform particular tasks with extreme scientific accuracy.

CX-300A

Radio tubes today may be divided into four general classifications: detector, voltage amplifier, power amplifier and rectifier tubes. Within these classes some tubes are constructed to serve in storage battery operated sets, others to be used in dry cell operated receivers and still others for use in connection with socket power devices, including "B" eliminators.

Detector Increases Volume

Cunningham Radio Tube, Type CX-300A, is a new special purpose tube designed for use only in the detector socket of receivers using 5-volt tubes. This new detector will give a receiver clearer and sweeter tone and increase volume on far away stations. Installation is merely a matter of taking out the old tube and slipping the CX-300A in its place.

Type CX-301A is a general purpose tube for storage battery sets and perhaps the most popular tube in use today. It gives extreme amplification at either audio or radio frequency.

Type CX-112 may be used in place of CX-301A in the last audio stage without change in voltages. CX-112 is a power tube and, feeding the loud speaker, will improve tone quality and give increased volume. CX-371 is a new power amplifier tube also designed for the last audio stage. While this tube is more difficult to install than the CX-112 in receivers where provision has not been made for it, the task is not difficult for a technical man. CX-371 practically eliminates all possibility of signal distortion and improves the operation of any loud speaker.

Dry Cell Tubes

C-299 and CX-299 are general purpose high vacuum tubes especially designed for extreme economy of operation from dry cells. The tubes are identical except for their bases. C-299 has a special type small bayonet lock base while the CX-299 is mounted on the standard CX base. The former type is manufactured principally for replacement purposes since new sets are designed for the standard push type base. CX-220 is a high vacuum tube designed for dry battery operation as a power amplifier to supplement C and CX-299. It is used only in the last audio stage to feed the loud speaker with maximum undistorted power.

CX-299

Types C-11 and CX-12, like C-299 and CX-299, are identical except for their bases. Both of these tubes are excellent detectors and audio frequency amplifiers for dry cell operated sets.

Rectifier Tubes

CX-313 is a full wave rectifier tube and CX-316B is a single wave rectifier of high power. These tubes are for use with socket power devices, including "B" eliminators. CX-374 and C-376 are also tubes for special work in connection with operating receivers directly from the house lighting circuit.

CX-310

CX-310 is a heavy duty power amplifier tube designed especially to operate heavy duty loud speakers. C-377 is a protective tube which, when connected in the "B" battery circuit, will protect radio tube filaments against any possibility of accidental burn-out through wrong "B" battery connection or short circuits.

Listeners Urged to Unite For Betterment of Radio

BY WILL H. SMITH.

Organization and cooperation are the only effective methods whereby the listeners' rights and interests can be protected. First we must have organization. Individual complaints or endeavors avail nothing. After we have had organization we must with that have cooperation, for without cooperation an organization can not be effective nor can the desired results be obtained.

This has proven to be so in every big affair the world has known, and nothing is bigger or greater than the interests of the radio listeners' rights and interests.

Every radio listeners' club or association that has been formed must have cooperation within itself, properly functioned. But to be sure of success in all matters protecting the listeners' rights, we must go still further with organization and cooperation. A local listeners' club or association properly organized and all the members cooperating can without a doubt obtain some of the desired results in their own locality, and no doubt there are a number at present functioning in a satisfactory manner. But radio is big, is great, it covers the entire world with millions of interested and active listeners. While local organizations can clear up the situation to a certain extent in their own localities they have no influence or prestige in nearby localities or in distant districts, zones or sections of the country.

Therefore, every radio club and organization in this United States should be amalgamated under one head and management. It is natural for individuals to be jealous of others successful activities. It is also natural for groups in one locality to be jealous of similar groups in other localities. These local organizations in the radio world are all fighting for one principle. That is the protection of the rights and interests of the listeners and a general betterment of radio; but they all are working under different lines, under different managements and under different plans.

The Broadcast Listeners' Association of America was organized for the purpose of banding together the listeners throughout the United States for their individual benefits and the general good of radio. There are without a doubt hundreds and maybe thousands of radio listeners clubs throughout the United States, but they have not been able to accomplish the desire or carry out the intention of their original plan for the reason they are not large enough or strong enough. The B. L. A. of A. was organized for this very purpose of bringing the organization under one management and the affiliation of all clubs that the work may be carried on successfully and every member benefit thereby.

Our membership extends from coast to coast and we at present have affiliations in different sections of the country.

A very good comparison on this subject is that of the world war. In the beginning of the world war the German interests were organized, managed and directed by one head. They were a strong and mighty enemy with the determination to control the world. The other European nations who first entered the conflict went as individual nations. Each nation's army was managed and directed by its own heads, every one having a different plan but all fighting the same enemy. They were carrying on a "gorilla" warfare which was not effective. They were being driven to the wall and Germany was on the point of winning the war and carrying out the original intentions. Then the United States was threatened and brought into the conflict. Then, and not until then, were the European nations with their armies including the United States organized under one management and directorship.

A "gorilla" warfare was then a thing of the past. The amalgamated armies outnumbered Germany to a great extent. The resources of the different nations were combined and so won the war.

So it is in the radio world. They are the support of the industry. The money spent on radio originally comes from the listeners. They, too, are waging a gorilla warfare against those mighty interests who desire to control the radio science, the industry, and even the air. Another comparison, and one from which we can benefit, is the experience of the National Automobile Club of America. The automobile manufacturers as a body were unable to carry on legislative reforms vitally necessary to that industry. Automobile owners organized as the American association and carried out its undertakings in a very satisfactory way through sheer force in number and influence, which the manufacturers were unable to do. A great deal of similar work and benefit can be done in radio. It would be best to have all the listeners organized into one body. These can cooperate with the manufacturers in all matters of mutual benefit to each other.

The radio listeners of the United States are numerous enough so that if organized under one management and under one directorship they would be one of the mightiest and most influential organizations the world has ever known. They will be strong enough to demand recognition from any that might be antagonistic to their interests. They will be so strong no interest will attempt to take away their constitutional rights.

The Broadcast Listeners' Association of America does not advocate that local organizations affiliate with the national body and lose their identity as a local organization, but they do advocate for the benefit of all an affiliation, all worknig under one management with the same interests, still retaining their identity as a local organization. The Broadcast Listeners Association of America is the first, the biggest and the most influential organization in the United States. In making controversies they have been handicaped, still they were successful in all matters pertaining to the listeners interests, the members, of course, all working in the controversy; but to be successful it was necessary that the organization reach out and get the cooperation on such matters, of the individual listeners throughout the country.

This cooperation required a great deal of work and expense for the cooperators ran into hundreds of thousands of individual listeners. We say to all radio clubs or associations through the country, you should affiliate with the parent body, the national organization and to the individual listeners in the localities where there is no local club or association you can become bona fide members of the parent body or organized local branches and become part of this great organization.

Program Radio Station WGST

The Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta

Monday, December 6.—9-10 p. m. cst. 1,110 kilocycles, 270.1 meters: Program by Harris Hall freshmen; Professor J. H. Lucas and his Tech Lyric trio.

Thursday, December 9—7-8 p. m., cst. 1,110 kilocycles, 270.1 meters: Charles Carter, baritone, assisted by other artists; speakers, Professor K. K. Stowell, of the department of architecture, on the subject "What About Architecture?"

Monday, December 13.—9-10 p. m., cast. 1,110 kilocycles, 270.1 meters: Georgia Tech Glee club, J. W. Bearden, president; quarter, Stewart Boyle, first tenor; J. W. Bearden, second tenor; George Gassiert, baritone, and Nathan Ryers, bass; orchestra, "Bill" Walton, leader; Mandolin club, Archie Britt, leader; chorus.

Thursday, December 16.—7-8 p. m., cst. 1,110 kilocycles, 270.1 meters: Lewis Johnson, of the voice department at Agnes Scott college, sponsor; speaker, Professor J. L. Daniel, of the chemistry department, on the subject "Chemical Substitutes."

This concludes our broadcasting until after the Christmas holidays, our first January program being on Monday night, January 3, from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m., being 30 minutes later than has been our custom.

The Monday or Tech night programs are furnished by Tech students and faculty, largely; as a rule, there are no talks given on these nights.

On Thursday nights we give what we call our artist series programs. In these we have the best talent that we are able to secure in Atlanta and elsewhere. The short talks, at the end of the hour, which are usually given by Tech professors, add the only "Tech" flavor that we give these programs.

The new Balkite Trickle and High-Rate Charger converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply with ample power for the largest sets

The new Balkite Charger with both low and high charging rates is easily the greatest charger value in radio. It combines the advantages of both trickle and rapid charging. At the low rate, as a trickle charger, it keeps your "A" battery automatically at full power, and in effect converts it into a light socket "A" power supply. The high rate provides a ready reserve of power ample for the largest sets.

The Balkite Charger is noiseless in operation. In most cases it can be used during reception. Like all Balkite Radio Power Units, it has no tubes and nothing to wear out or require replacement. It is a permanent piece of equipment. Can be used with either 4 or 6-volt batteries. Ask your dealer. Fansteel Products Company, Inc., North Chicago, Illinois.

Balkite Trickle Charger—$10
For those who require a charger of limited capacity only. Can be left on continuous or trickle charge thus automatically keeping the battery at full power. Converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply. Charging rate about .5 ampere. Over 300,000 in use. Price $10.

Three New Balkite "B"s
Balkite "B" eliminates "B" batteries and supplies "B" current from the light socket. Three models. Balkite "B"-W at $27.50 for sets of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts. Balkite "B"-X, for sets of 8 tubes or less, including power tubes—$42. Balkite "B"-Y, for any radio set—$69. Most owners of even small sets will buy Balkite "B"-X for it has ample power to serve nearly any set you may buy in the future.

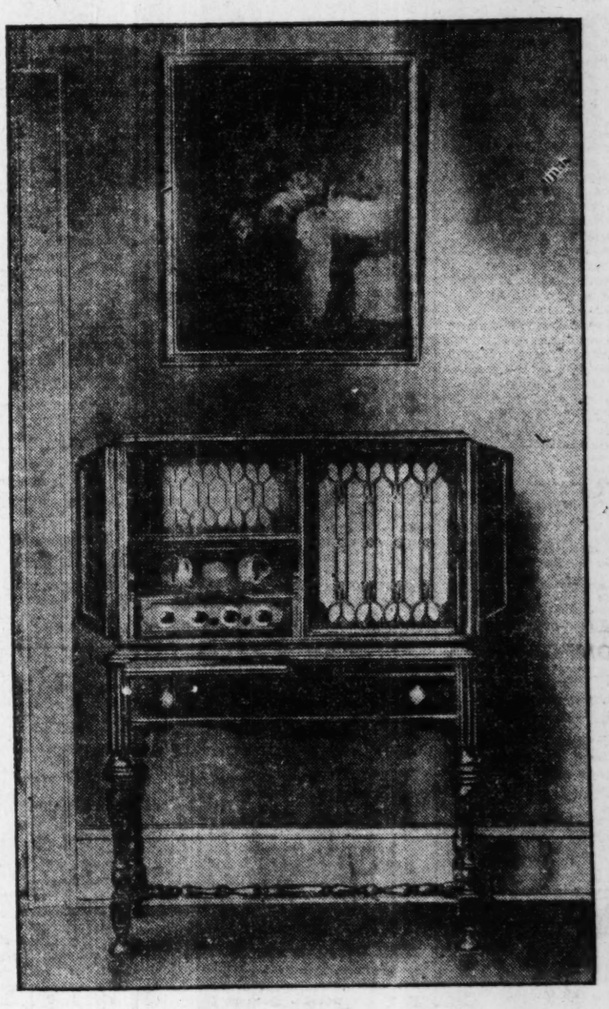

Balkite Combination
Supplies automatic current to both "A" and "B" circuits. Serves any set now using either 4 or 6-volt "A" batteries and requiring not more than 30 milliamperes of "B" current at 135 volts. Practically all sets of up to 8 tubes. Price $59.50.

Listen to the Balkite Radio Symphony Concerts with Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony Saturday Nights 9 P. M. Eastern Standard Time, over stations: WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WFI, WCAE, WSAI, WTAM, WWJ, WGN, WCCO, KSD, WDAF, WOC.

MABEL GARRISON ON ATWATER KENT PROGRAM TONIGHT

Von Dohnanyi, Hungarian Pianist-Composer, To Share Honors With Metropolitan Soprano.

Mabel Garrison, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Ernst von Dohnanyi, Hungarian pianist composer, will share honors in the Atwater Kent radio concert broadcast over 15 stations, December 5.

"Whatever I am doing at the moment occupies me completely, for I throw my heart and soul into it," declared Miss Garrison, when asked whether she liked to broadcast. She added that radio had performed a great service in developing musical appreciation in the many small towns in the country.

"It is a joy to me to see how musical appreciation and understanding have grown all over the country," she said, "and what attentive audiences are now found in small places, where, perhaps they had never had a song recital before the advent of radio."

Miss Garrison, a native of Baltimore, studied piano at the Peabody Conservatory of Music there, later changing to develop her remarkable voice. Her career started in a church choir, and during her eight years with the Metropolitan opera she advanced steadily until she is now considered America's foremost coloratura soprano.

Dohnanyi was born in Pozsony, Hungary, in 1877. His father was a professor of mathematics, who played the 'cello and other instruments. When the son showed a preference for the piano the father learned to play the instrument that he might teach his son. The father was succeeded by the organist of Pozsony cathedral. Dohnanyi later studied at Budapest, winning the famous Franz Liszt scholarship. Here he won the admiration of the great conductor, Hans Richter, who took him to Vienna and later to London. His first concerts in America were in 1898-9, when he was barely 20 years old.

The program for the joint radio concert by these two artists, beginning at 9:15 eastern time, Sunday, December 5, follows:

(a) "Scene and Gavotte," from "Manon," Massenet; (b) "Je dis que rien ne m'epouvante," from "Carmen," Bizet—Mabel Garrison and Atwater Kent orchestra.

(a) "Marche Humoresque," opus 17, No. 1, (b) "Aria," opus 22, No. 1, (c) "Presto aus Ruralia Hungarica," opus 32, No. 2, Dohnanyi—Ernst von Dohnanyi.

(a) "Danny Boy," Old Irish; (b) "When I Was Seventeen," Swedish; (c) "Estrellita" (arranged by Frank La Forge), Mexican, (d) "Mah Lindy Lou," Strickland—Mabel Garrison and accompanist.

Hungarian Rhapsodie, No. 13, Liszt—Ernst von Dohnanyi.

Waltz song, "Il Bacio," L. Arditi—Mabel Garrison and orchestra.

SONG WRITER SINGS OWN COMPOSITIONS

Bill Rietz, who has written "There's a Little Nightie Hanging on the Line" and other comedy songs, will play and sing a number of his compositions at WBGS, Gimbel Brothers, New York, at 1:45 o'clock Thursday afternoon, December 9. Mr. Rietz is a tried radio artist and has appeared previously at the Gimbel station as well as at other established broadcasting studios.

COURTS MAY HELP CLEAR AIR CHAOS

A national radio coordinating committee made up of representatives of the industry at a recent meeting in Washington urged broadcasters who have been rendering effective service to the radio public prior to the breakdown of authority to protect their interests, and hence the interests of the public, by recourse to state courts in the event of interference from stations in the same locality where the conditions are identical or favorable.

"The decision of the Chicago court in the case of WGN vs. WGES sheds a ray of hope," said the report. "The Chicago court held that a separation of 50 kilocycles is necessary between stations in the same community. Confirmation of the Chicago decision in other state courts will do much to check the invasions of the ether channels, which are being planned by more than seventy stations which are now under construction.

"Radio legislation which will establish federal control over broadcasting is highly essential. If it is impossible to secure the enactment of permanent legislation in the immediate future congress should pass an emergency measure which will prevent further confusion in the ether.

"In the enactment of legislation it is the recommendation of the committee that whatever authority is placed over broadcasting should be required to make determination of who shall broadcast by giving consideration to the length of time stations have operated, the character of service rendered by them and the requirements of their states and communities for radio service. This principle is not intended in any way to create a vested right as against the United States, but asserts that there is a distinction between vested rights and the rights of individuals against each other.

"The coordinating committee of the radio industry is not taking the part of proponents of either bill, but instead is insistent that the bills be regarded from the standpoint of public service, which in the final analysis will redound to the greatest benefit not only to the public but to the manufacturer, dealer and broadcaster.

"It is the belief of the committee that the administration of radio can be adequately handled by either the department of commerce or a separate radio commission. The determination of which authority shall administer radio is exclusively a matter for congress; a compromise of the proposed methods may offer the most satisfactory solution.

The chairman of the coordinating committee is Walter A. Strong, of Chicago, representing the radio section of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, and its members are Paul B. Klugh, New York, executive chairman, National Association of Broadcasters; A. T. Haugh, Buffalo, president Radio Manufacturers' association; R. W. DeMotte, president Radio Magazine Publishers' association; Charles H. Stewart, Washington, D. C., American Radio Relay league, and Harold J. Wrape, St. Louis, president Federated Radio Trade association.

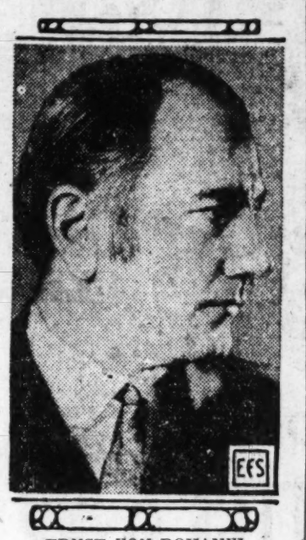

MACKAYE WILL READ FROM WGBS TUESDAY

Percy Mackaye, famous for his poems, plays and pageants, will give a reading from his recently published biography of his father, "Epoch: The Life of Steele Mackaye," at 8:10 o'clock Tuesday evening, December 7, from WGBS, Gimbel Brothers, New York. In this reading Mr. Mackaye will start a fortnightly series on the life and plays of his father, famous as an actor and manager of a former generation.

MABEL GARRISON.

ERNST VON DOHANYI.

New York, December 4.—Mabel Garrison, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company who shares honors with Ernst von Dohanyi, Hungarian pianist composer, in the Atwater Kent radio concert broadcast from 15 stations Sunday evening, December 5, believes radio has performed a great public service in developing musical appreciation in the many small towns of the country.

Set Building Made Easy

BUILDING THE SUPER HILCO-DYNE.

BY J. J. FOOTE.

This type of receiver, which operates on loop, indoor or outside aerial, is built on the super-hetrodyne principle. The purpose of this article being to simplify construction details, we will not go into technical terms and definitions which are too deep for the average radio builder to understand. Contrary to the opinion of many, the super-hetrodyne receiver is not difficult to construct and we may also mention it is not a difficult type of receiver to operate.

The super-Hilco-dyne receiver while constructed with ample controlls for tubes, etc., actually is operated with only two dials for tuning and a potentiohmeter for volume controll. We will mention here the purpose of using five rheostats in the super-hilco-dyne is to be able to use any type of tube and to be in position to take care of any new tubes, which may be developed. This type of receiver is built in seven, eight and nine-tube receivers and as it is easier to leave off one or two tubes, we will give the construction details of the nine-tube set. This enables the builder to leave off one or two stages of audio amplification and build the set to suit his requirements for volume.

The seven tube having ample volume for loud speaker operation on loop from distant stations is the type usually built, but it is of great advantage to have a surplus of power in any receiver and if the builder will build an eight or nine-tube type, he will be amply rewarded, by the increased quality of the receiver, as well as additional volume gained.

Select Good Parts.

Of course a radio set of this type, employing the radio frequency units and oscilator should be constructed with only the best parts obtainable. We must remember that no receiver is better than its weakest part and, therefore, care should be taken in the construction of the receiver by selecting only reliable parts of best quality.

In this first article on the super-Hilco-dyne we will give the list of parts and material needed for assembling the nine-tube set and in our following articles, will go into the wiring, mounting, lay out and construction details in as clear a way as it is possible to do and if our readers will carefully follow us through the story it will be possible to build the super Hilco-dyne just as the Atlanta Hilco-corporation radio engineers specify it.

Parts Required.

The parts required are a panel 7x28, a sub-panel 7x27 or a base board can be used if the sub-panel is not desired, however, the sub-panel design permits wiring underneath and makes a much neater job. We will need two brackets to mount the sub-panel. For the panel the following are required:

Two .0005 variable condensers.
Two vernier dials.
Two filment controll switches.
One potentiohmeter, preferably 2,000 ohms.
Three 30-ohm rheostats.
Two six-ohm rheostats; these to be of the power type and able to pass one ampere of current without heating.
Two two-circuit jacks.
One open-circuit jack.

We now have all the parts for the panel and will next list the parts for the sub-panel.

One super-Hilco-dyne kit, which includes antenna and oscilator couplers, filter transformer, three intermediate radio frequency transformers, all fixed condensers except the by-pass condensers and nuts and screws solder lugs and blue prints.
Three .5 MMF by-pass condensers.
One grid leak, from 2 to 5 megohms.
One two-circuit jack.
One battery strip with seven binding post.
Nine tube sockets.
One three-stage amplifier. This to be of impedience or resistence coupled type, or one audio and two impedience.
Twenty-five sticks of heavy bus bar or same amount of flexible wire.
One small roll of good rosin core solder.

This completes the list of parts required for the super-Hilco-dyne, and next week we will take up panel and base lay out and mounting, the following week will give the wiring directions.

In concluding this article we will mention the fact that the detector tube is the critical part of any radio set and it is not possible to receive signals, which the detector tube will not pick up. There are three ways to use the first detector tube on the super-Hilco-dyne. One is to use a C battery in the grid lead connecting the the negative terminal to the on socket. The second way is to use a grid leak and condenser in the grid lead, con-negative terminal to the G on socket. third is to run the loop wire direct to the grid of the tube through the G on the socket. This latter way is employed in the super-Hilco-dyne as it does not change the received signal from radio frequency into audio frequency. This method is better for detecting weak signals and does not distort the signal. It shows its efficiency in the fact that it is able to detect signals from the Pacific coast on a loop, and wonderful results have been obtained by users of the super-Hilco-dyne.

ENTIRE TOWN OUT FOR WMAG PLAYERS

Seldom does it happen that a whole town turns out to hear radio artists, week after week, b.. th.. ever so good. But that's what they are doing in Cornell, Ill., for the WMAQ players.

Every Thursday night at 8:30, 20 minutes before the start of the play, students and residents begin to assemble in the high school auditorium to enjoy the hour of entertainment.

"Our radio en.. yment without your feature," Paul C. Potratz, of the school teaching staff wrote The Daily News, "would be like France without Paris."

WMAQ players are directed by William Ziegler Nourse, who makes his weekly selections of personnel from more than a h..ndred talented young men and women.

NAVY IS HANDLING RADIO TOLL MESSAGES

Considering that there is no government telegraph system in this country, it would appear that Uncle Sam is building up a pretty good competing business on the side. This is suggested by the announcement that during the past year the navy shore communication facilities handled 77,000,000 words, which is 4,000,000 more than during the previous year.

Captain Ridley McLean, director of naval communications, declares there has been a large gain in navy dispatches handled by radio and over navy leased wires, "whereas navy business handled over commercial lines showed a gratifying decrease."

New Belegrade Station.

It is planned to install a new broadcasting station at Belgrade with sufficient power to be heard over the entire country. The wave length of the new installation will be fixed between 300 to 500 meters, as the former wave length of 1,650 meters did not prove satisfactory.

Number Two of a Series

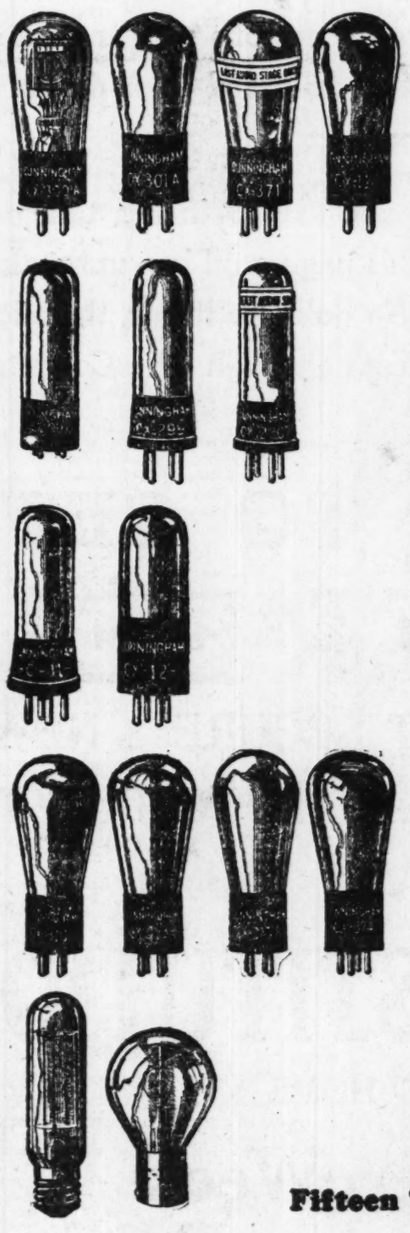

Cunningham RADIO TUBES

each one designed to perform efficiently a definite and particular task in your receiver.

The correct Cunningham Radio Tube in each socket of your set will greatly improve your radio enjoyment—will result in clearer and sweeter tone quality, improved sensitiveness and selectivity, greater volume and minimum distortion.

Study each type—acquaint yourself with its specific use and value. Then consult your nearest Cunningham radio dealer—he will gladly check over your tube equipment and make certain you have the correct combination of Cunningham Radio Tubes to enable your receiver to render its utmost in tone quality and realistic reproduction.

CX-300A, CX-301-A and CX-371 or CX-112, all with 5 volt filaments, in correct combination, will bring your receiver to its point of highest efficiency. CX-301A is the ideal radio tube for general purpose work and will serve you well in any or all sockets of your set. However, especially in 5 and 6 tube tuned radio frequency or neutrodyne receivers the best tube equipment will include our new super-sensitive detector, CX-300A, and one power amplifier to feed the loud speaker—either CX-371 or CX-112, with CX-301A, in all the remaining sockets. CX-371 is the latest and most efficient power type, but CX-112 is more adaptable to certain circuits. Adding the new Cunningham detector and a Cunningham power amplifier to your receiver will improve tone quality, increase volume and eliminate distortion. Your set will then meet the highest modern standards for excellence in broadcast reception.

CX-220 in combination with C-299 or CX-299 is the ideal Cunningham equipment for dry battery operated sets. C-299 and CX-299 serve the same purposes in dry cell receivers that the CX-301A does in storage battery sets. They are both general purpose tubes, differing only in their bases. CX-299 has the new standardized CX base while C-299 has the old style base designed for the sockets of the earlier types of dry cell receivers. CX-220 is a power amplifier for dry cell work and used in the last audio frequency stage in combination with CX-299 or C-299 will improve the tone and operation of any loud speaker.

C-11 and CX-12 are also general purpose tubes for dry cell circuits and vary only in their bases. These two tubes are especially suited to sets wherein filament battery space must be held to a minimum. These tubes are not as highly efficient as C-299 and CX-299, and have no power tube to supplement them.

CX-310 is a heavy duty power amplifier designed to operate heavy duty loud speakers.

CX-313, CX-316B are rectifier tubes to be used in connection with socket power devices, including "B" eliminators. These tubes insure smooth set operation direct from the house lighting circuit.

CX-374 is a glow tube used to regulate output voltage of "B" eliminators.

C-376, Ballast Lamp, connected in series with the primary of the transformer supplying "B" battery eliminators, maintains output voltage constant despite variations in line voltages.

CX-377, Protective Tube, protects your other tubes from burnouts through wrong "B" battery connection or short circuits. It is a form of insurance.

Eleven years of concentrated effort on a single product has brought such uniform perfection that confidence in these tubes and in the name they bear is almost universal among radio enthusiasts. The vigilance that has won for Cunningham Radio Tubes such nation-wide confidence is not and shall not be relaxed. Our reputation is by far our most valuable asset.

The Gift That Brings Rejoicing

"'Tis a poor heart that never rejoices," says Edward Spencer in his book of festivity, "Cakes and Ale."

Surely there is every reason for rejoicing during the holidays of 1926-27.

Freeman will lend substantial aid to the means of joy by marking gifts at prices which will work no hardship, be the purse ever so slender.

While we show many objects admittedly lavish and therefore costly, there are a thousand-and-one gifts of utility and charm at common-sense prices.

Miss Autrey Weds Steven Langston In Griffin Ceremony

Griffin, Ga., December 4.—Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Autrey, of Griffin, announce the engagement of their daughter, Hattie Lou, to Steven Randall Langston, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., the marriage to be solemnized at an early date. No cards.

Miss Autrey is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Autrey. She received her education in the Griffin High school and is a girl of gracious manner and many fine traits of character which has endeared her to a large circle of friends.

Mr. Langston is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Langston, of Crose City, Fla., he is a graduate of the High school, of Mayo, Fla., the Southern College of Pharmacy, Atlanta, and Max Morris School of Pharmacy, in Macon. He was formerly with the Evans Pharmacy in Griffin, and now holds a responsible position with Madden Drug company, Jacksonville, Fla., where he and his bride will make their home in the future, after a quiet wedding at an early date. Mr. Langston is a young man of splendid characteristics.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Love Tucker of Griffin, announce the engagement of their daughter, Edith Love, to Owen Wallace Daniel, of Louisville, Ky., the marriage to take place at the First Baptist church, at 4 o'clock, December 29.

The announcement was made at a luncheon last Saturday in Atlanta given by Miss Tucker's aunt, Mrs. George H. Coats, to which the intimate friends and relatives were invited.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Kate Wilson and Eugene Shepherd was solemnized Thursday morning at the home of Judge and Mrs. James A. Drewry at 10:30 o'clock in the presence of the families and a few intimate friends, the Rev. Mr. Drewery officiating.

The bride was lovely in a stylish model of blue satin, with accessories to match.

She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Wilson, of Brooks, Ga., but has made her home in Griffin for some time and by her winning personality has won for herself many friends.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shepherd, of Griffin, and holds a responsible position with one of the leading grocery stores in the city.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd will be at home to their many friends with the groom's parents, at their country home, near Griffin.

Miss Smith Weds Albert J. Little.

One of the most interesting events of the Thanksgiving holidays was the marriage of Miss Mable Virginia Smith to Albert J. Little, which took place at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, November 24, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Smith, on Delaware avenue.

A beautiful musical program was rendered. Mrs. Charles Little sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Mrs. Harbin Andrews, sister of the groom, at the piano, and Miss Jewel Jones, cousin of the bride, on the violin.

Miss Mattie Lou Robinson, the maid of honor and only attendant, entered first. The bride entered to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" with her father, who gave her in marriage. They were met before an altar of palms by the groom and his best man, W. A. Mayes. Rev. T. T. Davis officiated. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for West Palm Beach and other points of interest.

The bride was gowned in a going-away suit of old blue and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses showered with valley lilies. The maid of honor wore an evening gown of peach georgette and silver lace and carried an arm bouquet of pink rose buds.

The bride's book was kept by Miss Thelma Stanley. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Hibler, Phoenix City, Ala.; L. B. Coker, Columbus; Miss Louise Randall, Columbus; Mrs. J. Walter Jones and daughter, Jewel, Opelika, and J. C. Swann, Jr., Wedowee, Ala.

McCampbell-Nowell Wedding Cards.

Mrs. James Boyd McCampbell, of San Antonio, Texas, has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Dorothy, to Robert Lee Nowell, Jr., of Monroe, Ga., the wedding to take place at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, December 7, at the First Presbyterian church in San Antonio.

Immediately following the ceremony Mrs. McCampbell will entertain at a brilliant reception at her beautiful colonial home, 1225 West Agarita avenue, in San Antonio.

Strange-Wickersham Wedding Is Announced.

The Store of Dependability

An Exceptional Christmas Offer

From Latham & Atkinson

THIS, frankly, is an effort to relieve ourselves of the necessity of telling some of our good customers who wait until December to do their Christmas shopping that the articles they wanted have been sold, or that we cannot properly engrave their purchases in time to make delivery before Christmas.

We will, if you have a charge account with us, deliver now any purchase intended for a Christmas present, and bill you for it in January. Or, if you have no account, we will reserve for you any article in our stock upon payment of a small deposit, and deliver it to you at any time before Christmas.

We like to give good service, and to be able to supply you with just what you want. We can do both if you will give us just a little cooperation.

Mrs. Elsas Offers To Aid Committee In Mending Toys

Mrs. Louis Elsas, Atlanta chairman for the Junior Red Cross, has offered the assistance of the boys and girls of this immense organization in the furtherance of the Christmas plans of the Better Films members, to supply Christmas cheer for the needy children of the schools.

The members of the Junior Red Cross will mend and paint all toys needing rehabilitation, if delivered to them at Junior Red Cross headquarters, 283 1-2 Peachtree street (junction of West Peachtree) this week.

Mrs. Frank McCormack will be general chairman for the Christmas giving, with Mrs. Newton C. Wing and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson as assistant chairmen. Mrs. John W. Lloyd, P.-T. A. representative on the Better Films, will have charge of the distribution of the gifts, with Mrs. C. Decker Tebo as assistant chairman. Mrs. J. A. Beall will be collection chairman, with Mrs. Ernest Brown in charge of toys, her committee being composed of Mesdames Tebo and Wilder. In charge of the buying of new garments is Mrs. George Price, chairman; Mrs. C. C. Harding and Mrs. Raymond Goff. The candy chairman is Mrs. J. G. Courtney, with Mrs. H. J. Couch and Mrs. Morton Rollestone. Gifts of fruit will be handled by Mrs. W. L. McCalley with Mrs. A. V. Toney and Mrs. J. C. Kinzey. The purchasing committee will be Mrs. Richardson, assisted by Mrs. George Price and Mrs. Frank McCormack. The automobile committee will be headed by Mrs. Morton Rollestone and Mrs. Ellis Barrett, and a committee of members driving their cars.

Matinee for Christmas Children. mas Children.

Tuesday, December 21, the annual party for these children will be given at the Howard theater, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., in charge of the committee with Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman; Mrs. Charles C. Harding, prolog chairman; and Mrs. John G. Courtney, chaperon chairman, assisted by a large number of Better Films members, Boy and Girl Scouts and members of the Junior Red Cross.

Following the regular business of the meeting Tuesday, the mothers had the pleasure of listening to a talk by Mildred Seydell on "Movies Abroad," in which she told of her surprise in finding nearly all the "foreign" movies to be American made. Mrs. J. A. Beall, prominent better films member, described her visit to a Hollywood studio, as a guest of the Will Hays organization, this past summer. She told of the impossibility, unless properly introduced, of viewing the studios, and said that the name of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, dean of Atlanta better films work, was an "open sesame" to everything in the film world.

Prominent organization leaders present at the meeting were Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of the Fifth district G. F. W. C.; Mrs. Baynard Willingham, Fifth district president P.-T. A.; A. A. Jameson, director Atlanta Boy Scouts; Mrs. Louis Elsas, chairman Atlanta Junior Red Cross; Mrs. Victor Cluis and James Coots, Forsyth leading man.

West End Woman's Club Requests Cascade Road Bus Line Service

The question of bus line service through West End Park and out Cascade road, is under consideration by the Georgia Railway and Power company, in compliance with request presented by Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, president of the West End Woman's club. This suggestion was made in response to innumerable requests coming to Mrs Johnson from citizens all over the West End Park and Cascade section, as well as from those contemplating the erection of homes in that vicinity. With the erection of the West End Woman's club, the Atlanta Golf club, and the rapid building up of the beautiful Cascade Heights subdivision, as well as the location of Greenwood cemetery on this route, there is a real need for the service at this time, which need will be correspondingly greater as the section continues its present rapid growth. While no definite action has yet been rendered in this matter, Mrs. Johnson is hopeful that favorable action may be accorded in this matter which means so much to the development of the community.

The Georgia Railway and Power company has been very generous in its response to requests of the West End Woman's club for improved service in the West End section. The Girls' High bus line was put into operation one month from the date the petition was presented, and lately recently the club has requested that the Junior High scholars be permitted to use the bus line. This request has been granted, and in future Junior High school scholars will have the privilege of using the bus line on the morning route, out Lucile avenue to Inman street; out Inman street to Greensferry; Greensferry to Wellington, and from Wellington through West End Park, up Gordon street to Peeples street, to Joe Brown Junior High school. It is the desire and request of the West End Woman's club that this bus line be patronized by those for whose convenience it has been provided.

The regular business meeting of the West End Woman's club will be held on Wednesday afternoon, December 8, at 3 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Lee Street school. Mrs. C. P. Connally will have charge of the social feature. There will be an important meeting of the executive board, preceding the business meeting, and all officers and committee chairmen are urged to be present promptly at 2 o'clock for this session.

Mrs. Grady Andrews, chairman of the ways and means committee, will sponsor a benefit bridge at her home, 1468 Lucile avenue, on December 15, at 2 o'clock. All proceeds will go toward the building fund. Reservations may be made by communicating with Mrs. Andrews.

Business Women's Aide Organized.

The women of the Missionary society of the Collins Memorial church, in Bolton, entertained the young business women of the church at supper on Tuesday evening of the past week.

After supper the subject of organizing a Business Woman's circle of the society was discussed and a plan suggested by Miss Mary Pool, president of the circle of Trinity church, Atlanta. It was voted unanimously that a circle should be organized and the following officers were elected immediately: President, Miss Idella Ballah; vice president, Mrs. Fay Hughes; recording secretary, Miss Margie Gramling; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Bessie Jones; Treasurer, Miss Ethel Chambers. The first Monday night of each month was selected as the time of meeting, supper to be served at 6:30 o'clock by members of the other circles.

The Forget-Me-Not Club Has Meeting.

Mrs. Robert H. Crockett was hostess to the Forget-Me-Not club Tuesday, November 23, at her home on Lakewood terrace. At the close of the business meeting an interesting contest was held, in which Mrs. Walker O. Browne was awarded first prize and Mrs. Amy Thornton the consolation. The guess box was furnished by Mrs. T. P. Lasseter and won by Mrs. W. P. Milam.

Those present were Mrs. Foster F. Whitney, Mrs. S. D. Skinner, Mrs. A. S. Stallings, Mrs. W. J. Milam, Mrs. Alton Milam, Mrs. A. T. Owings, Mrs. Robert H. Poole, Mrs. J. W. Plunkett, Mrs. Amy Thornton, Mrs. Edgar Davis, Mrs. H. C. Buchanan, Mrs. C. C. Player, Mrs. Fred F. Edwards, Mrs. C. M. Kimball, Mrs. W. O. Browne and Mrs. T. P. Laseter, of Jacksonville, Fla.

The next meeting of the club will be held on December 7 at the home of Mrs. Edgar Davis, on Oakhill avenue. At this meeting the annual election of officers takes place, consequently all members are urged to be present.

Miss Neva Barrow Weds Mr. Antley.

Reynolds, Ga., December 4.—The marriage of Miss Neva Barrow and Shuler Antley, of St. Matthews, S. C., was solemnized Thursday afternoon, November 25, at 4 o'clock, at the Reynolds Methodist church. Rev. Dr. W. F. Quillian, of Wesleyan college, performed the impressive ring ceremony, in the presence of relatives and friends.

Preceding the ceremony a program of appropriate wedding music was rendered by Miss Marie Barrow, pianist; W. L. Carter, cornetist, and Hendley Saunders, violinist. Just before the entrance of the bridal party "Until" was beautifully sung by Miss Marion Hodges, and "All For You," by Walker Newsom.

The ushers were E. H. Griffith, of Reynolds, and B. B. Littlejohn, of Cedartown. Then the pillow bearers, little Miss Bettie Neisler and Master Benjamin Hodges, placed white satin pillows at the altar. D. B. Alexander and Miss Addie Antley, sister of the groom, were also attendants.

The matron of honor was Mrs. W. M. Hollis, sister of the bride. Little Edgar Whatley, Jr., nephew of the bride, acted as ring bearer and little Lucy Bryan was flower girl.

The bride entered with her father, Elza E. Barrow, who gave her in marriage. She was gowned in a handsome dress of heavy white satin made basque waist, with bouffant scalloped skirt. The lovely veil of filmy tulle was caught close to the bride's dark hair in a becoming cap shape, adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of brides' roses and valley lilies. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Marion Gressette, of St. Matthews, S. C. Schubert's serenade was softly rendered during the ceremony, and as the bridal party reached the vestibule they were greeted in the time honored custom, with showers of rice, and the hearty good wishes and congratulations of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Antley left for a short wedding trip, after which they will make their temporary home at Cedartown, Ga.

Christian Church Bazar To Continue.

Among the things for sale at the bazar held by the woman's society of the Peachtree Christian church besides hand-made articles, are a large number of pictures being sold on commission from one of the leading gift shops of Atlanta, which range from $1 upward. Also another large concern has "lent" a wide range of gift books for children on the same basis, and Christmas cards are also on display.

A large number of paper white narcissus bulbs in bowls already well-started to bloom at Christmas, are sold for practically what they cost for the material.

Dressed dolls of all kinds at all prices are also on hand, and there are enough so that any little girl would be pleased with any one that might be given her. The bazar will continue through the week and the public is asked to drop in and see for themselves the many attractive things on display.

Decatur Woman's Club To Hold Annual Bazar Next Saturday

The Decatur Woman's club will hold its annual bazar, Saturday, December 11, at 153 Sycamore street, from 9 to 10 o'clock. Luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock and supper at 6 o'clock.

There will be 10 booths filled with many dainty and useful articles, as well as home-made cakes, candies and other delicacies to tempt the palate. These ladies have the reputation of "low prices for high-class articles," so come early and avoid the rush. Lunch and supper will be 50 cents a plate, including coffee and dessert for those desiring a full meal while sandwiches and coffee will be sold for 25 cents.

The booths are in the capable hands of the following ladies:

Children's booth, Mrs. C. E. Pattillo, Mrs. Schley Howard and Mrs. John Montgomery.

Doll booth, Mrs. Charlie Weekes.

Card table and miscellaneous booth, Mrs. R. C. Henderson, Mrs. George and Mrs. Neal Hartley.

Apron booth, Mrs. W. H. S. Hamilton.

Towel booth, Mrs. George Jones.

Novelty booth, Miss Louise Martin.

Handkerchief booth, Mrs. Myrick Clements and Mrs. Robert Hale.

Cake booth, Mrs. Dan Neal, Mrs. C. E. Bothwell and Mrs. Paul Smith.

The candy booth will be in charge of the Junior Woman's club, with Miss Maxine Goltra as chairman.

Pulaski Says "Keep the Banner."

Mrs. W. A. Mason, publicity chairman of the Pulaski-Bleckley W. M. U., writes:

"It is with deep appreciation and gratitude that the Pulaski-Blackley association receives the honor of having won first place in the B. W. M. U. publicity contest. It inspires us to press onward and upward to greater heights, and with the splendid spirit of Mrs. Neel, our beloved state president, we say, 'Keep the Banner.'"

Federated Church Women Hold Quarterly Meeting

Miss Rosa Woodberry presided over a most enthusiastic quarterly meeting of the Federated Church Women of Georgia, held at the Woman's exchange in the Connally building, Saturday, November 27, at 1 o'clock.

The devotional, led by Mrs. Preston Hall, had for its theme the allegory of the vine and the branches as recorded in the 15th chapter of John. Mrs. Hall's concise and able discussion of the scripture reading was followed by a prayer by Mrs. L. H. Keller. Miss Woodberry gave a short talk on the practical application of the lesson to present needs.

Mrs. H. C. Phipps reported that much interest in the federated church women's page was manifested recently at the state convention of the Christian church held in Savannah, and also at the international convention of that church, in Memphis. Mrs. L. O. Freeman stated that the page had been indorsed by the recent Baptist convention at Gainesville.

Miss Woodberry appointed Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Mrs. J. C. White, Mrs. H. C. Phipps and Mrs. Harvey Clark as nominating committee to name the officers for next year.

The absence of Mrs. J. W. Wills, state auditor, on account of illness, was keenly felt and much regretted by all present.

The following members were in attendance: Mrs. P. B. Hall, Mrs. L. H. Keller, Mrs. John Kerksis, Mrs. T. L. Lewis, Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. H. C. Phipps, Mrs. F. R. Graham, Mrs. J. D. Cromer, Mrs. Arthur Hale, Mrs. Edgar Craighead, recording secretary; Mrs. Harvey Clark, Mrs. C. R. Stauffer, Mrs. F. L. Woodruff, Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Mrs. J. C. White, Mrs. J. W. Setze, Mrs. Elijah A. Brown, Mrs. E. D. Crawford, Mrs. L. O. Freeman.

School Children Will Aid Penny Luncheon Fund

Hundreds of religious school children in Atlanta will include in their Chanukah celebrations the first week in December a number of social events for the penny luncheon fund of Hadassah, the Woman's Zionist organization of America.

The fund is used for providing hot lunches to school children in Palestine and training in domestic science to older girls. During the past year four schools were included in the penny luncheon fund program, but with the additional collections planned this year, the number of schools to benefit by the fund is expected to be increased.

The budget for the coming year is $9,000. The fund was organized in 1922 by Dr. Maurice H. Harris and at that time America's contribution was $38. In four years it increased almost 80 times, and the need for further additions is still urgent. In these few years school children here have responded generously to the appeal. They have heard much of the boys and girls of the Palestinian schools and have become interested in their welfare.

Mrs. J. Faeman, chairman of the local penny luncheons fund committee, announces that the children of Ahavach Achim religious school are awaiting the approach of Sunday, December 5, when they will make their individual contributions. "The children were so inspired by a talk from Mrs. H. A. Hirmes that they are impatiently awaiting for their privilege to help the children in the Palestinian schools," said Mrs. Faeman.

Camp Fire Girls Engage in Activities.

At the Arbor day exercises held Friday at the state capitol under the auspices of the fifth district of the Federation of Womans' clubs, with Mrs. Oscar Palmour as president, Camp Fire was represented by the girls of the Owakica group of the Girls' High school. Miss Mary Louise Hollands, Atlanta executive secretary, is spending three days in Albany, Ga., holding a training course for Camp Fire guardians.

The meeting of the Girls' council will be held Monday, December 6, at 2:30 o'clock at Camp Fire headquarters. Luncheon will be served at 20 cents a plate. Tuesday, December 7, at 12:30 o'clock, the board of directors of Atlanta Camp Fire will hold its monthly meeting in Davison-Paxon-Stokes tearoom. Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the board, requests that members attend.

The Guardians' association consisting of all guardians in Atlanta will meet at Camp Fire headquarters Tuesday, December 7, at 3:00 o'clock. Miss Ethel Purcell is president of the association and the group captains who will work under her are Mrs. Harry Hall, Miss Essie Belle Brockman, Mrs. Lula Spencer Turk and Mrs. Dan Plaster. Miss Helen Haggard has been appointed secretary.

Miss Hattie Rainwater will conduct a nature hike for Camp Fire guardians Friday, December 10.

Saturday, December 11, in the auditorium of the Decatur Junior High school, the Swannanoa girls will give a Camp Fire play to which the public is invited. Miss Emily Stead, a student of Agnes Scott college, is directing the play assisted by Mrs. J. Howell Green. A small admission will be charged.

North Avenue Presbyterian school girls have selected as the group name, "Wachatma," meaning beautiful, as the first point of the Camp Fire law is "Seek Beauty." A hike has been planned for the next meeting under the supervision of Miss Wylene Heywoods. The Chanyata group of Home Park school held its meeting Tuesday in the woods. The Samuel Inman Camp Fire group is planning to give a special program for hospital No. 48, at Christmas time. At the meeting of the Sahdahhee Camp Fire group, the guardian, Miss Carswell, explained to the girls the Camp Fire health chart.

At a meeting of the Rock Spring P. T. A., Tuesday, it was decided to sponsor the Camp Fire group of the community with Miss Naomi Myers as guardian. Miss Mildred Cole spoke briefly of the work of the Camp Fire program. The Camp Fire Girls of Fair Street school held their last meeting at Grant park, where they learned to make the pyramid fire. Miss Essie Belle Brockman, guardian of the group, accompanied her girls.

LaGrange College News of Interest.

The Mezzofantian Literary society Wednesday night reproduced the Tech-Georgia game in the gymnasium. The game was preceded by a snake dance and night-shirt parade. Miss Martha McDaniel, Norcross, was sponsor of the Georgia team, with Miss Helen Walker, of Carrollton, as cheer leader; Miss Mildred Shepherd, Pomona, Fla., was Tech sponsor, with Miss Laura McWhorter, Royston, as cheer leader.

Monday evening the "Curtain Raisers" of the college presented three one-act plays: "My Lady Dreams," "Lima Beans" and "The Trysting Place." The casts were as follows: "My Lady Dreams," Miss Nelle Childs, director; Miss Laura McWhorter, the Lady; Miss Eva Claire Stafford, Marie, her maid; Miss Evelyn Powell, the little Old Lady; Miss Wilma Coleman, the other Woman; Miss Virginia Pugh and Miss Lillian Powell, two adorable children. "Lima Beans," Miss Hettie Dunn, director; Miss Myrtle Cannon, the Wife; Miss Sara Swanson, the Husband; Miss Josephine Terhune, the Huckster. "The Trysting Place," Miss Myrtle Cannon, director; Miss Laura Lifsey, Mrs. Curtis; Miss Elizabeth Halliday, Launcelot Briggs; Miss Carolyn Smith, Jessie Briggs; Miss Nelle Childs, Mrs. Briggs; Miss Frances Doughman, Rupert Smith; Miss Lois Parker, Mr. Ingoldsby; Miss Mildred Stipe, the voice.

The officers of the "Curtain Raisers" are: President, Miss Myrtle Cannon, Fitzgerald; vice president, Miss Josephine Terhune, Cedartown; secretary, Miss Sara Swanson, Fairburn; treasurer, Miss Lura Lifsey, Corlele, and advertisinfg manager, Miss Sara Swanson.

Miss Hallie Smith entertained the Latin club, Societas Minervae, Saturday afternoon. Miss Elizabeth Halliday won the contest of translating a list of Latin mottoes.

Arthur Thompson spoke to the Forum Saturday night on the primary system.

Miss Frances Woodside is in Atlanta for a tonsil operation.

A number of last year's graduates were at the college over the week-end: Miss Jewell Dunn, who is teaching in Langdale, Ala.; Miss Mildred Pendergass, who is teaching in East Point; Miss Mabel Morrow, who is teaching at Duluth, and Miss Edith Forster, who is teaching at Buena Vista.

News Notes From Brenau College.

Gainesville, Ga., December 4.—Dr. William E. Dodd, professor of American history at the University of Chicago, delivered an address in the Brenau auditorium Tuesday evening on "George Washington and His Critics." The lecture was given under the auspices of Phi Beta Sigma, honorary literary sorority.

On Sunday, the Y. W. C. A. vesper service was conducted by members of the junior class. The president, Miss Mary Helen Forrest, presided. Miss Emma Gene Baker sang, Miss Bertha Thalley gave a violin solo, and Miss Emily Thomas, accompanied by Miss Frances Chandler, read a musical selection.

Xi chapter of Delta Phi Epsilon, national sorority, was installed at Brenau by Miss Blume Badner, of Corona, N. Y., a member of the national council of the sorority. Those initiated were: Miss Sara Hecht, of Tampa, Fla.; Miss Hilda Feinberg, of Quincy, Fla.; Miss Jennie Goldberg, of Sylacauga, Ala.; Miss Minnie Cracowaner, of Tampa, Fla., and Miss Matilda Shapiro, of Gainesville, Ga. Following the service a delightful dinner was served. On Saturday evening the girls entertained Miss Badner with a dinner at the hotel, with Miss Bertha Todd, of the faculty, as a guest.

In the try-outs for hockey teams held recently the following were selected: Seniors, Misses Zella Mae Strickland, Bessye Allen, Maude Hudson, Verna Doring, Marjorie McElrath, Frances Chandler, Aleen Wolf, Alma Adams, Effie Arnett, Elizabeth Foil, Lola Bland Tompkins and Grace Hancock. Juniors, Mary Helen Forrest, Beulah Barto, Jerry Sledge, Louise Singleton, Gladys Rutherford, Florence Craig, Audrey Tatum, Edre Hess, Grace Scroggs and Martha Johnson. Sophomores, Frances Cuter, Carol Byrd, Ruth Matthews, Barbara Bancroft, Mary Wilson, Joyce Dickinson, Margaret Glasscock, Catherine Smith, Louise Harbour, Peggy Berry, Mat Shapiro, Katherine Williams, Helen Yerger, Lucille Wampler and Marion Cooper. Freshmen, Betty Little, Jo Green, Eunice Wetherhorn, Alberta Pierce, Jacque Snyder, Antoinette Kellum, Mary Murphy, Ophelia Strickland, Virginia Lynn, Sara Holmes, Maxine Frank and Jean Brunton. The freshmen and sophomore teams played Tuesday.

A recital was given by the junior department of Brenau conservatory Wednesday evening. Piano solos were played by Misses Mary Pilgrim, Eileen Starr Davis, Cecile Jones, Lucy Palmour, Carolyn Smith, Mildred Stanley, Katherine Hosch, Anne Hendricks, Pauline Saine, Gertrude Brown, Dorothy Chamblee, Margaret Logan, and Rosalind Tucker. Misses Lessie Simmons and Lucille Johnson gave vocal solos. Several songs were sung by a class of beginners including Elbertine Jones, Padgett Rudolph, Johnnie Pearce, Annie Jo Saine, Elizabeth Hulsey, Mildred Stanley, Jack Newman, Jim Newman and Sarah Catherine Jones.

The members of the Alpha Chi Omega fraternity were hostesses at a tea honoring Mrs. Ruth Bielby, national inspector of Alpha Gamma Delta. Miss Mary Jim Oliver received the guests who were shown to the club-room. The beautifully appointed tea table was presided over by Miss Jean Grace Salls and Miss Lois Gregg Secor.

Citizenship Group To Meet Wednesday For Informal Study

The American citizenship committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will meet Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the clubhouse, Mrs. J. P. Billups, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, who is conducting the classes in citizenship training, will take up lessons two and three at that time, "Citizenship and the State" and "Departments of Government," respectively, and some one vital and pressing present-day problem will be discussed by one qualified to handle the subject, followed by a general discussion in which the whole class will participate.

These classes are informal and are open to all members of the club free. It has no personal or political significance whatever, being a purely cultural feature, a class of intelligent, thinking women grouped together in order to study the machinery of government in operation.

Mrs. Billups urges that every member of the club identify herself with this department and hear Mrs. R. L. Turman tell what the word citizenship means. There is much to be gained from these lessons and she would like to communicate with all who are interested in the subject, whether club members or not. Outsiders may become members of the committee by paying a small entrance fee.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, wife of Georgia's distinguished governor, is Mrs. Billups' advisory chairman; Mrs. R. L. Turman is chairman of citizenship training and teacher of class; Mrs. J. D. Evans, whose work has attracted wide attention, is chairman of Americanization; Mrs. E. H. Barnes, of cooperation and war veterans; Mrs. Luther E. Allen, secretary; Mrs. George L. Turner, treasurer and publicity chairman; Mrs. W. H. Smaw, telephone chairman, and Mrs. Earl Scott, chairman of membership. Other members of the committee include Mrs. R. L. Beddingfield, Mrs. Woodford Robin, Mrs. John F. Boyd, Mrs. Peter Bogart, Mrs. G. L. Wentworth, Mrs. Don Lawless, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, Mrs. W. A. Antilotti, Mrs. Claudia H. Wood, Mrs. Maude T. Baker, Mrs. A. G. Helmer, Mrs. E. S. Harrold, Mrs. M. B. Farnham, Mrs. Max Goldstein, Mrs. Charles F. Whitner, Mrs. J. Bonar White, Mrs. C. W. Freeman, Mrs. H. E. Stockbridge, Mrs. W. L. Randall, Mrs. C. A. Wallace, Mrs. H. G. McMillan, Mrs. W. A. Parker, Mrs. H. E. Jessup, Mrs. Frances B. Chase, Mrs. O. A. Sharplett, Mrs. W. A. Rapp and Mrs. W. F. Dunbar.

Mrs. Wing Thanks Bazar Chairmen.

Owing to the fact that the next regular meeting of the American home department of the Atlanta Woman's club does not take place until December 15, Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman, takes this opportunity to thank all of the members of the department and of the club for assisting in making the department's booth at the recent bazar a success.

Especially to the chairman of the bazar, Mrs. R. I. Reed, and her co-chairman, Mrs. H. E. Jessup, does the department feel indebted for their untiring service. Assisting also were Mrs. Charles C. Harding, chairman of the Atlanta Woman's Club cook book, whose cook-book sales helped to make the department's sales the largest of all the booths, and Mrs. Ira Farmer, divisional chairman of the department, through whom the firm of M. Rich & Bros. company offered to decorate the booth in the rich harvest colorings which secured honorable mention. With the exception of the firms of Henard and the American Bakeries, who volunteered donations of mayonnaise and of cake, the gifts for the booth were contributed by members of the department and of the club, 30 in number.

Others who assisted on the bazar committee were Mrs. Ada Wood, Mrs. C. R. Pyburn, Mrs. Calvin Stanford, Mrs. A. Allaire, Mrs. P. C. Fabel, Mrs. John G. Courtney, Mrs. William Carder, Mrs. John Perdue and Mrs. Newton C. Wing, to whom also is due the appreciation of the entire department. The members also wish to thank Mrs. Hornady and Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith for assistance in making the operation of the booth a pleasure.

Gifted Children Will Appear With Railroad Band Concert

The above pictures present, from left to right, Chester Wickersham Kitchings and little Tootsie Dunbar, a pair of gifted artists who will appear in an attractive feature in connection with the concert given by the bands of the Atlanta & West Point and Georgia railway Saturday afternoon, December 11, at 2 o'clock in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Outstanding among the important events of the week. Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces a concert at the club auditorium, Saturday afternoon, December 11, at 2 o'clock. The music of this concert will be furnished by the bands of the Atlanta and West Point and Georgia railroads, which was secured for the occasion by J. P. Billups, general passenger agent. The combined membership of these two bands is more than 100, and the Atlanta & West Point band is unique in having the first woman drum major, in the south, Miss Margaret Paulin. The Georgia Railroad band is recognized as one of the leading musical organizations in the entire section, and has given many notable concerts.

Attractive Features.

In addition to the music, there will be several attractive features by little Miss Tootsie Dunbar, a winner of many Charleston championships, and Chester Wickersham Kitchings, who made such a hit with O'Brien minstrels, by his clever dances and songs. Little Miss Dunbar is a daughter of Mr. F. M. Dunbar, of the Atlanta & West Point railroad, and Chester Wickersham Kitchings, is a grandson of Charles A. Wickersham, the beloved president and manager of both railroads.

The band of the Atlanta and West Point railroad numbers many baseball fans among its friends, as the year the Atlanta Crackers won the Southeastern pennant, that band accompanied them on the memorable trip to Fort Worth, Texas, where they played the Dixie series. Through the courtesy of the management of the Atlanta & West Point railroad, the bands give their services without any expense whatever to the club. While the concert is under the auspices of the club, it is open to the general public, and those who enjoy the stirring marches of Philip Sousa, and selections from Victor Herbert, and other notable composers, are urged to come and take advantage of this unusual opportunity.

Sponsoring Concert.

The concert will be sponsored by the citizenship department, Mrs. J. P. Billups, chairman, who will be assisted by the divisional chairmen, Mrs. Clifford Walker, Mrs. R. L. Turman, Mrs. J. D. Evans, Mrs. E. H. Barnes, and the members of the department.

Tickets are for sale at the club, the Cable Piano company and Penelope Penn, at Rich's. Adults 50c and children 25c.

Art Department To Meet Tuesday.

The art department of the Atlanta Woman's club will hold a meeting at the club Tuesday, December 7, at which meeting an informal "round-table" discussion will be entered into by the following three of America's satilites of the art world: Robert Henri, noted for his vivid and strong character portrayal; George Bellows, who began the study of art under the direction of Henri.

This sympathetic association was close up to the time of his early death at the age of 42 in 1924, when it was truly said that "in losing Bellows, American art of today has lost one of its strongest vital forces, "for he was one of the most authentic answers to the call for a native art. Van Dearing Perrine, whose wonderful studies of color and movement are arousing much interest and favorable comment in high art.

Mrs. Newcomer Honors Mrs. V. M. Graham.

Mrs. Flo Newcomer entertained at a party in her apartment on Peachtree street in honor of Mrs. V. M. Graham, of South Carolina.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Connally, Mr. and Mrs. William Ellicitt, Mrs. W. H. Cranword, Miss Marion Barr, Miss Guess, Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Newcomer.

Executive Board Holds Meeting.

The executive board of the Woman's auxiliary of Wesley Memorial hospital met Thursday morning at Wesley Memorial church, Mrs. Plato Durham, president, presiding. Mrs. J. L. Dennis, pantry shower chairman, reported a generous shower for the pantry at the shower given in November. Mrs. W. H. Lawson, Jr., was introduced as the new chairman for linens, and Mrs. R. Bryce, co-chairman.

The annual luncheon for representatives of the north and south Atlanta districts, which is the outstanding event for the near future, will be given in January, 1927. Mrs. J. D. Hatchett, chairman for south Atlanta, assisted by the executive board, will act as hostesses for the luncheon.

Fifth District Rally At West End.

A delightful program has been arranged for the rally of the fifth district B. W. M. U., to be held at the West End Baptist church on Tuesday, December 7, from 10 to 12 o'clock a. m. Hymns and prayers will be interspersed by reports from the eight churches of this district; a devotional by Mrs. B. E. Jones, of College Park; piano solo by Miss Florence McDaniel, reading and solo by Miss Dorothy Seay and Miss Lucile Clark and a question box.

ROCKFORD college, the "Vassar of the West," has only one southern girl enrolled on its roster, in Miss Florence Eckford, referred to as the girl who put Dixie on the map in a college combining all the advantages of a mid-west university and the privileges of an eastern finishing school.

Its close proximity to Chicago has afforded Miss Eckford many advantageous opportunities to hear grand opera and attend musical treats, such as the Paul Ashe concert given last Sunday in order that professionals might have a chance to hear the wonderful orchestra.

The leadership of Miss Eckford was quickly recognized in her immediate election as a class officer and her appointment on a committee of five to write and present the freshman play, an annual event of much precedence.

Ten days only are allotted to this feat, and although invited to take the starring role, she preferred to direct the play. The plaudits of the audience brought her forward to accept curtain calls and flowers just like a grand opera star.

The Army-Navy football game in Chicago proved an irresistible magnet to Miss Eckford and her intimate friend, Ruth Burpee, a popular society girl of Rockford, who were guests of the former's brother, Burgess West, of Atlanta.

Long distance telephone calls from Atlanta and Texas beaux keep her in close touch with her friends below the Mason and Dixon line, and her arrival in Atlanta on December 18, is anticipated with tender interest.

HAD SHE been confronted with the three golden apples of history, she could not have been more sorely tempted!

In fact, she told us so!

The story revolves around the November visit of a devoted admirer from another state. His devotion in this instance assumed the proportions of three gorgeous rings, one a square-cut diamond and the other two marquis stones of perfect cut and luster. From the magnificent array she was to choose one for the fourth finger of her left hand, as a symbol of the engagement which existed, it seems, only in the mind of the devoted admirer.

Do you wonder that she experienced great difficulty in returning each ring to its small, satinlined box—in the face of so much temptation.

THE SCINTILLATING presence of one Atlanta belle will shortly be missed from society's ranks, for on December 10 Miss Anne Spalding, lovely young daughter of the William F. Spaldings, will leave for Washington, D. C., to add interest and luster to the doings of the smart younger set in the national capital.

Miss Spalding goes to visit Miss Adelaide Douglas and to attend the brilliant reception and ball at which Miss Douglas will be presented to Washington society Saturday, December 11, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Blair Douglas.

This lovely debutante, affectionately known as "Peggy" to her intimate coterie of friends, is well known in Atlanta, where she has often visited as the guest of Miss Spalding and of her cousin, Miss Nancy Sarr, at "Pine Hill."

Her debut will be made at the fashionable Wardman Park hotel, where she resides with her family, and one can readily understand how she will slip into her rightful place in Washington's most exclusive ranks.

ERE ANOTHER Sunday rolls around the engagement will be announced of a very high-born girl who has been engaged in a business career for several years.

Her fiance comes from Virginia, the same state in which the bride-elect first opened her eyes, but their marriage in February will not remove them from their adopted home. Instead, they will move into their newly bought residence on the north side of Atlanta, the gift the sensible bride-elect has chosen in lieu of a handsome engagement ring. It will be furnished by the prospective benedict and ready for occupancy when the young couple return from a Florida wedding journey.

An older sister who reared the bride-to-be, whose mother passed into the great beyond when she was five months old, will make the announcement, give her in marriage and act as her maid of honor. Two married sisters will be attendants at the wedding which will be a high noon ceremony at All Saints' Episcopal church.

An invitation to this event will be sent across the Atlantic to the cousin in England, Lady Astor, who is directly related to the families of this February bride-elect.

STUNNING Mrs. Howard Tucker came down from Washington, D. C., last Tuesday to receive the fortune left in trust by her father, the late James McKeldin, of Atlanta.

His will provided that upon her 21st birthday his daughter be presented with her inheritance, the confirmation of this official act taking place with proper ceremony, in the presence of her mother, Mrs. Leigh Palmour, of New York. Afterwards, as buffet luncheon guests of the Mesdames Floyd McRae, mother and daughter made a stunning appearance wearing black velvet gowns and close-fitting hats. Mrs. Tucker wore orchids on her shoulder, and pale violets, those exquisite flowers which have returned to favor with the fair sex adorned the black coat she donned upon leaving the party.

A motor trip to Newnan along the 39 mile concrete boulevard climaxed the day's festivities to enjoy a birthday dinner in Mrs. Harvey North's home, aunt of the visitor from the national capital, who is remaining over to spend a week with her maternal relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Draper on Cherokee road.

SINCE her return from Europe, Mrs. Lee Ashcraft has added another gift to the inimitable array of talents which have rendered her one of Atlanta's most charming matrons. It is that of fascinating and interesting raconteur, each of her stories bearing a delectable bit of humor. At each tea, luncheon or dinner party where this widely traveled Atlantan was a guest, she has been besieged by her innumerable friends for narratives of her recent journey. The writer listened with interest to the vivid description by Mrs. Ashcraft of Micky, the wholesome, gay spirited college boy, who with a number of classmates, was chauffeuring Americans touring Europe, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Ashcraft and their popular daughter, Rebecca.

Micky was the very life of the party and his keen wit combined with a characteristic of dependability as a driver and guide, added double pleasure to the occupants of his motor. "The traffic laws were different in every country," stated Mrs. Ashcraft, "and invariably Micky would drive to the right side of the roadway when the laws demanded the left."

Only the affable, courteous and appealing personality of this natural, whole hearted American youth saved the situation, when the tourists were accosted by the stern foreign officers of the law.

Micky also proved himself a valuable chaperone to the younger American tourists. The trip to Deauville, to spend an evening at the magnificent Casino at this fashionable watering place, near Paris, made by Miss Ashcraft and a party of friends, pressed Micky into service as chaperon.

A profound respect for his promise to Mr. and Mrs. Ashcraft to guard the young travelers by remaining within their presence each moment gained for Micky the honor of being the only man ever to enter the fashionable Casino without wearing a dress suit. Following close behind his proteges, who were wearing their gorgeous Parisian evening clothes, Micky was denied entrance by the all superior door man. Then and there Micky delivered his ultimatum in the following words: "Alright, if I can't get in without evening clothes the whole bunch stays out."

It proved too much for the concierge to lose the patronage of this group of American belles and their beaux. So Micky, sans dress suit graced the exclusive and luxurous Casino.

THEY were entertaining at bridge, this charming bride of a few months and her handsome, gifted husband—not an elaborate occasion, but just a few close friends invited in on a disagreeable winter evening, peculiarly adapted to an intimate game of cards.

At the close of the game the hostess rose and repaired to the shining kitchenette of her cozy apartment, preparatory to heating some chocolate which was to accompany a tray of tempting sandwiches. Earlier in the evening the cook had prepared the chocolate, making it just ready to add the milk, heat and serve. In her haste to get back to her guests, she, who had not yet become inured to the duties of housekeeping, seized the first bottle of milk at hand and, shades of Ganymede, she had poured buttermilk into the chocolate.

But how could one expect so young a bride, with a charming apartment and a prominent architect husband to look after, to know the difference between buttermilk and sweet milk when the liquid comes in bottles just exactly alike?

PARENTAL objection directed against their daughters attending a noisy party so aroused the displeasure of a couple of young Atlanta girls that they packed their trunks, entrained for New York, declaring they have shaken the dust of Atlanta from their feet forever.

After buying railroad tickets to the metropolis, the small sum of $50 was left to finance their expenses in their new adventure. The sum was not of sufficient size to last many days, nor to keep them in the state of luxury to which they had been accustomed in their Atlanta homes.

In letters written back to intimate friends these modern-day girls, who aren't afraid of any undertaking in the business world, invite their former running mates to visit a certain large and prominent New York department store in which they are employed.

ATLANTA had representation at the National Horse Show recently held in New York in Madison Square Garden, when Mrs. Carl Ramspect rode "Flowing Gold" and "My Lady Minton," winning ribbons for Frank Adair, riding "Flowing Gold" and "My Lady Minton." The most spectacular of the exhibits was the famous Gray horse battery brought from Fort Myer, Va., to thrill New York with its complicated maneuverings and perfectly matched animals. In direct contrast was the parade of draught horses and working vehicles.

The one-man gig in which Thomas Jefferson made his six-day journey from Monticello in Virginia to Philadelphia for the drafting of the constitution was an interesting exhibit.

The coach body was made of walnut and was ornamented in silver. Both timber and silver withstood a century of neglect in an unused carriage house at Monticello until discovered and remounted by Thomas Jefferson Randolph, a great-great-grandson of Thomas Jefferson, and displayed at the sesqui-centennial.

FREDERICK WARD was perhaps the most distinguished visitor in the city last week en route to Los Angeles, Cal., where nine years ago he played the leading part in the mission play presented annually during the winter season. He played the part of the Padre in the story which treats of the history of California missions since their inception several centuries ago. Three years ago he retired from the stage but continues to lecture, being sought after by the leading colleges, particularly for dramatic clubs and Shakespearean class. In one of his lectures he has for his theme health, work and love and dwells on these subjects, considering them the three most important things of life.

In the Willshire Boulevard Congregational church of Los Angeles a stained glass window has been erected to Frederick Warde as a merited tribute. He is probably the only actor in the world to have such an honor bestowed upon him by a church. The handsome glass has a full figure of him in a Shakespearean costume. Recently he had conferred upon him by the University of Southern California the degree of doctor of literature. He was also made a member of the Woman's Press club of California last year.

He is a great philosopher, always looking on the bright side of everything and stretching out a helping hand to many struggling young actors. He still possesses that great charm which always held his audiences and his tone of voice is as magnetic as ever.

Prohibition Is Best

BY MRS. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

One of the current misconceptions concerning prohibition has to do with the situation in Norway where the people have just voted out "prohibition," according to newspaper headlines, and substituted government control of the liquor traffic. The opponents of American prohibition believe they see in Norway an object lesson for the United States, and are vociferously urging the new Scandinavian national policy as a model for our own.

The truth is that Norway never had prohibition. Their law, which the people have just retired, prohibited the sale of liquor with more than 21 per cent alcohol.

To the clear thinker, Norway's experience proves the correctness of the statement of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union that: "Prohibition is the best method of dealing with the liquor traffic." Not the Norwegian brand of prohibition, but the United States' eighteenth amendment kind.

Constitutional prohibition was not put over on the American people—it was put over by the American people—a majority of whom are heartily in favor of doing away with alcoholic liquor and the train of evils always present wherever there is drink.

Norwegian drinkers, like American drinkers, are not to be satisfied with 2.70 beer or 21 per cent "light" wine. What they want is hard liquor. In America the wet contingent does not admit this (openly).

Many Americans know that the present American prosperity is largely due to the efficiency and productivity of Americans who have quit drinking. And the recent elections, resulting in a national congress three-fourths dry, show that the majority of voters in the United States believe, also, that prohibition is the best method yet found to solve the liquor problem and that this country will never repeal the eighteenth amendment.

OBSERVE TODAY AS GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY.

The W. C. T. U. is again asked to stand by the Near East Relief in the observance today, the international Golden Rule Sunday, by both the national W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta.

Members are asked to contrast their blessings with those of the unfortunate children of Bible lands and to help make as adequate provision for them as they would like to have made for themselves if conditions were reversed.

Members are asked to eat the simplest midday meal possible—just such a meal as the orphans eat every day—and give the difference in money between that and the full meal usually served on Sunday to the Near East Relief through the local W. C. T. U. treasurer.

Mrs. Boole says: "The observance of Golden Rule Sunday does not interfere with any other benevolence. The reflex influence of a self-denial upon parents and children is good. The giving up of something personal to help a child who would have to go without, and to eat one day in the year the kind of food that child has every day in the year, brings with it a real blessing. The cheerful cooperation of the entire family will be necessary, but that can be secured."

"Be grateful you're living
To help others by giving."

STATE PRESIDENT IN SIXTH DISTRICT.

The recently elected president of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, and the new vice president, Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman, held an important session Thursday at the state headquarters in Macon with the executive committee of the sixth district, the district officers and the presidents of seven local unions in the district and some others were in attendance.

The session, which was marked throughout by optimism and determination in regard to its efforts for prohibition, began at 11 o'clock and continued until 3:30 with an intermission for lunch at the Tip Top Tea Shop.

Plans to make a complete success of the annual roll call of the Georgia W. C. T. U., which is to be inaugurated early in the new year, were decided upon for the district.

Each local union will select one day between January 6 and 12 on which to give every member an opportunity to answer "here" with her annual dollar dues.

Judging by the enthusiasm manifested by the leaders, the sixth district will give a 100 per cent response. The roll call is not to be a campaign but just a one-day affair conducted by numerous workers—numerous, in Macon, at least, where the membership runs up into hundreds.

The plan also calls for cooperation with the national W. C. T. U. in a prayer service on January 6, when 20,000 local unions in the United States will meet for "earnest prayer for God's blessing on the temperance cause, upon our leaders that they b given wisdom in meeting the strategy of our opponents and that those charged with the responsibility for making law and enforcing it may be given courage and wisdom to the end that our great country may receive full benefit from prohibition as provided in the eighteenth amendment."

The prayer service and the victory meeting on January 16, which will be public in celebration of the anniversary of national constitutional prohibition, were emphasized by Mrs. Williams.

Some other lines of work to be carried on during the new year are special efforts in the departments of Christian citizenship, medical temperance, scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, publicity and work with the children in Loyal Temperance Legions.

In addition to Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Smith, those present were Mrs. D. A. Warlick, Macon, president of the sixth district W. C. T. U.; Miss Julia Goodall, secretary; Mrs. August Burghard, editor of The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin; Miss Ruby Rivers, headquarters secretary; Mrs. J. L. Lyons, of Jackson; Mrs. Hugh Hardin and Mrs. Fred Stokes, Forsyth; Mrs. Mary F. Stewart and Mrs. Belle Wooten, Haddock; Mrs. J. F. Davis, Gray; Mrs. Wilbur Brown, Griffin; Mrs. F. C. Hardy and Mrs. C. W. Schaefer, Macon.

The next district meeting will be held at Forsyth.

ACTIVITIES IN CANTON W. C. T. U.

"Canton union will observe Golden Rule Sunday for the benefit of orphans of the Near East," writes Mrs. B. W. Chandler, the publicity director of that union.

"We are justly proud of Paul Jones, Jr., of Canton, who won the state prize for the best essay on 'Harmful Effects of Cigarettes.' Hundreds and hundreds of essays were written by pupils in schools over the state.

"A report of the Gainesville convention was made at the W. C. T. U. meeting at the home of Mrs. Olin Fincher by Mrs. John Epperson and Mrs. A. P. Bobo. Mrs. B. W. Chandler spoke on 'New York's Little Joke on New York,' Miss Ollie McClure discussed 'Education of Children of Near East.' Music was furnished by Mrs. W. W. Fincher and Mrs. Max Crisler."

W. C. T. U. POSTER PRIZE WINNERS.

Miss Sarah Anne Wright, of Elberton, announces the winners of state prizes in posters on alcohol or tobacco as follows:

College prize awarded to Miss Caroline Hutt, of Bessie Tift college; honorable mention, Miss Linda Cornwall, Bessie Tift college.

Seventh and eighth grade winners, Samielle Smith, Winder; honorable mention, Hazel Brown, Atlanta.

Fifth and sixth grade winners, Gerald White, Canton; honorable mention, Howard Dunn, East Point.

Miss Wright, the state director of scentific temperance instruction and anti-narcotics, asks that names of directors in these departments in local unions be sent to her right away, so that she can send them the plan of work and literature as early as possible.

West End Civic Club To Hear Mr. Sutton Next Wednesday

Willis Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, will address the members of the Civic Club of West End at the meeting to be held Wednesday afternoon, December 8, at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse, with Mrs. Edward H. Smith, president, presiding.

Mr. Sutton will pay tribute to Joel Chandler Harris, beloved "Uncle Remus," whose birthday is December 9.

Another interesting feature on the program will be a dramatic reading by Miss Minora Conaly, a very young artist and a recent graduate of Sullins college.

Mrs. C. C. Shipley, house chairman, will sponsor a benefit bridge Wednesday afternoon, December 15, at 2:30 o'clock, at the clubhouse. Refreshments will be served and a number of beautiful prizes have been donated. Tables are $2. For reservations, call Mrs. Shipley, West 1226-W, or Mrs Floyd Cox, West 2419-W.

The Blue Birds, with Mrs. J. B Carter as chairman, met Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse. This group has done remarkable work with the junior organization of the needlework guild, and their handwerk is on display all this week at the North Avenue Presbyterian churchhouse.

Woman's Union Bible Club To Meet Thursday.

The Woman's Union Bible club is now studying the prophecy of Daniel, under Mrs. T. R. Kendall, teacher. This club is undenominational and meets every Thursday at 10 o'clock, at Wesley Memorial church. All women and girls are cordially invited.

Morning Musicale Is Presented At The Seminary

A most creditable morning musicale was given at Washington seminary Thursday after chapel in the school auditorium. From very young performers to those much more experienced in playing in public, all were heard with pleasurable interest. Those playing piano numbers were Joan Root, May Gray, Martha Burnett, Catherine Gray, Frances Langworthy, May Birnie Alston, Elizabeth Whitten, Epsie Dallis, Octavia Riley, Frances Maiden, Elizabeth Clarke, Bessie Mercer, Lucy Furman, Grace Griggs, Elizabeth Potter, Lillie Pace and Louise Moore.

Those heard in vocal numbers were Mary Hayes, Ruth Moore, Juliana Brooks and Shirley Carlin.

At the close of the recital Mrs. Green Warren presented the tennis trophies won in a recent tournament. Mary Ann Carr was presented a loving cup for singles in the junior tennis matches. In senior singles Mary Frances Mather won and in doubles the "Mather Twins," Mary Frances and Jenny Lind, bore off a handsome loving cup.

The first number of "Misemma" was issued just before the Thanksgiving holiday. All grades and departments of the school are represented in the work of each number making it a magazine of the entire student body. Not only the students, but the faculty feel justly proud of its appearance and subject matter.

The seniors have met each Monday afternoon for several weeks to sew for their bazar which was held Friday, December 3, at the home of their president, Catherine Norcross. They must have felt repaid as it was a financial success as well as a delightful afternoon socially.

O.E.S. Grand Matron Is Honor Guest At Lovely Banquet

Mrs. J. E. McElroy, worthy grand matron of Order of the Eastern Star of Georgia, was the honor guest of the Worthy Matrons' club and the Eastern Stars of Atlanta at a banquet at the Hotel Ansley Wednesday evening. The invocation was given by Dr. S. R. Belk, after which Mrs. J. A. Cape, president of 1926 Worthy Grand Matrons' club, extended greetings to all present. J. G. Valentino, of Savannah, worthy grand patron was toastmaster. Rev. Charles L. Bass, past grand master of Masons of the state of Georgia, delivered a Masonic message and spoke of the relationship of the O. E. S. and Masonic fraternities in their service to others.

Mrs. Munger Writes From Philippines.

In a letter received lately from Mrs. Henry Munger, San Jose, Antique, P. I., dated October 6, 1926, she says among other things, "Our field comprises Antique province, and the southern part of the Itilo province. We have no Baptist church in this whole territory, comprising 300,000 souls. Of this number there are perhaps nearly 4,000 who became Protestants during the time when this field was occupied by the Presbyterians (until 1925.) Mr. Munger and I are the first Baptist missionaries to be assigned to this territory, and the only ones so far. This work is under the northern Baptist board.

"This is the capital city. Since there is no Baptist organization here, and only the two of us, the task is not easy, but God is our helper. We have a service in our 'sala' every Sunday afternoon. We are 70 miles from any other Americans, and roads are hazardous during the rainy season, but we are rejoicing that two of our missionaries are coming to spend Sunday with us.

"Please give my dearest love to the Georgia friends."

Mrs. Munger was formerly Miss Laura Lee Patrick, corresponding secretary-treasurer for the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia.

Cooking School and Bazar Features Hapeville Club Program

Arrangements for a five-day cooking school and bazar, to close with a silver tea and exhibit of articles made by the class in interior decoration, was the interesting report of the American homes department of the Hapeville Woman's club, at the regular business meeting of the club, held Thursday afternoon, December 2, at the home of Mrs. D. B. Evans.

Mr. H. A. Allen, chairman of the committee, announces Mrs. A. P. Boardman as instructor, and that classes will be held at the Hapeville auditorium from 10 to 12 o'clock, commencing Monday, December 6, and continuing five days. Useful souvenirs will be given daily and handsome prizes awarded for the most attractive, well-balanced and economical Christmas menu and for the best home-made cake. The cakes will be sold at the bazar after the decision is made. One of the prizes will be a handsome embossed Christmas cake, made and donated by Mrs. Boardman. Tickets for the entire course are 50 cents and classes are open to the public. Those desiring to take advantage may do so by calling a club member.

The bazar will be held at the auditorium on the same days and will be in operation afternoons, as well as before and after cooking classes mornings. Contributions of all kinds are solicited.

The hospital committee, Mrs. J. H. Hodges chairman, will serve sandwiches and fruit punch for the benefit of her committee. The silver tea and exhibition of articles made by the class in interior decorations, which has been in progress at the home of Mrs. Allen for several weeks, will be at the auditorium at the close of this course, Friday, December 10. These classes are conducted by Mrs. Vera Ernest, who is a member of the faculty of the Atlanta Opportunity school.

Mrs. Fred E. Johnson, president, suggested that the club arrange for a community Christmas program, and that all churches and other organizations in Hapeville be invited to participate. Mrs. Johnson will act as chairman of the committee in charge of this function.

Mrs. Johnson invited young matrons of the club, between the ages of 20 and 30, and any of their friends to a tea at her home Tuesday afternoon, December 7, at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Walter B. Stewart, chairman of the Hapeville division of the National Dixie Highway auxiliary, plans a mass meeting of all property holders on the highway, from the Clayton county line to Atlanta, Friday evening, December 10, at 7:30 o'clock, at the Hapeville auditorium, to discuss ways and means for beautifying the highway. The Woman's club will sponsor this movement and members, whether living on the highway or not, and others interested, are requested to attend. There will be music and prominent speakers and a round-table discussion of the kind of trees that will be planted.

St. Paul W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary Society of St. Paul Church held a combined mission study and special service program at the church Monday afternoon, Mrs. J. E. Andrews, chairman of the social service committee, in charge. The meeting was opened with a song and prayer.

The second chapter of the mission study book, "Our Tempted Hills," was presented by Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, Mrs. T. H. Nelson, Mrs. J. H. Austin, Mrs. Allen Tison, Miss Gladys McWilliams, Mrs. W. R. Allgood, Mrs. H. H. Nelson and Mrs. T. P. White.

Mrs. J. E. Andrews gave a good report and very interesting talk of her work, and stressed the need of trained leadership.

Mrs. M. C. Taurman told briefly of her visit to the state sanitarium at Milledgeville.

"If Jesus Goes With Me" was sung, and Mrs. R. D. Crowe dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Lay these Gifts at Her Feet

—You may not know her size,

—You may not know her style preference,

—You may not know her color choice,

But you can select her gift at Nisley's with the assurance that if it is not exactly the size, color or style she desires we will exchange it for the correct size, color and style, or for anything in our store.

Brilliant Buckles for Her Slippers

Imported direct from Paris, Nisley Buckles are in a distinct class by themselves. Rich, sparkling jewels that add a touch of exquisite beauty to the plainest or most ornate slipper. "We are co-laborers together with God."—I. Cor. 3:9.

"I Am Alpha And Omega."

"In the beginning God—" Genesis 1:1.

"I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." Revelations 22:13.

From the first chapter of the Book of Genesis to the last chapter of the Book of the Revelation, may be found the progressive self-revelation of God to His children here on earth. Throughout the 66 books which constitute the Holy Bible is depicted that relationship which must exist between man and his Creator in order that sinful, fallen humanity, clothed in the garments of righteousness, through the putting on of Jesus Christ, may find its way back to the Father's House.

It was the great law-giver Moses, leader of his people out of their captivity and bondage, who in Genesis, that book of "beginnings," portrayed in all its pristine beauty the garden of innocence—the Eden of man's first estate.

To the apostle John, embodiment of gentleness and exemplar of the teaching that "Love is the fulfilling of the law," it was given to behold that glory scene so wondrously described in Revelation, chapters 21 and 22, as the paradise of God. He it was who saw coming down out of Heaven that holy city, the New Jerusalem, and heard a great voice saying: "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men and He will dwell with them and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them and be their God."

In this picture the shadow of sin which had fallen upon Eden has been lifted. The tree of life, described in Genesis as being guarded by the Cherubims with flaming sword, lest the guilty ones might take, eat and live forever in a sinful state, becomes in Revelation the tree whose leaves are for the healing of the nations.

That river which "went out of Eden to water the garden" may be recognized in symbol as the "pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the theme of God and of the lamb." This is the same river as was seen by the prophet Ezekial, 47:1-12, and by the prophet Zechariah, 14:8.

By their yielding to "the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life," our first parents were overtaken by all the consequences of sin, inclusive of death. But in the new heaven and the new earth, as we are told in Revelation 21:4, there shall be no more death.

With the first transgression of divine law which resulted in eviction from God's presence, He in His tender compassion, defined the cure; for, in Genesis 3:15 one finds the first promise of a Redeemer who, in the fullness of time, came to die that men might have eternal life and which promise will have its complete fulfillment as set forth in Revelation 22:20.

Because of this primal sin the ground was cursed. It brought forth thorns as well as other hurtful things as we are told in Genesis 3:17, and He who took upon Himself the sins of the world, submitted to the crown of thorns. Revelation 22:3 tells us that when the former things have passed away and all is made new there shall be no more curse.

The same Jesus who put Himself under the law, who went to the cruel cross and bore upon His sacred brow the crown of thorns, is He who had on "his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lords." He whom St. John in his beatific vision heard to say: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." Revelation 1:8.

Honor Eight and Eight Club.

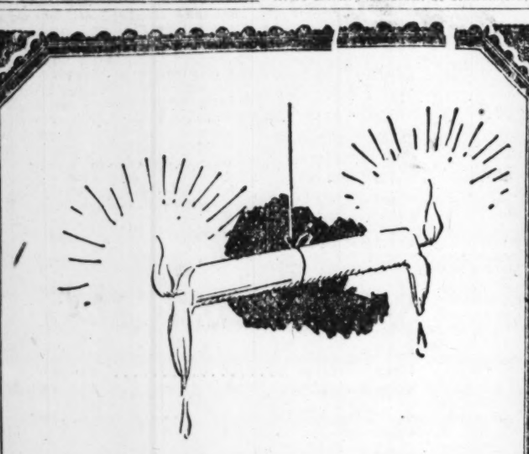

One of the most enjoyable events of the week was the delightful bridge party given on Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grafe at their home in Oakhurst in compliment to the members of the Eight-and-Eight club. Score pads and tally cards of a novelty Japanese design were used and vases of chrysanthemums and fall flowers were artistically placed in the reception rooms as decorations.

After the bridge game a salad course was served at the individual tables.

Attractive prizes were presented to Mrs. J. H. Atwell, top score; Mrs. William Low, consolation, and Howard Turner, the club prize.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Hale Almand, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Lauden Coats, Mr. and Mrs. William Low, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Withers, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Atwell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grafe, little Jane Ruth Withers and little Billie Low. Special guests of the hostess were Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Dueber, little Suzanne Dueber, Atlanta; Mrs. Luther B. Melton and little Dickey Melton, of Lancaster, Pa.

Briefly Told

The nominating committee appointed by the Federated Church Women of Georgia at the quarterly meeting on Saturday is composed of the following women: Mrs. Frank Woodruff, chairman; Mrs. H. C. Philips, Mrs. J. C. White and Mrs. Harvey Clark. Officers will be elected on January 15.

Mrs. E. W. Brogdon, of Atlanta, spent several days in the Augusta district this week in the interest of the Bennett Memorial building of Scarritt college, meeting three groups of Methodist women in different parts of the district.

When the south-wide Baptist W. M. U. realized that their official force of workers must be increased, Georgia felt distinctly honored when both of the field workers chosen were from Georgia W. M. U.'s official family, viz.: Mrs. Taul B. White, of Rome, and Mrs. R. K. Redwine, of Atlanta.

During the season, Mrs. Taul White represented Southern W. M. U. at the state W. M. U. assemblies in Maryland and in Virginia.

Mrs. R. K. Redwine has recently returned from Oklahoma City, where she represented the Southern W. M. U. at the Oklahoma State W. M. U. convention.

Atlanta was honored during the past week by the coming of Mrs. Carter Wright, president of Alabama W. M. U., to address the Atlanta W. M. U. at the First Baptist church and the Business and Professional Women of the First Baptist church.

The passing of Mrs. C. W. King, for years a prominent and beloved member of Capitol Avenue Baptist church of Atlanta, has brought sorrow to many devoted friends. Before loss of health and return to her former home in Kentucky, Mrs. King was the superintendent of W. M. U. of Atlanta and member of the executive board of the State W. M. U. No woman in Baptist circles in Atlanta has ever held a higher place in the hearts of her coworkers.

The many friends throughout Georgia of Mrs. H. W. Munger, formerly Miss Laura Lee Patrick, will be glad to know something of the mission work of Mr. and Mrs. Munger in the Philippines, as reported on this page by Mrs. George Westmoreland, who was one of her beloved colaborers during Miss Patrick's residence in Atlanta.

All ladies of the Fifth District Baptist W. M. U. are cordially invited to attend the annual rally to be held at the West End Baptist church Tuesday morning, December 7, from 10 to 12 o'clock.

An interesting all-day mission study class at the West End Baptist church on Monday, November 29, "Stewardship of Life," was taught by Mrs. J. D. Zachry, stewardship chairman of Atlanta association.

The friends of Dr. and Mrs. W. Harvey Clark will be interested to know that their son, Harvey, Jr., has recently returned from Japan, where he went as as buyer for the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuRose company. Many beautiful oriental goods which he has on display will be of keen interest to students of oriental missions.

Miss Josephine Daniel, senior at Woodbury Hall, has been honored by being elected president of the student body. She is a member of the West End Baptist church.

"Moslem Women" was the book taught by Mrs. W. Harvey Clark on Monday, November 22, at Oakland City Baptist church to a class of over 20 women.

The Seventh District of B. W. M. U. of the Atlanta Baptist association, will hold its annual rally with the Grant Park Baptist church on Friday, December 10, from 10 to 12 o'clock. A large delegation from each church in the district is urged to be present and any interested in this phase of kingdom work will be cordially welcomed. An interesting program has been arranged by the district secretary, Mrs. S. P. Paschal.

Mrs. Allen Cutts will be the speaker at the regular monthly program meeting of the W. M. S. of the Second Baptist church on Monday, December 6, at 3 o'clock at the church. Mrs. Cutts, who is the wife of Dr. Cutts, of Capitol View church, will speak on "Stewardship."

The Tabernacle W. M. S. has been having interesting stories in the book, "All the World in All the Word," every fourth Monday, with the pastor, Will H. Houghton, teaching. Over 50 women are studying the book.

The day of prayer for foreign missions will be held on Monday, December 6.

Brown Memorial W. M. S. held an interesting program meeting Tuesday, November 23, having as their guests the women of the Tabernacle W. M. S. After opening the meeting with song and prayer, Mrs. S. M. Waddell, the president, introduced Mrs. P. H. Hendrick, who took charge of the program. Others assisting her from the Tabernacle were Mrs. H. A. Etheridge, Mrs. L. E. Misenhamer and Mrs. F. M. Sheets.

Young People's Service League.

Last Sunday evening the City Union of Young People's Service League met in St. Philip's cathedral parish house for a joint discussion of business relating to their work and the enjoyment of a delightfully selected program.

Following the devotional service, led by the Rev. Frank Parker, Miss Grace Chalmers Thompson, organist of the cathedral, gave an interesting talk on "Church Service." An enjoyable program of music followed, interspersed by talks on "Friendship, Fellowship and Service" by officers of the City union, each splendid talk pointing to an objective in the young people's work.

A message which brought much appreciative comment was delivered by Miss John Brice, regarding wholesome entertainment. Plans were also discussed for the large Christmas tree which it is the custom of the Young People's leagues to give annually to the children who might otherwise be forgotten.

Stresses P.-T. A. Work in Churches

Mrs. P. G. Hanahan, chairman of P.-T. A. work in Christian churches, and her two charming children.

As state chairman of P.-T. A. work in Christian churches, I have been asked to talk to you, not theorize, concerning this most important branch of P.-T. A. work. A theory remains a theory as long as it is not put to the acid test of experience. The things we believe are so many pieces of useless junk until they become convictions.

I speak urgently to you of the necessity of P.-T. A. work in all churches of all kinds because through years of various experiences I am convinced that all that the P.-T. A. claims it can do it does and much more.

I have had the privilege as Mrs. P. G. Hanahan and Mary Elliott Barnwell for the last 22 years of working directly with the child and the home; a trained kindergartener for 15 years, 11 of which were spent in supervision and practical experiences with the Sheltering Arms; supervisor and trainer of play grounds and play ground workers; a settlement worker in both home and foreign settlements; a teacher and superintendent in church schools; an earnest student, worker and supporter of many many agencies that promote better homes and better child welfare; last but not least, a mother. The things we know because we have proved them are transmitted into the pure gold of experience, the highest standard of value.

Undoubtedly for years churches of all kinds have solved many problems through the P.-T. A., but about four years ago All Saints Episcopal Church P.-T. A., affiliated with the state and national, thus opening the way for the state and national organizations to send out over this broad land the challenge to every church of every kind to organize promptly and affiliate so as to both receive and give help. There are at least 20 church P.-T. A.'s, most of them being in Atlanta.

What will you gain by having a P.-T. A. in your church? You will take advantage of the most important movement that has been started in the church in the last 25 years. How so? Because the church has always been considered the great parent, and this is the practical visualization of this great ideal.

Our Mother, the church, hath never a child
To honor before the rest.
But she singeth the same for mighty kings,
And the veriest babe on her breast.

And the bishop goes down to his narrow bed
As the ploughman's child is laid.
And alike she blesseth the dark brown serf,
And the chief in his robe arrayed.

The P.-T. A. teaches from beginning to end preventative rather than curative method.

The P.-T. A. is the power to tune in to awaken parents to the responsibility of developing the spiritual nature of the child along with the physical, mental and social. It is the plank across the chasm of ignorance and indifference between the home and the church school; in this way preventing parents sending children to church school just because it has been an old custom and habit, many times vague and indifferent as to what and how the child was benefited.

The P.-T. A. in churches is surely here to hasten the day when every parent and teacher of the young will say, "And what profiteth if parents gain the whole world and lose their own children?"

Christmas Gifts Planned For Bennett Memorial

December will be a month of special sacrifices among the women of the North Georgia Conference Women's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south. Throughout the conference meetings are held on the first Monday of each month and tomorrow at these regular monthly meetings small envelopes will be distributed to every member to be used in saving special gifts until the Christmas time when they will be united in a Christmas offering to the Bennett memorial.

Ever effort has been made to make the Bennett memorial the outstanding feature of the year's program and the center of all thought, prayer and offering. After December 31 this campaign will be closed and the Christmas offering will be the last special appeal toward closing the campaign 100 per cent throughout the entire conference.

The envelopes will be used as the children use their mite boxes and as some of the business women use their blessing boxes, to receive special offerings every time the giver prays or thinks especially of the Bennett memorial or every time she realizes a special reason for being grateful for the blessings in her own life.

Since the Bennett memorial is the first unit of the Greater Scarritt college, which is the training school for Christian workers of the entire M. E. church, south, it is indeed appropriate that the "birthday of the Christ" should be used as a time of making this special gift for the purpose of makin; it possible for trained workers to go into those parts of the earth where His birthday has never been celebrated.

Woman's Society Peachtree Christian.

More than 75 women attended the all-day meeting of the Woman's society of the Peachtree Christian church on Monday last, and two-thirds or more of that number ate together at a table which literally groaned under the weight of the delicious food it upheld. Each of the circles provided generously certain goodies, so that there was a great variety and a plentitude of toothsome "eats" on hand.

While some business was of necessity, the chief reason for this gathering was purely social and educational. Many of the ladies present were at work on Christmas gifts, and for their bazar which is now in full sway, and while their nimble fingers flew their thoughts were centered on the clever handling of a synopsis of the book, "Our Templed Hills," being a splendid dissertation on conditions in rural communities among the churches and the remedies which need to be applied.

Epsilon Pi Sorority Meeting.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epsilon Pi Sorority was held at the home of Misses Sue and Sarah Kendrick, 81 Drewery street, on Saturday evening, November 27.

The members were delightfully entertained by Misses Sue and Sarah Kendrick before the meeting when a most delightful salad course was served.

Church Dinner.

Golden Rod division No. 13, Ladies auxiliary to the Order of Railway Conductor's will have a chicken dinner on Wednesday, December 8, from 5:30 to 7 o'clock, at the Red Mens' Wigwam on Central avenue.

Never A Marcel Wave
By Edna Wallace Hopper

My hair is always wavy, with never a Marcel. And it always has a glow. The reason lies in a hair dress made exclusively for me. It was perfected for me by great experts when I had my long hair bobbed. Now all toilet counters supply it under the name Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

I cannot conceive of a girl or woman going without it when she knows. No one who sees my hair will do so. Nothing else I have ever found makes hair so lustrous, so wavy, so fluffy, so abundant. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense. —(adv.)

Christian Church District Meeting At Poplar Springs

The recent district convention of Christian churches, which met at Poplar Springs church, near Sandersville, Ga., September 23, has been unanimously pronounced the best ever held in the history of the church. Every minute of the day was brimming full of good things that offer information, inspiration, instruction and consecration.

The convention was called to order by the president, W. R. Lang, who spoke briefly of the essential qualities of religious education. Mr. Lang makes an ideal convention president. After the devotional led by Rev. C. H. Tucker, most gracious words of greeting and welcome were voiced by Mrs. Harper Tucker.

The best educational plans and methods for Sunday schools were discussed and splendid reports given by representatives from different Sunday schools. The president stressed the fact that to emphasize moral and spiritual training, we must insist on having teachers who are God-fearing men and women.

The morning program consisted of splendid addresses by J. A. Taylor, W. F. Mott, J. L. Green, B. F. Foster and Dr. Tom Harris.

One of the most delightful features of the noon hour was the fellowship with kindred spirits and the reunion of separated friends gathered around a long table with delicious food.

The afternoon session was given over to the women with Mrs. R. L. Miller, district secretary, presiding. Mrs. George Gilmore beautifully conducted the devotional. "The Value of the Woman's Missionary Society in the Rural Community," was the theme for the afternoon. Mrs. Irwin Smith told how the society provides a means of culture and the art of living happily together in the pursuance of our great common purpose. Mrs. W. R. Lang gave a most impressive talk on how it gives a world contact. Mrs. W. F. Mott spoke on how it provides an opportunity for helping to give the world spiritual food. The closing address, "A Program for the Rural Church" given by Mrs. R. L. Miller, was a helpful one and much appreciated.

The nominating committee gave the following report: President, W. R. Lang; vice president, Levi Carson; secretary, Mrs. Harper Tucker. The report was unanimously adopted. The invitation of Hall's chapel was accepted for the 1927 convention.

The day was replete with interest which promised much for the coming year with a corps of well-trained and faithful workers.

Woodward Avenue Women Meet.

The Woman's Missionary society of Woodward Avenue Baptist church held its fifth Monday social in the primary room Monday, November 29. Mrs. A. H. Martin arranged a splendid program, enjoyed by all. Mrs. O. W. Hornbuckle made an inspiring talk on "What We Should Be Thankful For," after which Mrs. Hansen sang.

We then had two contests, one to identify the baby pictures of prominent ladies, won by Mrs. Lewis; the other, a food contest, resulted with Mrs. Clark as the final winner.

The talent money was turned in and Mrs. Henry T. Brookshire, wife of our pastor, was presented with a number of beautiful and useful gifts. Refreshments were served.

St. Paul Methodists.

The week of prayer was observed by the Missionary society of St. Paul's Methodist church on Wednesday and Thursday of last week with Mrs. Ben Herit, chairman of the prayer committee, in charge of the program.

The most interesting facts of the Isabella Hendrix school in Brazil were given by Mrs. A. L. Tison, Mrs. J. W. Wood, Mrs. W. H. Browne, Mrs. Chatham and Mrs. Carroll. Special prayers were offered for this school.

Georgia Baptists Plan Rally Day For Orphans' Home

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' home falling on Thanksgiving day, the executive board met on Friday, November 26, with the president, Mrs. George Westmoreland, at her home.

Applications for the admission of a number of little children were presented and had to be placed on the waiting list on account of the crowded condition of the home, which now houses 328 children.

A very concise and interesting program with posters, has been prepared by a committee of the board, for use in Sunday schools for orphan home rally day, to be observed on December 12 all over Georgia. Should you like to use one in your Sunday school call Fairfax 1001 or write to Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home, Hapeville, Ga., and one will be sent you by mail.

The board gratefully acknowledges all gifts of food and clothing sent for Thanksgiving and urges a generous remembrance on rally day and for Christmas; as the needs are great and the giver will be twice blessed.

MRS. GEORGE WESTMORELAND.

Wesley Chapel Missionary Society.

The November meeting of Wesley chapel Methodist missionary society was held at the home of Mrs. W. G. Shurbutt with the president, Mrs. J. M. Simonton, presiding. The Bible lesson was given by Mrs. J. M. Baker. After a short business session, an interesting program was given with every member taking part. Plans for an all-day meeting observing the week of prayer program were outlined and details arranged. The other churches of the circuit were invited to unite with this society in the special program.

Officers elected for the new year are as follows: President, Mrs. F. H. Jackson; vice president, Mrs. J. M. Simonton; recording secretary and superintendent of publicity, Mrs. Ernest Van Norden; treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Bryan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. V. B. Powell, superintendent of young people, Mrs. J. P. Starr; superintendent of children, Mrs. W. G. Shurbutt; superintendent of mission and Bible study, Mrs. J. M. Baker, superintendent of supplies, Mrs. J. H. Austin; superintendent of local work, Mrs. Henry Bowen; superintendent of social service, Mrs. J. V. Jones; agent for the missionary voice, Mrs. J. Z. Sheats.

MRS. ERNEST VAN NORDEN.

Harvest Day Meeting At Druid Hills Church

The annual harvest day meeting of the Women's Missionary society of the Druid Hills Methodist church will begin at 10:30 o'clock next Thursday, December 7. There will be a talk by Miss Winter on "Rural Conditions in Georgia," and a talk by School Superintendent Willis A. Sutton on the "Undeveloped Area of Child Life." The new pastor at Druid Hills Methodist church will have charge of the Bible lesson.

Lunch will be served immediately after the morning program. The afternoon meeting will be largely of a business character. The announcement of new circles for next year will be made and the annual election and installation of officers will be held. Special music has been arranged. All ladies of the church and friends are invited to be present at this meeting.

West End Baptist To Meet Monday.

The Woman's Missionary society of West End Baptist church is looking forward to a wonderful day of prayer and inspiration for foreign missions on Monday, December 6. Mission pledges and thank-offerings will be brought in, the aim being to go "over the top" with the 1926 apportionment to missions.

The program for the day will include prayer and praise, talk and music by Mrs. Joshinuma, a native Japanese in costume; a talk on China by Mrs. Ayers Pitman, address by Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, associational superintendent, and solos by John Pitts and Mrs. T. H. Stokes. There will also be business and circle meetings.

Concert Artists Delight Audience In Atlanta

Into the musical life of Atlanta have recently come two delightful artists, Louise Varkonyi and Dr. Bela Varkonyi, who appeared in a song and piano recital in the artist series presented by the Atlanta Music club at the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club Wednesday morning, December 1, at 11 o'clock.

This is the second appearance of these musicians, who have an international reputation, having done concert work in the leading capitals of Europe and who now reside in Atlanta. Celebrities like Madame Louise Varkonyi and Dr. Varkonyi are a delightful acquisition to the artistic circles of cultural life in Atlanta, contributing largely to that atmosphere for the love and appreciation of the fine arts which is quite evidenced by the great numbers who attend things musical and dramatic in Atlanta.

Scarcely had we returned from the beautiful concert by the Hodgsons and Rita Renard on Tuesday night, or from the play presented by the Drama league the same night, until it was time to attend the Varkonyi concert at the Atlanta Woman's club, all of which goes to prove our assertion that Atlanta is a great musical center and a lover of good music.

The Varkonyis fulfilled every requirement of the reputation they have made as musicians of the highest type, reflecting a finish in style and technique that is very beautiful. Madame Varkonyi's part on the program Wednesday included the great ocean aria from Oberon, by Weber, the celebrated "Cavatina" from the ever popular Verdi's "Il Trovatore;" a group of songs by Schuman, Brahms and Rubenstein, and one American song, "The Singer," by Elisa Maxwell, with Dr. Varkonyi accompanying at the piano. Die Erl King was given as an encore to the applause that greeted the group of songs, of which the two Rubenstein numbers were very lovely, "Asra" and "The Dew Is Glistening." "The Laughing Song" from Manon Leescaut, by Puccini, was substituted for the "Cavatina" selection from Il Trovatore.

By request Dr. Varkonyi gave a group of his own compositions, three of his smaller works he has given before on former programs. Of larger works Dr. Varkonyi has to his credit a concert overture, piano concerto and symphonic opem which has been performed with success in Budapest, by the State symphony, and Philharmonic orchestra. Among the very popular numbers, included in Dr. Varkonyi's program were "Sonata in E Minor," by Rubenstein; "Hungarian Rhapsody," by Leszt; "Sinking Bell," "Remembrance" and "Humoresque," by Varkonyi, all played with a brilliancy and mastery very pleasing to the large audience who greeted these delightful artists.

Miss McGeever Weds Harvey Enloe, Jr.

Birmingham, Ala., December 4.—The wedding of Miss Julia Carol McGeever and Harvy Enloe, Jr., took place Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the home of her mother, Mrs. P. J. McGeever, in Norwood.

Little Catherine Hamill and Marie Tanner Davis, dainty in their flesh chiffon frocks had formed an aisle with ribbons which led from the stairway to the altar.

Miss Clara McGeever was bridesmaid. Grace McGeever was her sister's maid of honor.

Preceding the bride who entered with her mother was little Gladys Enloe, the small flower girl, who wore a flesh georgette.

Bride Wears Green.

The bride was lovely in an afternoon frock of green georgette and gold cloth in soft shades with a gold cloth hat and green moire slippers, harmonizing. Her frock was made with the new tionnet sleeves and a crushed girdle with a large buckle. Her only ornament was a platinum and diamond bar pin, the bridegroom's wedding gift. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Arthur Deseker served as best man. D. D. Smith and Daniel Munn were groomsmen.

The wedding was followed by an informal reception.

To Hold Meetings Under Stars and Bars.

Bainbridge, Ga., December 4.—For all future meetings of the Bainbridge chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, a large Confederate flag will fly from the hostess house, the custom having been adopted at the November meeting in the home of Mrs. G. B. Toole, when the new flag purchased by the chapter had its initia. use in especial honor to the Confederate veterans.

Joint Hostesses Honor Miss Mary Chastain.

A lovely affair of Saturday afternoon, November 27, was a linen shower at which Miss Mary Chastain and Mrs. George Hutchens entertained at the home of the latter, honoring Miss Helen Hutchens, whose marriage to Lawrence B. King will be an interesting event of January. The home was artistically decorated with bright-colored fall flowers. A color note of red and white was carried out.

Those invited were Mrs. George M. Smith, Mrs. F. A. Mickle, Miss Lena Martin, Mrs. Howard Patton, Mrs. Adial P. Greer, Miss Grayce Horne, Mrs. Ulee Allen, Mrs. Clyde Cowan, Mrs. Jack Sibley, Mrs. Clyde Chastain, Mrs. E. E. Barnes, Mrs. Walter McCullough, Mrs. Canada, Miss Bernice Canada, Mrs. A. J. Maxwell Tells Start in Life Obtained at Young Harris

BY ROSEMARY STEVENSON.

"Young Harris is a school that gives more than an education," said Alva G. Maxwell, vice president of the Citizens and Southern bank and chairman of organization for the Young Harris endowment campaign which will open today under the direction of Colonel William Lawson Peel, chairman of the board of trustees.

"I went to school there four years," Mr. Maxwell said. "I got my first job and first promotion there and after awhile I went back there to get my wife and more confidence and trust in a school, a man cannot show than this. If every man and woman in the south who owes a debt of gratitude to Young Harris will reply to the $150,000 campaign with even a part of the debt, the campaign will go over and go over big, and this is what I am confident will happen."

Entered With $60.

"The school has a faculty that is mentally and morally equipped to form from its raw material—leaders, who are of the highest type of intellectuality and morality. It draws its student body from a class of boys and girls of the purest Anglo-Saxon blood and ideals and its location, in the beautiful mountains of north Georgia, cannot be surpassed.

"I went there in 1910 with $60 in my pocket. I had never been to any but a country school with one teacher and I made it known right away that I was a freshman.

"'You'll have to take an examination,' said Miss Sadie Allen Smith.

"'Alright!' I replied and she asked me what was a simple, a complex and a compound sentence, which is one of the best ways I know of making a simple boy feel extremely complex and maybe a little compound. I smiled and told her I did not know and she smiled and said she'd give me a try. That was the last of the matter. 'A try' was enough. I was graduated there in 1914, owing $225.

Lauds President Sharpe.

"It takes, as I said, more than an education to start a boy out in the world with the handicap of debt and yet preserve in him a confidence that he will make good."

Mr. Maxwell sat in his marble office with an inlaid floor, velvet draperies and commodious arm chairs. Delicate etchings hung on the wall and a silver carafe stood by the desk. Sixteen years seemed a short time from the youngster with $60 in the world to the executive directing great affairs, and yet, I dare say the same smile remains, a smile that is at once straight and sincere and asks the same qualities in return.

"No alumnus can talk of Young Harris," he concluded, "without mentioning Dr. J. A. Sharp, its president. To me they mean the same thing. I cannot visualize the school without the guidance of this good and great man. For him, if for no other reason, this campaign must succeed."

18 CORN GROWERS IN COMPETITION FOR SOUTHERN CUP

Eighteen corn growers of the south have qualified to compete for the handsome silver cup offered by the Southern railway to the producer of the best ten ears exhibited at any one of eighteen leading state and district fairs held in the south this fall, and the trophy will be awarded to one of them on December 8 when the judging committee will meet in Atlanta for final judging of the exhibits. This committee is composed of C. A. Mooers, director agricultural experiment station, Knoxville, Tenn.; Professor J. F. Duggar, Alabama experiment station, Auburn, Ala., and W. C. Lassetter, editor of The Progressive Farmer, Birmingham, Ala.

The exhibits of corn which won prizes at the several fairs, entitling the growers entering them to compete for the Southern's cup, have been brought to the office of Roland Turner, general agricultural agent of the Southern, in Atlanta, where the judging will take place. The exhibits will be carefully preserved and presented to the judges in such a way that the identity of the grower will not be known.

One of the following qualified exhibitors will be awarded the cup on December 8: T. R. Holcomb, Alpharetta, Ga.; D. L. Patrick, Griffin, Ga.; S. E. Shackleford, Griffin, Ga.; Ray Harper, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Chester Strange, Enterprise, Miss.; H. S. Brunson, Quitman, Miss.; J. G. Grant, Chester, S. C.; H. S. Brunson, Meridian, Miss.; N. V. Nichols, Meridian, Miss.; J. A. Patterson, China Grove, N. C.; E. H. Williams, Woodland, Ga.; Union Improvement club, Chipley, Ga.; F. M. Gaddis, Hinesville Ga.; W. H. Roark, Birchwood, Tenn.; J. F. Huggins, White Pine, Tenn.; A. V. Hardin, Prospect, Ky.; John Cockerill, North Fork, Va.; J. H. Holcombe, Candler, N. C.

The Southern railway cup was won by Willie Patton Boland, of Pomaria, S. C., last year.

FLAG OF GEORGIA NOW WILL WAVE IN FAMOUS HALL

Georgia's state flag will wave in the corridor of Independence hall at Philadelphia 150 years after the Declaration of Independence was signed, according to announcement Saturday at the office of Governor Clifford Walker. A beautiful Georgia flag, with the state seal embroidered in one corner, was ready for shipment to Philadelphia, where it will be placed in Independence hall with flags of the other original 13 states.

Georgia was the last of the colonies to become a state and was the last to place a state flag in Independence hall, according to Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, head of the state military department, who has charge of the flag.

On a recent visit of Governor Walker and his staff to Philadelphia the Georgia officials promised the Philadelphia authorities they would send a Georgia flag for Independence hall. The flag was finished Saturday and was sent Saturday afternoon to Philadelphia.

LIVE STOCK RATES WILL BE DISCUSSED AT MEETING HERE

Efforts to adjust satisfactorily certain differences existing over application of interstate rules on live stock shipments as outlined two years ago by the interstate commerce commission will be made at a conference in Atlanta December 10, it was announced Saturday by James A. Perry, chairman of the Georgia public service commission.

Representatives of railroads, live stock associations and of certain state commissioners will attend the conference. Examiner John B. Keeler, of the interstate commerce commission, will preside at the hearing.

25 STATES SEND MANY VISITORS TO BIG MONOLITH

Representatives from 25 states and three foreign countries visited the Stone Mountain Memorial and registered on the new machines during the past two weeks a check of registration slips revealed. The machines were recently donated to the association by the Hamilton Automatic Register company and are replicas of those used at Monticello, home of Jefferson, and Mount Vernon.

Ohio, in the mid-west, led all states in the number of registrations. Others came from states as far away as Vermont, Oregon and California. The most remote visitor registered from Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany.

States representated included Louisiana, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Alabama, Michigan, Virginia, Minnesota, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, California, Missouri, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Kansas, Illinois, New York, Iowa, Indiana, Florida, Vermont, Texas, Wisconsin and Arkansas.

During the month of November six registrations were made from foreign countries and stretched from Germany to Guantamano Bay, Cuba, and included Ballymoney county, Antrim, Ireland, Glasgow, Scotland, and two from London.

WATKINS TO SPEAK ON CAUSE AND CURE OF DELINQUENCY

Judge Garland M. Watkins, of the Juvenile court of Fulton county, will deliver two addresses on juvenile delinquency, its causes and cure, this week, it was announced Saturday.

He will speak at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at a meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church of East Point, and at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Parent-Teacher association of the Milton Avenue school.

Judge Watkins is a nationally recognized authority on the subject and has given it close study for the past several years.

VOLUNTEERS ASKED IN XMAS SEAL SALE

The Tuberculosis association wants volunteer workers.

Nearly one million Christmas seals are in the office of the Tuberculosis association at 33 Cain street, N. E., and as rapidly as possible they are being put into envelopes and mailed out to friends for Christmas packages and cards.

Upon the sale of Christmas seals largely depends the ability to extend the work of the physicians, nurses and educational workers in the county and surrounding towns and by supplementing the limited budget which is made necessary through the Community Chest shortage, the public may make it possible for additional sick to be served and additional preventive measures set up.

Those who can give one or more mornings in the seal campaign are requested to telephone Walnut 9580.

HOME-COMING DAY WILL BE OBSERVED BY BIBLE CLASS

Today will be observed as "Home-coming Day" by the Men's Activity Bible class of Grace Methodist church. All former members of the class, which is taught by James L. Key, prominent attorney and former Atlanta mayor, are assured of a cordial welcome.

The class has shown a decided growth since reorganization recently, with an increase in attendance of more than 50 per cent. A contest will be inaugurated to last five weeks. The winning team will be tendered a banquet by the losing team early in January.

THEOSOPHISTS TO HEAR LAST SCRIBNER TALK

Elaine Scribner, national lecturer of the Theosophical society will deliver the last of the series of lectures given by her in this city under the auspices of the local theosophical lodge at 325 Peachtree, tonight at 8:15 o'clock, the subject being "The Supermen Called Masters." Highly advanced men believed by theosophists to live on earth today, and called by them "masters" or "adepts" will be described by Miss Scribner, who will tell of their reputed wonderful powers.

Miss Scribner has recently returned from a lecture tour through the middle west and the Atlantic coast. Previous to that she lectured on theosophy for two years in California. She is a graduate of Smith college and the Chicago Training School for Home and Foreign Missionaries, and previous to her lecture work, was a writer of short stories. The lecture is free.

400 TICKETS SOLD TO ELKS CHARITY DANCE

With 400 tickets already sold among their own members, the annual charity dance given jointly by the Elks' club and the Kle club, ladies' auxiliary, the affair this year promises to be the most successful on record. The 400 tickets have been sold before making a general appeal to the public.

The proceeds of the annual dance are used to provide a Christmas tree for the poor children of the city. This year the tree will be held in the new Georgian theater, on Christmas eve, instead of the city auditorium as formerly.

The dance, to which tickets already are on sale to the public, is to be given on Friday, December 10, at the auditorium armory. The Atlanta Bell Hops' orchestra has been engaged, and other details arranged. Mrs. E. F. Bond, president of the Kle club, is the general chairman.

Tickets may be obtained from any Kle or Elk member, or at the local Elks' lodge, it is announced. The price is $1 a couple.

SUDDETH TO HEAD EAST ATLANTA I. O. O. F.

Leo Sudderth, prominent Atlanta attorney, and councilman from the eleventh ward, has been elected noble grand of the East Atlanta lodge, No. 48, I. O. O. F., to succed R. B. Hendon, A. C. Horms, secretary, announced Saturday. A. C. Drake, attorney, was elected vice grand noble.

Other officers are A. B. Jones, recording secretary; O. C. Harris, financial secretary; W. B. Whitten, treasurer; W. J. Wood, one-year term trustee, and Leon J. Cofer, musician.

The East Atlanta lodge is one of the youngest Odd Fellows' lodge in the state, and its membership includes some of the most prominent citizens of East Atlanta.

Railway Booklet Describes Resources Along Its Lines

"A wide variety of raw materials makes possible the location of a large number of chemical industries along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railway in Georgia and Alabama" is the title of a pamphlet just issued by the industrial department of this railway.

This is the first of a series of publications which will be issued from time to time on potential industrial resources in the territory traversed by the A., B. & A. railway. The publication was issued in time for the annual meeting of the American Society of Chemical Engineers which will be held in Birmingham, Atlanta and Copter Hill, Tenn., from December 6 through December 11.

This meeting will bring to the south 300 hundred of the leading chemical engineers of America, representing the great chemical industrial corporations in this country. Their object in visiting Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee is to become familiar with the chemical possibilities of this section of the south.

The A., B. & A. railway, extending between Birmingham and Atlanta and to the coast at Brunswick, serves two great industrial districts; affords exceptional advantages for export, and traverses five distinct geological provinces, each rich in a wide variety of mineral resources, the pamphlet states.

The industrial bureau of the freight traffic department of the A., B. & A. railway will be glad to furnish information in detail on the raw materials along its line, as well as technical data on the results of experiments carried on to determine the availability of these raw materials in chemical and electro-chemical industries.

BOTANICAL SOCIETY PLANS FIELD TRIP

Following the field trip at Oglethorpe last Sunday, the Georgia Botanical society will hold a second field trip at Vinings, Ga., today. Eugene S. Heath, president of the society, will be the conductor of the party. Because of the early twilight, the party will leave Vinings promptly at 2 o'clock.

In case of rain, the meeting will be held in the conservatory at Grant park at 2 o'clock. The second regular meeting of the Georgia Botanical society will be held Monday at 8 o'clock, in the office of J. H. Bell, 517, 101 Marietta building.

TWO PRIZES OFFERED IN DANCE WEEK TESTS

As a special feature of "better dance week," which will be sponsored by the woman's division of the chamber of commerce, a public demonstration will be given Tuesday evening, in the Chamber of Commerce building at 8 o'clock. Members of the woman's division dancing class will take part in a contest and two prizes will be awarded the winning couples. Those who will act as judges are B. S. Barker and George West of the senior chamber of commerce, and Mrs. R. K. Rambo.

Mrs. Lillian A. Dove is chairman of the dance week committee. Mrs. Dove is a member of the Dancing Masters of America, Inc., and members of that organization all over the country are supporting this movement for the purpose of stimulating interest in better dancing.

There will be other demonstrations during the week at various schools and clubs and talks will be made by members of the better dance committee.

Thomasville Election.

Thomasville, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The date for holding the municipal primary for city officers for Thomasville has been fixed for Tuesday, December 21. Entries of candidates close on December 17.

Ruth Goes Shopping

ANOTHER big stride in modernizing and improving Atlanta's transportation facilities was marked by the inauguration of service of the ten new de luxe single deck motor coaches seen on the busy thoroughfares of the city for the first time this past week.

These new coaches are to supplement the coach service to Morningside and the Virginia-Highland avenue section maintained heretofore by the double-deck coaches.

The new coaches are beautiful . . . the color scheme being the same as the larger coaches . . . flamingo red and cream, with black trimmings. The interiors are finished in mahogany, and the seats are upholstered in genuine brown leather.

Both the double-deck and the single deck coaches will be in use during the morning and afternoon rush hours to take care of the heavy demand for service at that time.

What a beautiful new fleet of coaches the Georgia Railway & Power Company has placed in service. They are indeed le dernier cri in transportation facilities and are as comfortable as scientific construction can make them, too. They are the same type coaches as are in use in many of the large metropolitan cities of the United States.

This year the Georgia Railway & Power Company has purchased new transportation equipment that has surpassed any previous purchases during any one year in the Company's history. Sixty new street cars and 10 new interurban cars have been added to the service this year. What a wonderful record . . . every resident of Atlanta should be proud of it. "More and Better Service" should be the watchword of the Georgia Railway & Power Company for their desire to serve you is evidenced by the additional transportation facilities secured for your convenience and pleasure.

TO SELECT gifts for Christmas-giving that you think will give lasting pleasure is very difficult, as a rule, but if when you are shopping you will go to M. Rich and Brothers Company's fourth floor and visit the luggage department if you are looking for something to give, something unusually nice and an expression of good taste as for its splendid utility for traveling . . . . you'll find it there.

Whatever your luggage needs may be—now is the time to buy them. There are worlds of lovely pieces to choose from there. Trunks of every size . . . there are Hartmanns, too, and that's sufficient, for you know all about Hartmann quality.

Ideal traveling bags, suitcases, overnight bags, Pullman bags, kit bags and hat boxes from the finest quality to the more moderately priced ones—many are fitted with complete toilet sets, which make them all the more desirable . . . they are so convenient.

Imagine! A genuine cowhide leather suitcase for Milady at $24.95, with removable tray, containing a beautiful toilet set of 11 pieces in a choice of pearl, gray, gold, white, blue, jade, shell on amber and plain amber—Such a gift! You'll have to see this case to fully appreciate its beauty and value. Many imported cases have jewelled fittings and are exquisite—mere words can't describe their beauty.

Pleats are, perhaps, the favorite among many devices for giving fullness to skirts. Even velvet is pleated, but it is the new transparent kind so popular at present among the leading couturiers both in this country and abroad.

THE Etta Laseter Shop at 5 West Alabama street is a charming little shop filled with the loveliest and choicest gifts of various descriptions that would cause any woman's eyes to sparkle with happiness.

Novelties of many kinds . . . lots of them imported from foreign shores, the very newest conceits in colorful novelty jewelry to lend a bit of brilliancy to the costume which is beaucoup de chic in Paris this season—silken hose in the most adorable shades, so popular at present—handkerchiefs that are wisps of loveliness—scarfs, both chiffon and hand-knitted ones, gorgeous in their exotic coloring.

Almost every style imaginable in hand bags, large and small, pouch ones, too, in calfskin, patent leather and many novelty effects. They are of all colors and color combinations. See the gifts at this attractive shop—you'll like them. The things I have mentioned are only a few of the lovely things you'll find there.

A GIFT that brings to the home pleasure, comfort and beauty for those that dwell therein, a reminder of the giver and thoughtfulness—surely that is a gift ideal. Such are the beautiful pieces of furniture at the Empire Furniture company, at 263 Peachtree street, the "Home of Grand Rapids Furniture," that will intrigue you with their beauty, artistry of designs and excellent workmanship—their collection of fine furniture is exceptionally complete.

It is a joy to go to the Empire Furniture Company and browse about at will through aisle after aisle of wonderful gift furniture; beautiful odd chairs and luxurious Coxwells—attractive end tables in rich mahogany, red, green, yellow and black lacquer—smoking cabinets that are as decorative as they are useful—lamps for table, boudoir, reading or floor; in fact, hundreds of wonderfully fine, artistic pieces of furniture, such as tea wagons, cedar chests, sewing tables, book troughs and shelves, gateleg tables, fireside benches, spinet desks, secretaries, occasional tables, wing chairs and numerous other lovely things—they will make the home for which they are intended as gifts for Christmas a place of beauty and a joy forever. Select your furniture gifts now, while there are so many charming things to choose from, and remember that the Empire Furniture company will be pleased to arrange payments for you for your convenience.

ARE you going abroad this winter? If so, now is the time to make your reservations for a cruise around the world, cruise to the Mediterranean, cruise to the West Indies, cruise to South America, the Caribbean cruise and a cruise to Bermuda.

Cruising to strange lands, ages-old in historic interest and romantic beauty, are fascinating and fill one with infinite charm and are a delight always, for there's ever a thrill in a trip abroad, no matter if it is a premier voyage or how many times one has crossed, where one has been or what he has seen.

The itinerary of each of these cruises is perfectly planned . . . each voyage is so different, the people, the customs, scenic wonders all hold charm for you . . . and new delights await you. These cruises leave New York in December, January and February . . . Why not go on one of them?

An enthralling panorama of foreign lands will weave spells of enduring enchantment that you will never forget.

For information concerning them communicate with John M. Born, steamship agent, 1108 Candler building. He will be pleased to give you rates, sailings and make your reservations for you; he is an authorized agent for all steamship lines.

WITH the approach of Christmas our interests center around the problem of gifts . . . what to give at this time is in the thoughts of everyone, and suggestions are welcomed with enthusiasm, especially if they are gifts that you feel sure will give happiness to the recipient and be a lasting reminder of your thoughtfulness.

Gifts of electrical appliances do that! I was so perfectly delighted with the wonderful assortment of electrical gifts displayed at the Georgia Railway and Power Company when I was there on a shopping tour for myself a few days ago, that I want to tell you of them . . . you'll be as charmed with their beauty and usefulness as I was and I am sure after you have seen them you will be even more so . . . the selection is really lovely.

The urn coffee percolator sets attracted me especially . . . they are more beautiful this season than ever before, it seems . . . a gift that any woman would delight to own. They are artistically designed, many of them are etched and engraved and are finished in highly finished nickel plate over copper and contain besides the urn, sugar and creamer with tray. There are many styles in these sets . . . all lovely.

Electric percolators as an individual piece that would grace any table are there in various styles for you to choose from, too. Waffle irons, toasters, grills, hot plates, irons, heaters of several makes and sizes, vacuum cleaners, curling irons, warming pads . . . and lamps. Every woman adores receiving a lamp for Christmas. No home is really artistic without several, and there are floor lamps, table and boudoir lamps that are entrancing in their loveliness. All of them have beautiful shades of either parchment, hand-decorated, or silk in combinations of contrasting colors.

Radios, too, are there at the Georgia Railway and Power Company for your choosing. What intriguing and interesting instruments of the air they are! The Atwater Kent and Radiola radios complete with all batteries and tubes are both wonderfully fine . . . we all know them and those of us who are not fortunate enough to own one of either wish we did. I am sure I do.

Anyone of these "gifts electrical" would make any member of your family or friends quite happy at Christmas . . . there is hardly a person on your list who would not appreciate some kind of electric appliance. Visit any of the salesrooms of the Georgia Railway and Power Company, either the main store on Marietta street, or one of the Community Stores, and select your Christmas gifts now. You may pay for your electrical gifts later . . . just make a small payment on any one of them at the time of purchase and the balance may be paid with your monthly service statements.

Color is an important factor in the trio of winter fashion points—harmony, feminine softness of outline and color. It is the red shades, the green shades, and the vibrant blue shades that attract our attention in daytime dresses, while for the street we find that black, wine-color, eggplant purple, and soft, deep reds are smart. The importance of these vivid colors has not by any means diminished the popularity of black and white. Both of these are always chic, white especially for evening wear.

THE window display at the Cable Piano Company, 84 North Broad street, attracted me greatly the other morning while I was shopping—so I went in to see the beautiful studio model upright piano that was featured there.

Only at Cable's can you choose your piano in authentic period designs and finish to harmonize with the interior furnishings of your home. Heretofore, period styles were restricted to expensive grand pianos—but now you can have a piano of your choice in designs.

These splendid upright pianos are priced at $395.00 and you can have the choice of Spanish Renaissance, Jacobean, William and Mary, Colonial and Italian Florentine designs. These pianos are of lovely proportions and fit admirably into the limited space of the average modern living room—yet in every way contain the same high quality of construction—the same sweet resonant tones that you would expect to find in more expensive pianos—they carry not only the prestige of their maker, but the stamp of superiority that every piano from Cable's instinctively possesses. Payments can be arranged—so make your selection and have it delivered in time for Christmas.

BE sure to see the beautiful, fine imported linens at the Fifth Avenue Linen store at 35 Whitehall street, many of which are embroidered in exquisite designs . . . both for the table, household and personal apparel . . . and what attractive presents they make!

As an example of the specially-priced articles that are offered you at this season of gift-buying are the daintiest, sheerest white nainsook gowns, imported, too, with patch-work done by hand in colors at only $1.00 . . . splendid value, you will say, when you have seen them. Handkerchiefs at $1.00 a dozen, the very thing for your children for "school hankys"—and there are precious looking little hand-embroidered pillow covers for "the baby"—these are $1.00, too. Italian hand-embroidered towels in stunning designs are also priced at $1.00. Everything in this store of fine linens is as lovely as can be, and reasonably priced.

Rhinestone - trimmed evening frocks, and there are ever so many of them this season, have brought about a decided vogue for rhinestone jewelry. Bracelets are seldom worn singly and are varied in design, often are wide bands showing a combination of large and small rhinestones mounted on silver—square cut stones are frequently used and enhance their beauty.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LIX, No. 174. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 5, 1926.

Army Group Will Center Social Life

The army contingent, which forms such an important part of Atlanta's social life, will participate to a large extent in the events of the coming week, many functions to take place within the reservation.

Outstanding among the affairs of the week is the southeastern polo tournament, which will be held at Fort McPherson from December 8 to 12, inclusive. Among the teams who will compete in the tournament are the sixth cavalry, of Fort Oglethorpe; the Fort Benning team, of Fort Benning; the Governor's Horse Guards, of Atlanta; the twenty-second infantry, of Fort McPherson.

The schedule of games to be played is as follows: December 8, Governor's Horse Guards vs. twenty-second infantry; December 10, Fort Benning vs. sixth cavalry; December 12, winner of the first match vs. winner of second match, also this final game to decide the winner will be preceded by a four-chukker match between the two losers in the first and second matches.

Lovely Tea.

The initial event of the week will be the tea at which Captain and Mrs. B. M. McFadyen will entertain Sunday afternoon at their home in College Park, honoring General Joseph Leitch and Mrs. Leitch, of Fort McPherson. The tea will follow the parade and review by the cadets of the Georgia Military academy in compliment to General Leitch.

The Officers' club at the army post will be the scene of an original and delightful affair Friday evening when Captain and Mrs. Alexander R. Bolling and Captain and Mrs. Malcolm Fortier will be joint hosts at a cafeteria supper. The party will precede the regular hop announced for the same date.

Honoring Uncle Remus.

Emphasizing the love and sentiment with which Atlanta remembers Uncle Remus will be the celebration of the birthday of Joel Chandler Harris Thursday by keeping open house at the Wren's Nest. The annual meeting and election of officers of the Uncle Remus Memorial association will be held at 11 o'clock, followed by a seated luncheon, to which are invited all the members of the association. In the afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock there will be given a tea, the honor guests being the presidents of the federated clubs in Atlanta and the fifth district.

Cultural Atlanta's interest will be centered this week in the meeting of the Fine Arts club at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday at the Piedmont Driving club. The club lecture will be supplemented by an exhibit of rar excellence and unusual interest, comprised of a choice collection of antique and modern Oriental rugs.

The December meeting of the Atlanta Junior League will take place Tuesday at 3 o'clock at the Atlanta Athletic club in the ladies' dining room on the fourth floor. Mrs. Eugene R. Black, Jr., president, will preside. The other officers of the league are Mrs. Lewis Gregg, first vice president; Miss Margaret Nelson, second vice president; Mrs. Philip Wilcox, treasurer; Miss Ellen Newell, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. William Parker, recording secretary.

Miss Frances Brown, attractive bride-elect of mid-winter, will be entertained at a series of pre-nuptial parties, beginning this week. Mrs. Rogers Toy will be hostess at a bridge-tea Wednesday afternoon at her home in Ansley Park, honoring Miss Brown.

Mrs. Randolph Is Luncheon Hostess.

Mrs. Hollins Nichols Randolph was hostess at a beautiful buffet luncheon Saturday at her home on Peachtree road. The affair was one of the most delightful events of the week-end and gathered a group of Mrs. Randolph's friends.

Alfred Floyd Is Dinner Host at Athletic Club.

Alfred Floyd was host at a dinner at the Atlanta Athletic club honoring the members of the University school football team and the members of the faculty Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The dinner table was handsomely appointed and placed in one of the private dining rooms of the club. Covers were placed for 37 guests.

Mrs. Holliday, Jr., To Give Tea.

One of the loveliest affairs of the Christmas holidays will be the tea at which Mrs. George Holliday, Jr., will entertain Thursday, December 30, at her home on Peachtree road, in compliment to Miss Elizabeth Crankshaw.

Mrs. Joseph Crankshaw and a group of attractive young ladies will assist in entertaining the hostess.

About one hundred guests will be present.

St. Luke's Woman's Auxiliary To Have Tea.

The woman's auxiliary of St. Luke's Episcopal church will have a silver tea Wednesday, December 2, at the home of Mrs. Spurgeon King, 1492 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., corner Lullwater road. All friends of the members of the auxiliary and of the church are cordially invited to call between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock.

Mrs. King will be assisted in receiving by the officers, Mrs. Foster Fitzsimons, Mrs. George Blake, Mrs. H. F. West and Mrs. Richard Alger, together with a group of attractive young girls serving.

Cambridge Visitor Is in Atlanta.

Mrs. Roscoe Chesley, of Cambridge, Mass., who has been among the prominent visitors in Atlanta, is corresponding secretary of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and is found of the Boston chapter. U. D. C. Mrs. Chesley was formerly Miss Mary Carithers, of Athens, and was graduated from Lucy Cobb institute. She is a very distinguished lecturer upon constructive psycological lines. Mrs. Chesley was instrumental in having the national U. D. C. relieved of federal tax exemption. She went to Washington, D. C., three years ago and interviewed the proper authorities, taking with her a member of the Cambridge chapter. After reviewing the records of this patriotic organization the exemption tax on benefit parties and other methods of raising funds to take care of the patriotic work was lifted.

Biltmore Tea-Dance Event of Saturday.

Many parties assembled Saturday afternoon at the Biltmore hotel for the regular tea dance held from 5 until 7 o'clock in the Georgian ballroom. A variety of pretty fall flowers adorned each of the tea tables.

Miss Lucile Stone, a popular debutante, was honor guest in a party given by Miss Elizabeth Starke. The guests included Misses Stone, Ruth Ogburn, Catherine Candler, Luticia Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Miller, Charles Hurt, Howard Candler, Jr., George Bardwell, Dr. William C. Warren, Jr., B. S. Espebahl and Miss Starke.

Society

Three charming members of Atlanta society are presented in the above group, including Miss Gray Poole, Miss Hannah Sterne and Mrs. Wimberly Peters. Miss Poole (at the upper left) is the lovely debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Poole, of 998 Ponce de Leon avenue. She will be presented to society at a large tea-dance given by her parents at the Druid Hills Golf club December 21. Miss Sterne (lower left) is the attractive sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sterne of 132 Westminster drive. Mrs. Peters (at the right) is one of the most charming members of Atlanta's younger married contingent. She was hostess at one of the loveliest parties of the past week when she entertained at luncheon Wednesday at her home, "Ivy Hall," on Ponce de Leon avenue. Photo of Miss Poole by Thurston Hatcher; photos of Miss Sterne and Mrs. Peters by Stephenson's studio.

Mr. and Mrs. Milsaps Honor Bride and Groom.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Milsaps entertained Thursday evening at their apartment at 750 Ponce de Leon avenue, in compliment to Dr. and Mrs. Zack Jackson, whose marriage was a recent interesting event. The rooms where the bridge game was enjoyed were elaborately decorated with Christmas colors. Mrs. W. H. Durden and Mrs. Jackson, the groom's mother, assisted in entertaining. Thirty-six guests were invited.

Miss Martha McDaniel Will Give Tea.

Miss Martha Joe McDaniel has issued invitations to a tea Thursday afternoon, December 9, from 4 to 6 o'clock, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. McDaniel, on Peachtree road. The occasion will assemble a large number of the younger social contingent.

Drama League Will Meet Tuesday, December 7.

The regular meeting of the Atlanta Drama league will be Tuesday, December 7, at 3 o'clock, in the banquet hall of the Woman's club. Instead of the reading of a play, Professor Thomas English, of Emory university, will speak on "What Is Drama? The Rival Claims of the Critic Who Judges a Play by How It Reads and the Critic Who Demands That It Be Judged by How It Acts."

Mrs. Roper Is Hostess To Bridge Club.

Mrs. Hubert Roper entertained her bridge club at a luncheon Wednesday, at her home in Inman park.

Mrs. Clyde R. Suber won top score and Mrs. Marshall Bradford cut consolation.

The guests present were Mrs. Clyde Suber, Mrs. Marshall Bradford, Mrs. Harvey Lester, Mrs. George Hiles, Mrs. H. E. Weaver, Mrs. Cobb Benning, Mrs. C. W. Owen and Mrs. Roper.

Miss McCown Honors Miss Marie Butler.

Miss Alice McCown was hostess at a beautiful shower on Friday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Albert Sidney Guerin, on Candler street, the honor guest of the occasion being Miss Marie Butler, a popular bride-elect whose marriage to Agustus Roberts will be an interesting event of December.

The color motif of yellow and white was effectively carried out in every detail; the yellow tapers burning in tall silver candlesticks, the yellow and white ices and the favors being little wedding bells tied with yellow ribbon.

Miss Sara Bosworth, a talented young dances and niece of the hostess, rendered a solo dance. Two contests were enjoyed, the first being a "Love Song." Miss Ethel Sneed winning the prize. The second contest was in the shape of a wedding bell and was won by Mrs. G. T. Heminger.

The bride-elect was seated under a beautifully hand-made bell from which the lovely gifts were showered. The bride-elect wore a model of pink georgette heavily beaded and a shoulder corsage of roses.

The hostess received her guests wearing a sand-colored georgette trimmed in gold lace and a shoulder corsage of pink roses. Thirty friends of the honoree attended.

Miss Flemming Is Luncheon Hostess For Misses Evans

A very lovely affair of Saturday was the buffet luncheon at which Miss Anne Wynn Flemming was hostess at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. J. O. Wynn, on Peachtree circle. The affair was given in compliment to Miss Mary Jo Evans and Miss Betty Evans, who are boarding pupils at Washington seminary.

In the living room, where the guests were received, there was a decoration of rose-colored chrysanthemums. The luncheon table in the dining room was beautifully appointed and held as a central decoration a large blue basket filled with yellow chrysanthemums. Blue candles burned in silver holders, and the mints and candies were in blue.

Miss Flemming received her guests wearing a lovely frock of Copenhagen blue, with collar and cuffs of flesh georgette, embroidered in silver. Miss Mary Jo Evans was gowned in black velvet, trimmed in silver, and Miss Betty Evans wore a gown of brown velvet.

The Tech orchestra furnished music and there were 75 guests present.

Miss Travis Weds Marvin Hammett.

Of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Mae Travis, of Riverdale, Ga., and Marvin Hammett, of Jonesboro, Ga., which took place Saturday evening, November 27, at 7 o'clock, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Toombs McGaughey, in Kirkwood. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Toombs McGaughey.

After the ceremony the bridal party was entertained at dinner at the Ansley hotel.

Miss Connell Is Hostess to Bride.

Miss Genevieve Connell was hostess at a bridge-tea Saturday at her home, in compliment to Mrs. William Brotherton Walker, a recent bride.

The home was beautifully decorated in yellow and white chrysanthemums.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. G. N. Connell and Mrs. O. H. Bradbury.

The guests included 20 friends of the hostess and honor guest.

Xmas Plans Given Today For Biltmore

The Yuletide festivities at the Biltmore hotel will begin Tuesday, December 21, with a tea-dance in the Georgian ballroom. On Wednesday there will be the regular "debutante night" dinner-dance, to be followed on Tuesday with a tea-dance. On Christmas eve there will be a tea-dance from 5 until 7 in the afternoon and a dinner-dance in the evening. Sunday evening the concert dinner will be a delightful feature of the week-end.

On Tuesday, December 28; Thursday, December 30, and Saturday, January 1, there will be tea-dances in the ballroom, while on Wednesday evening there will be the regular dinner-dance.

A brilliant ball is announced for New Year's eve, dinner to be served at 9 o'clock and the dance lasting until 2 o'clock. There will be three well-known orchestras from out of town for this occasion, which will surpass last year's celebration in every detail. Exquisite imported souvenirs from France have been ordered for the ladies, while those for the gentlemen come from Austria.

At all of the Christmas affairs there will reign the merry holiday spirit. Reservations may be made by calling Mr. Negri at Hemlock 5200.

Bringing the holiday season to a delightful climax and initiating the winter season of 1927 will be the tea-dance on Saturday, January 1, in the ballroom.

Miss Brown Weds Charles D. Grimes.

Albany, Ga., December 4.—Miss Annie May Brown and Charles Douglas Grimes were married at the home of Mrs. A. M. Brown, on Flint street, Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, in the presence of many friends.

Mrs. Roy Hadden sang "At Dawning" and Miss Stella Walrath played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin.

Dr. James B. Turner performed the ceremony. The bride was beautiful in a suit dress of tan charmeen trimmed in tan fur. She wore a small model hat to match. Her shoes and bag were of cherry patent leather and blended beautifully to complete a handsome costume. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Miss Hazel Hall was the only bridesmaid. Richard E. Cherry was best man.

The bride and groom left after the ceremony for Washington, D. C., where they will spend their honeymoon.

Miss Edith Tucker Honored at Party.

Miss Edith Tucker, whose marriage to Owen W. Daniel will take place on December 29, was honoree at a party given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. H. C. Bridges at her home on Peachtree.

An interesting musical contest was held, after which each guest was given the opportunity to give advice to the bride and groom. This advice was bound into an attractive bell-shaped book and presented to the bride-elect with the wish that it would prove helpful.

Just as Miss Mary MacLaughlin concluded a lovely vocal selection, a wedding bell was rung and Miss Tucker was showered with many lovely miscellaneous gifts.

Dainty refreshments were served and a miniature bride was given each guest as a favor.

Marriages Take Place In Quitman, Ga.

Quitman, Ga., December 4.—The marriage of Miss Annie Rose Wright and John Mabbett took place November 27 at Jackson. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother the wedding was a very quiet event and after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Mabbett left for Richmond, Va. Mr. Mabbett is the son of Mrs. Joseph Mabbett of Quitman and a very popular young man whose many friends here will join in cordial congratulations.

Bowman-Bennett.

The marriage of Miss Rebecca Bowman and Paul Hansell Bennet will be solemnized ne. Wednesday evening, December 8, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bowman. The bride's sister, Ida, will be maid of honor, Miss Mildred Bennet will be bridesmaid. Spencer Bennet will be best man and Warren Dorough, of Atlanta, groomsman. Miss Goldie McRae, of Mount Vernon, a classmate of Miss Bowman at Wesleyan, will play the bridal music and two other collegemates, Misses Louise Whitley and Mildred Strozier, will come down from Macon for the wedding. After the ceremony a buffet supper will be served.

Butler-Williams.

Miss Nellie Butler and Ralph J. Williams were married November 20 at Franklin Springs, Va. Mr. Williams is a nephew of W. W. and A. E. Williams of Quitman.

Mrs. Blanton Gives Bridge Party.

Mrs. B. C. Blanton was hostess Wednesday afternoon at a bridge party at her apartment in West End.

The attractive apartment was tastefully decorated with numerous baskets of large yellow chrysanthemums, the yellow color scheme being effectively carried out in every detail.

The prize winners were Miss Lucile Morris, Mrs. W. H. Blair and Mrs. J. C. Durham.

The guests included Mrs. W. H. Blair, Mrs. L. C. Adams, Mrs. Oscar Hardin, Mrs. J. L. King, Mrs. J. C. Durham, Miss Lucile Morris, Mrs. M. R. Roberts and Mrs. B. M. Morrison.

Father and Son Banquet Given.

A delightful "Father and Son Night" was tendered the boys between the ages of 10 and 14 and their fathers by the mothers of the sixth grades, assisted by the Parent-Teacher association, of John B. Gordon school. A banquet featured the evening, followed by a most enjoyable program.

Professor Willis A. Sutton was the principal speaker, the subject of his address being "Fathers and Sons." William Clyatt, of High sixth grade, served as toastmaster.

On the program were: Rev. George L. King, William Clyatt, Boys' High orchestra, O. A. Spruell, Olin Shumate, Paul Crutchfield, John Clotworthy, Bennie Clyburn, Frank Norton, W. A. Wallace, Bert Flynn, Harry Starrett, W. F. Jones, Paul Crutchfield, John Clotworthy and Professor Willis A. Sutton.

Power Co. Auxiliary To Hold Meeting.

The Woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Railway and Power company will hold its regular business meeting at 79 Piedmont avenue, Thursday, December 9, 2:30 p. m. All members are urged to attend this meeting as it will be the last business meeting of this year.

A Christmas tree for the kiddies is planned for December 23, and members who have not already registered the names of their children must do so not later than Thursday, as this will be the last opportunity.

The president, Mrs. E. T. Stallings, announced that the auxiliary is in fine condition and a large program is planned for the next 12 months. The organization is anticipating building a club house in addition to other work planned.

League of Women Voters Organize in Various Colleges Throughout State of Georgia

The above group presents three attractive officers of the University of Georgia League of Women Voters. Left, Miss Louise Balk, vice president; center, Miss Melville Doughty, of Augusta, Ga., president and who is also chairman of the 18th congressional district, Georgia League of Women Voters; right, Miss Ivy Hixson, secretary and treasurer of the university's league. Photograph of Miss Doughty by Arnett studio, Athens, Ga.

Since the recent organization of "New Voters" in various colleges throughout the state, the Atlanta League of Women Voters has had many inquiries regarding these young girls, why they organized and what they are doing. The League of Women Voters over the country, realizing the necessity of the coming generation taking an active part for better government when they are ready to take their places in the world, turned naturally to the colleges to find there the intelligence that is necessary to increase the number of active, responsive and informed voters of the future.

One of the most interesting and active "New Voters" groups in the state is at the University of Georgia in Athens. This group was organized early in October and three of its members represented the college at the Georgia League's eighth annual convention in Savannah, October 28-30, taking quite an important part in the sessions. Miss Melville Doughty, of Augusta is the president of the league, Louise Balk, also of Augusta, is the vice president, Miss Ivy Hickson, of Augusta, is the secretary-treasurer.

Voter's Calendar.

A "Voter's Calendar," giving full information on registration and elections for 1927 will soon be compiled by the new university league. The year's work has already been outlined along the following lines: January, Miss Mary Jane Baggs, chairman of legal status for women, will discuss "Georgia Laws Concerning Women." February will hear a report on "Women in Industry," by its chairman, Miss Ivy Hickson, preceded by a visit to various mills. In March, Miss Louise Carmichael will talk on "Clark County Schools." April will bring a message from its president, Miss Mell Doughty on, "The Childrens' Code," while finishing up the scholastic year will be a session on "Roads and Bond Issues," by Miss Willie May Cook. The university league also plans a visit sessions of the city councils, city and county courts.

It will have the cooperation of the Georgia state league in any of its undertakings and is fortunate in being located in the city where the ninth annual convention of the league will be held in 1927.

Brenau College League.

At Brenau college, a "New Voters" league was organized last September, over 30 girls organizing the first day. Miss Helen Harris and Miss Aleen Wolf were the two delegates from their group represented at the Georgia convention. A tentative program has been adopted for the year and the following officers were elected: Miss Aleen Wolf, president; Miss Mary Jane Gaffney, first vice president; Miss Delphine Pfefferkorn, second vice president; Miss Ruth Fain, secretary and Miss Lillian Bates, treasurer. Miss Alma Adams, chairman of memberships; Miss Louise Singleton, publicity; Miss Catherine Garth, chairman of legislation and Miss Lillian Bates, chairman of finance. The college as a whole is reported as being very enthusiastic and applications for membership in the organization are coming in constantly.

Agnes Scott League.

The Agnes Scott college in Decatur, Ga., has also formed a "New Voters" group. Miss Eleanore Raoul, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters, Miss Williamson, third regional director and Miss Jean S. Davis, professor of economics and sociology of the college, was the inspiration behind this organization. Among the officers are president, Miss Louisa White; first vice president, Blanche Carson Berry; second vice president, Margaret Rice; secretary, Georgia Watson and treasurer, Elaine Jacobsen. Miss Louisa White and Miss Georgia Watson represented the Agnes Scott New Voters at the convention in Savannah, from October 28 to 30.

Mission Study At Second Baptist.

One of the most interesting meetings of the month among Baptist women in Atlanta was the mission study conference, over which Mrs. J. D. Rhodes presided, on Tuesday, November 30, from 10 to 12 o'clock, at the Second Baptist church. About 50 women were present, these being divisional, district and W. M. S. mission study chairmen.

After the opening song the devotional by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, mission study chairman of the north central division, spoke on "Arousing the Unenlisted." Mrs. W. M. Jones, associational superintendent, spoke encouraging words on the importance of mission study.

Mrs. Rhodes called for volunteer teachers for mission study classes, and 27 women responded. Over 2,000 mission study seals were awarded in the Atlanta association during the past year, and leaven is truly leavening the whole lump.

College Park Woman's Club Will Sponsor Annual Bazar

The College Park Woman's club announces that its annual bazar will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, December 7 and 8, in the building occupied by T. C. King's Real Estate office, this courtesy having been extended to the club by Mr. King.

There will be quite a display of lovely articles both useful and ornamental, each in charge of its respective chairman. Mrs. Charles Center has the lingerie booth; Mrs. Peter Haden has the household linens; Mrs. Thomas Brobston and Mrs. Dillon Akers have aprons; Mrs. Freeman Doss has novelties; Mrs. Charles Evarts, dolls; Mrs. Emmett Martin has jellies, jams, pickles, canned fruits and candy; Mrs. Charles Mount and Mrs. D. R. Nesbitt have flowers and decorations, and Mrs. Winton Thomas will have charge of the luncheons.

These chairmen will be the hostesses of the occasion and invite their friends from Atlanta, Hapeville, East Point, College Park and the community at large to visit the bazar and see the pretty things which are on display.

An effort has been made to price the articles most reasonably as it is the desire of the bazar committee that all the friends of the club will do their Christmas shopping with them.

The luncheons are to be a conspicuous feature of the two days of the bazar. Attractive menus have been planned and all of the food is to be home cooked.

Junior Music Club Plans To Sing Christmas Carols

The Atlanta Junior Music club will hold its next meeting Saturday, December 11, at 2:30 o'clock, in Edico hall, when a program of Christmas carols will be given. The chorus will meet as usual, immediately before, at 1:30 o'clock.

The program, the fifth in a series of study programs outlined by the National Federation of Music clubs, will feature the Christmas carols of different countries and the importance of carol singing in the early development of music.

Miss Nana Tucker, chairman for the afternoon, who has for years had the custom of carol singing in her piano class at Christmas time, has arranged the program with a special view to presenting the Junior Music club chorus, under the direction of Miss Ruth Weegand.

Besides the chorus, Miss Tucker will be assisted by a group of children from her piano class—only those pupils who are members of the club—and, as an added feature of especial distinction, Mme. Louise Varkonyi, concert soprano, who will sing a group of French and Hungarian carols.

Included in the program will be traditional English, French and German carols and one Christmas hymn, sung by the chorus under the direction of Miss Weegand, with Elizabeth King at the piano; an old Gascon carol, "Infant So Gentle," sung by three little girls, eight years of age, Frances Stewart, Nancy Raines and Imogen Trent, with Emily Plummer, aged 11, at the piano; a Martin Luther carol, of the 13th century, sung by Marie Stalker, Evelyn Wix, Emily Plummer, Nancy Raines and Imogen Trent, with Frances Stewart, aged eight, at the piano; the French Epiphany carol, "We Three Kings of Orient Are," sung by three boys of 10 years, accompanied by Elizabeth King; and the beautiful singing of Mme. Varkonyi which is a special compliment to the Junior Music club. Mme. Varkonyi will be accompanied by her husband, Dr. Bela Varkonyi, distinguished pianist and composer.

The recitation, "And There Were Shepherds Abiding in the Fields," will be given by Emily Plummer; "The Origin of Carols," by Sam Young; the origin of gifts and origin of candles at Christmas, by Evelyn Wix and Marie Stalker.

Mrs. G. Bingham Bache, director of the club, requests a full attendance as plans are to be announced for the Christmas party. Mrs. Walter F. Barton, secretary, will be at the desk to enroll new members. To non-members the price of admission is 25 cents.

Robert E. Lee U. D. C. To Meet Tuesday.

The Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., College Park, will meet Tuesday, December 7, at 3:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. V. C. Mason, Virginia avenue.

Mrs. Clyde Flemin is chairman of program. The afternoon will be devoted to a "Memorial" in honor of the late historian, Mrs. P. G. Rauschenberg.

Un Mot Ici Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Richmond, the general convention city, so rich in historical setting, proved of vast import to those whose taste ran to old traditions, bits of history and land marks dear to the heart of every member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Our division president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, made a pilgrimage to the battlefield of Seven Pines, where her father, Major Frederick, was wounded in the war between the states, in the battle which occurred May 30, 1862. This battlefield is accessible on the Williamsburg road. It is needless to say that this trip was of paramount interest to Mrs. McKenzie and indeed, to all the delegation from Georgia.

St. John's Church.

The quaint little edifice called St. John's church on East Broad street was the mecca of many pilgrimages during the convention. It was here that Patrick Henry delivered his immortal speech, and awakened the entire world with the famous words: "Give me liberty or give me death." A bronze tablet may be seen near the pew commemorating the spot where the inspired orator stood, placed there in 1911, more than 100 years after the impassioned words fell from the lips of Virginia's inimitable statesman. Added to the interest these trips to historical places afforded were some rather ludicrous incidents. Upon one occasion, the writer, in company with the charming Mrs. Walter Grace, and Miss Caroline Patterson, the efficient and versatile president of the Sidney Lanier chapter, U. D. C., of Macon, and Mrs. Mark O'Daniel, another of Macon's illustrious daughters, visited St. John's church. Our party was accosted at the door by a very pompous and venerable negro who seemed to feel his importance at being caretaker. He conducted us to the pew where Patrick Henry stood and delivered the oration, and then with great empressment, quoted a few of the famous words. Seeing that we were quite properly impressed he ventured forth into other paths of imparting knowledge.

"Here, where you stand, Patrick Henry stood when he spoke them words I've just recited to you! Over their at that baptismal fount Pocahontas was baptized!" He paused for effect.

Miss Patterson and the writer, both boasting of lineal descendancy from the aforesaid heroine of history pressed forward saying with one breath: "And, you say, Pocahontas was baptized there? We are descended from her!" Imagine our dismay when the aged colored dignitary, thinking we challenged the veracity of his historical declaration took instant issue with us, saying in a voice that all might hear:

"I can't help that, ladies! You-all warn't here then!"

Luncheon at Lee camp.

The visiting delegation was entertained at luncheon Thursday at the R. E. Lee camp, Confederate Soldiers' home. This place is replete with interest and it was indeed a pleasure to be shown the various relics by the veterans who wore the grey. Here mounted, his valiant head held high, as though feeling the honor with which he passed through many battles stands Old Sorrel—Stonewall Jackson's tried and trusted steed. Cherished during the life time of his noble master who received his mortal hurt while in his saddle, his last days were passed in peace and plenty, an honored hero of the war. A veteran in grey tells his story with reverence and the tale is ever listened to in hushed silence, for in the attitude of that noble horse one feels the patriotic call to action, the unquenchable ardor which lived and had its being in the proud spirit of the 60's.

These verses are on the case in which Old Sorrel stands:

"Stand on, thou noble steed,
As long as time shall last;
You helped in many a valorous deed,
Far back in the past.

"We will keep you through the ages,
Because you served us well;
For all of history's pages,
Do not half, your story tell!"

A delightful repast was served to the guests at 1:30 at the Soldiers' home, at which time fully 500 enjoyed the hospitality thus shown. An interesting program was arranged and enjoyed during the meal. Spirituals were sung. Altogether it was a most delightful occasion, where love for the venerable hosts in grey formed the background of the day's pleasure. The writer, in company with the Georgia division's charming honorary president, Mrs. W. S. Coleman, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. C. Covington, of far away Minnesota, made a tour after the luncheon of the famous Battle Abbey. On the way, meeting one of the numerous veterans in grey, ornamented with a cross of honor, Mrs. Covington thus addressed him: "You see how I love you all. I came all the way from Minnesota to see you." He clasped her hand cordially, while a smile suffused the ruddy noble old face.

"Bless your soul, lady, that's good of you! I got my Yankee wife 'way out in Minnesota, and I'm blessed if she isn't the best Daughter of the Confederacy yet!"

Battle Abbey, imposing, majestic in mien, sometimes called the Confederate Memorial institute, is the center of a huge plot of ground of six and a half acres. The grounds are beautifully laid out and are made attractive with rare shrubbery, trees and flowers. The building is of sandstone and is of classic architecture, with only two windows, one at each side of the heavy bronze doors.

The entrance hall is magnificent in marble and bronze. The walls of the south gallery are adorned by spendid mural paintings, military in effect. The John Barton Payne collection of paintings, which is a gift to the commonwealth of Virginia, is displayed in the north gallery. Most beautiful of all, and ranking far above its companion pieces, is "The Adoration of the Shepherds," by Murillo. Many valuable histories of the south are in this room. The annex is opposite the entrance, and is a memorial hall, as the inscription in the mantle above the door testifies:

"Memorial hall. R. E. Lee camp No. 1, Confederate Veterans." This hall contains 150 portraits gathered by Lee camp, which is said to be the most complete and valuable collection of portraits of Confederate statesmen and heroes in the world.

Jackson Chapter Happy at Winning Membership Cup

Jackson, Ga., December 4.—(Special.)—The showing made at the state convention in Statesboro by the Larkin Watson chapter, U. D. C., is most pleasing to friends of the organization. The local chapter won the Alice Baxter silver loving cup for the largest increase in members, between the ages of 18 and 25, during the past year, and was presented a star flag for contributing to every department of U. D. C. work. There are 17 star chapters in the state, it was announced. The local U. D. C. has been active in patriotic work for several years and just now is enjoying a period of progress and expansion. Mrs. H. O. Ball, president, represented the chapter at the state convention.

Chapter Reports

COVINGTON.

The Covington chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held a most interesting meeting at the library with Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, president, in the chair.

A letter was read from Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president, telling of the selection of Covington for the state convention of 1927. The president appointed a ways and means committee as follows: Mrs. R. M. Mobley, chairman; Mrs. R. A. Norris and Miss Charlie Porter and the chairmen of each circle.

The following names were voted on for membership: Mrs. Reuben M. Tuck, Mrs. P. T. Austin and Mrs. John H. Wood.

Mrs. O. W. Porter gave a report in reference to placing world war relics in city park and motion was carried to place them where they would not interfere with the Confederate monument, which is in the center of the park.

Mrs. Evans Lunsford donated pansy plants to be planted on soldiers' graves, which were accepted with grateful thanks. Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, president; Mrs. R. E. Everitt and Mrs. J. O. Cooper, delegates, gave excellent reports on the state convention held at Statesboro recently, which were intensely interesting and greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Emmett Piper will be chairman of the December meeting.

HAWKINSVILLE.

The first meeting of the O. C Horne chapter since the state convention was held in the assembly room, elaborately decorated with autumn flowers, for this is always a gala occasion as our delegates invariably bring something home to the chapter when they sally forth to a convention.

We are called the banner chapter, and certainly have had a taking way with banners. Naturally to our delegates a new banner, one that had never been awarded before, seemed desirable, and so they brought back the gold star banner of all the star chapters of the Georgia division of 1925 and 1926.

It seems kind to let the other chapters know that we received this trophy with an appropriating eye, that we like it and right now see no reason why we should not keep it indefinitely. Of course the delegates reported.

As a matter of fact they began reporting the minute they reached home. We simply could not give them time at the meeting to tell all that they wanted to, but only a motion to adjourn could stop them.

However, that did not deter their ardor, for the last that we heard of them they were still talking Statesboro and the convention.

STATESBORO.

Armistic day was charmingly observed by the Statesboro chapter, U. D. C., at their meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. Inman Foy. The members were met at the door by little Miss Foy, who pinned red poppies on each one.

After a very impressive talk on Armistice day by Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Lichtenstein read a most interesting account of the origin of the use of the red poppy. The chapter president, Mrs. Julian Lane, told very entertainingly of the many leaders that were given by the south to the United States during the world war. It was a list we are proud of claiming.

Frank Mikell gave a very appropriate and interesting reading on Armistice day. The program was closed with a short talk by Mrs. Smith.

In a business session held by the president immediately after the program reports were given by the different officers, the meeting was adjourned for a social half hour.

The hostesses, assisted by Mrs. W. T. Smith and Miss Powell, served a delicious salad course with coffee.

JACKSON.

Armistice day was most fittingly observed by the Larkin D. Watson chapter, U. D. C., at Jackson, the brilliant program of the day prepared by these able workers being followed by an old-fashioned barbecue in honor of the world war veterans of the county at the noon hour.

The business section of the town and the homes were decorated with flags and during the speaking hour all business houses were closed.

At 9:30 o'clock the Jackson Rifles staged a sham battle around the courthouse square, after which they, with the world war veterans, the United Daughters of the Confederacy and a large number of patriotic citizens marched to the cemetery, where the graves of the beloved boys who paid the supreme sacrifice were decorated with flags and flowers. Major Joel B. Mallett paid a glorious tribute to their deeds of heroism and sacrifice, after which the Jackson Rifles fired salutes and sounded taps. One of the graves was that of Marcus W. Beck, Jr., son of Judge Marcus W. Beck, of Atlanta, the eloquent speaker of the day.

At 11 o'clock a large crowd assembled at the school auditorium, where the beautiful and inspiring exercises were held. Elaborate decorations of flags and bunting, with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums were effectively used by the committee on decoration. Mrs. Park Newton, chairman. The immense service flag of the county, with its many stars of blue and gold, served as a central decoration and background for the stage.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" resounded through the large auditorium and was followed by the invocation by Rev. Walter S. Adams. Mrs. Otis Ball, the efficient president of the Larkin D. Watson chapter, made a few introductory remarks and after the chorus, "Tis a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," by the high school students, Colonel J. Threatt Moore, in words of love and appreciation, introduced the speaker, Judge Marcus W. Beck, who 40 years ago made his first patriotic speech in Jackson. His wonderful message to the boys who served in the greatest struggle of the age was received with marked interest and applause.

Crosses of service were delivered by Mrs. Otis Ball and Miss Mary Newton, recorder of crosses, to Mrs. J. M. Finley, mother of James W. Finley, who gave his life for his country; Henry M. Michael, Major George E. Mallet, Major Joel B. Mallet, Van Miller Freeman, Kirk Biles, Captain Smith Settle, Lieutenant Walter D. Pope, Albert W. Newton and Stillwell Ball.

The crowd adjourned to the school grounds, where the sumptuous barbecue was served these honor guests, the Jackson Rifles and a large number of invited guests and visitors. A distinguished guest of the occasion was Mrs. L. D. Watson, past president of the chapter, which bears her husband's name, who arrived on Wednesday evening, from Coldwater, Mich., to be present. The entire program was one of the most beautiful and inspiring ever carried out.

DECATUR.

The regular meeting of the Agnes Lee chapter, U. D. C., was held Friday afternoon, November 12, at 3 o'clock, at the chapter house in Decatur. Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, president, in the chair.

In addition to the regular routine the newly-elected officers and appointed chairmen were introduced to the chapter and a report given by each. Mrs. Hammond, chairman of the Soldiers' home committee, called special attention to the privilege afforded the chapter of giving the home the customary Thanksgiving shower.

Mrs. J. A. Campbell gave a most instructive talk on the merging of the Nacoochee and Rabun Gap schools and told something of the work of each.

Following her talk, Mrs. Campbell was presented with a U. D. C. president's pin, the presentation being made by Mrs. W. H. S. Hamilton.

Mrs. W. A. Ozmer gave a very interesting report from the annual state convention held at Statesboro, Ga.

The convention also urged that special attention and aid be given the Confederate veterans. In the absence of John McClelland, a world war veteran, who was to receive the cross of service, his sister, Miss Marianne McClelland, was intrusted with the cross by Mrs. Wellington Stevenson. Miss McClelland accepted it with words of deep appreciation and feeling.

The general officers, with Mrs. G. W. Glausier as chairman, made charming hostesses for the afternoon.

Adeline Baum Chapter Has 40 Present.

About 40 members of Adeline Baum, C. of C., gathered at the home of Miss Baum and a most interesting meeting was held the first of the fall season.

Reports were given from the C. of C. convention held with us in July. Owing to the absence of our director, we were unable to meet sooner.

Plans were talked of making funds to help with our Christmas charity and our Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Baum scholarship of $75, which we give to some worthy girl from our county in memory of our beloved director's parents. It was decided to have a tag day on the Saturday following, which we did and made $35. We are planning to have a rummage sale and sell fruits and fireworks during the holidays.

A program was gotten up for our January meeting at the home of R. E. Lee. Miss Baum concluded the program by telling us some of the interesting points she visited in her travels, among them being Washington and Lee chapel at Lexington, Va., many interesting places at Fredericksburg, Va., and Washington, D. C.

Budget And Insurance Debated In Article By Mrs. Warthen

When you think of the varied amounts and conditions governing the incomes of the millions of commercial enterprises, clubs, orders and families of this great country of ours you can readily see that no model budget can be made to exactly meet the needs of all of them but there are a few basic rules which do apply. The budget that the individual builds from the study of these fundamentals may not at first be a perfect structure but is a forward step in the right direction and the very fact that it requires some personal thought increases its value to the individual. One of the great missions of the budget is to set one thinking for oneself, realizing the present value of the income to the family and planning for an increase in three directions. First, in the quality and quantity of its buying power; second, its provision for future wants and emergencies; and third, an increase in the actual amount. A budget encourages one to set a goal, concentrate their energies toward its attainment and finally to reach it with a heart full of happiness and contentment.

Another Feature.

Another of its great features is its elasticity. Though it shows the way and stiffens the resolve in face of the temptation presented by fads and fashions it is not so rigid that it cannot be pulled in a little here and stretched a little there. Instead of denying one pleasures it is of the greatest benefit in helping them get what they really want. It only suggests a little parsimony here to add an extra dollar to some other and more worthy purchase.

This system is as necessary to the family who owns their farm, store, factory or mercantile business as to the family who lives on a salary or other regular monthly or yearly income. Possibly it is of greater value to the first class because expenses are much harder to keep track of and control when there is a whole year's allowance in hand and no check on it. Buying is a business and should be done with just as much thought and understanding of values as selling.

Some people have the idea that if one owns their home they are automatically absolved from all need of keeping accounts. They are very wrong for the principal object of budgeting is not simply keeping account of the amount due each month for rent but a guidebook to show the financial condition at all times and to direct everyone to the stronghold of prosperity call systematic saving. The most popular room in this tower is that known as insurance, for there is exhibited a plan whereby even the most humble may build future stability. They may buy policies that will not only be of value to the dependents of the family in event of death, but in case of emergency they may provide collateral for a loan and will at all times give prestige to one's credit. Most policies bear dividends and help to carry themselves and may in old age provide for the necessities of life. These things and not merely the recording of the rent notes is the high calling of "keeping accounts beforehand."

Frame Work.

And since budgeting is simply "keeping accounts beforehand" the first frame work is reared on the foundation of past experiences. The cooperation of all the working members of the family is required. First, an estimate of the income of the past year is used to reckon the amount available for the coming year. It is easy to find how much was spent by simply deducting the savings and investments from this amount, or in case of a deficit by adding it.

With that information you are ready to begin. Make a list of the necessary expenditures. (a) Food, set down average amount of weekly or monthly bills. (b) Shelter, if the house is owned the sum of taxes, insurance, repairs and interest is considered or if rented the monthly charge. (c) Operating expenses, include light, water, heat, telephone, laundry, servant hire, etc. (d) Clothing—approximate amount spent previous year and make allowance for any children who are starting to school or college. (e) Miscellaneous expenses cover pledges to the church and charity, recreation, health and items of like nature, (f) And lastly, insurance savings and investments. These explain themselves. If there are other expenses that cannot be classified under these heads or that it would be wiser to consider separately an extra column may be made. Add the estimated amounts and compare with the available income.

Now take a piece of paper and with the aid of a ruler draw vertical lines, making six or more columns and write the above names at the top of each. Divide the amount of the estimated expenses into monthly quotas and apportion it as needed, being just as liberal as possible with the I. S. & I. column.

To proceed from this point, any blank daybook or memorandum pad may be used to jot down the nature and amount of daily purchases. At the end of each week these should be grouped to correspond with the columns of the budget balance sheet and the totals transferred to their respective places. Subtract from the allowance as shown there and the result will show the exact financial status of each department.

Save Daily Accounts.

By saving these daily account sheets and comparing them yearly a great many mistakes may be avoided. They will furnish valuable information regarding prices paid for certain articles and amounts used, coal and wood for example. These records will also make a splendid buying guide from the standpoint of durability of linens, utensils and clothes.

There have been scores of arguments as to whether paying cash or using monthly charge accounts and paying by check is the better plan, I think the success or failure of either depends entirely on the disposition of the individual and that a little thought will determine the best plan in any particular case. Perseverance and the will to succeed will finally triumph over all obstacles and the smallest success will prove the key to greater prosperity.

Further help and information may be secured from almost any bank and splendid booklets may be had free of charge from all of our big life insurance companies. If still more knowledge of the subject is desired one can find valuable books on the shelves of any library.

Lamar County Federation Is Headed by Mrs. J. R. Corry

The Lamar county federation, comprised of five clubs, meets semi-annually. The spring meeting is usually devoted to a literary program with a prominent speaker. The fall meeting is a business one, with a report from each club, the election of officers and other necessary business discussed.

On November 5, The Three Arts club, of Barnesville, was hostess to the federation. Mrs. E. L. Coleman, president of the hostess club and the federation was very cordial in greeting to the guests. The clubs were well represented and all are making progress in every line of endeavor, sponsored by the respective clubs. The reports were very encouraging. The representatives of the club, who submitted reports were Pedbone Woman's club, Mrs. Frank Askin; Milner Woman's club, Mrs. Carmichael; Johnstonville Woman's club, Mrs. Jack Farley; Barnesville Woman's club, Mrs. J. A. Covey; The Three Arts club, Mrs. Powell Cotter.

One of the most important matters brought up for discussion was way and means of beautifying the highways through Lamar county. The advisability of planting native trees along the roadside was discussed. The presence of signs which deface the scenic beauty of the highway and mar the landscape view, was deplored and an effective ruling of their regulation urged. A committee from each club was appointed to report the matter at the spring meeting, composed of Mrs. Powell Cotter, Mrs. J. W. Reeves, Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. Grady Dumas and Miss Obie Manry. The most enjoyable numbers of a well-rendered program were a solo by Miss Jessie Collier, reading by Miss Emily Jordan, and a piano solo by Miss Margaret M. Mullen.

The officers elected for the following year are: president, Mrs. J. A. Covey; vice president, Miss Susie Mae Manry; secretary, Mrs. Fred Bush.

A committee of The Three Arts served delicious refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

The Woman's club, of Barnesville, will be the hostess to the federation in April.

Thanksgiving for Tallulah Falls School.

The best dividends which the friends of the Tallulah Falls school can receive come to them from the hearts and minds of the young people who pass through their doors. From one of our graduates who is having her second year in the normal department of Berea college comes the following letter expressive of her appreciation of the school, the federated women and their splendid principal:

"Berea College,
"Berea, Kentucky.

"Dear Miss Davis:

"We are just back from our Thanksgiving dinner, where we had somvery interesting talks and songs about Thanksgiving. I have just been thinking today of the many things I have to be thankful for, and among them all stands out most in my mind the privileges that I am having to make life worth more so that sometime I may be able to help other people. As I think of all these things my mind goes back to the time when you took my sisters and me into your school. I have often wondered what would have become of us four if we had not come to Tallulah when we did. I am afraid we girls don't show our appreciation for the many things that you are doing for us as we should. When I think of your giving your life in loving service to our mountain people, a prayer always comes up in my heart for you, and I pray too, that I may learn how to do some work that will help people to be better and live more efficient lives. I am certainly thankful for our Tallulah school, and the dear people that are making it possible for us to be in the school, there and here. I like Berea better this year than I did last year, and Susie says she is liking it more and more. We are both studying hard and trying to make good in everything. We want to be worthy of Tallulah Falls school."

General Federation Board Will Meet.

The board meeting of the general Federation of Women's clubs, which will be held in Washington January 11 to 13, will bring together women from every state in the union. Each state is to be represented by one director, who is the voting member, and by the state federation president, who is a conference member only, but permitted to participate in discussion of the questions to come before the board.

Chairmen of the eight departments of work—American home, education fine arts, international relations, legislation, American citizenship, public welfare, and press and publicity—will be present and will report on the progress of the work. In addition to these reports each state director will give an account of her own official activities and will tell of the main accomplishments of the clubs in her state.

There will be in attendance also members of the board of trustees, policy committee and finance committee, who will discuss with others plans for future work.

Byromville Club Observes Arbor Day.

The Byronville School Improvement club met Friday afternoon, November 26, at the home of Mrs. J. M. Dupree, with Mrs. G. L. Giles and Mrs. Dupree joint hostesses. The president, Mrs. E. B. Davis, presided.

"Arbor day" was observed by planting trees and winter grass in the new park. Two memorial trees will be planted in honor of two deceased members, Mrs. J. O. Roberts and Mrs. C. W. McKenzie. A tree was planted in honor of Governor Walker.

Mrs. J. H. Page was chairman of program. A sketch of the life of Corra Harris was read by Mrs. A. J. Shirah, and Miss Rosa Woodruff read an article on "Armistice day."

Department Work Is Stressed by Second District

Department work and district responsibility was the keynote of the annual convention of the second district held in Tifton last Wednesday stressed by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, state president, and Mrs. I. A. Heard, of Moultrie, district president, in talks made before the convention.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Heard. Mrs. C. J. Knapp was elected secretary to succeed Mrs. Watt, of Thomasville, who recently resigned. Mrs. H. H. Tift, president of the Tifton club, welcomed the guests to the city. Mrs. J. A. Horn, of Boston, responded, voicing the appreciation of the visitors for the hospitable welcome. Mrs. Heard presented the distinguished visitors, who were Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president; Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of Atlanta, a former state president and now a Tallulah Falls trustee, and Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, who told the convention of the book shower that is being sponsored by the clubs of the state for the inmates of the sanitarium at Alto.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the Ella F. White memorial endowment fund, told the purpose of this fund and made a plea that clubs pay up their pledges as soon as possible. The aim, Mrs. Fitzpatrick stated, is to have a fund of $25,000 and the interest from this fund is to be used in defraying federation expenses.

Mrs. Brantley urged club members to attend the mid-biennial council to be held in Albany next March at which the national president, Mrs. Sherman will attend.

The reports given by the district chairmen and presidents of the fifteen clubs of the district which were represented, showed that the year had been a most successful one.

Musical numbers given included choruses by members of the Tifton club, a violin solo by Emerson Mitchell, of Tifton, and a piano solo by Mrs. E. M. Hendry.

The invitation extended by the Worth While club, of Moultrie, for the convention to be held in Moultrie next year was accepted.

The business sessions were held in the First Bantist church, which was decorated with the Tifton club colors, yellow and white.

At noon a seated luncheon was served in the lower floor of the library building.

Brunswick Club Sponsors Program To Beautify City

Mrs. C. V. Cate, president of the Brunswick Woman's club, touched upon interesting projects at the October meeting held last week, and stated that the city beautification contest would be repeated for this year, on a larger and broader scale than was the first venture.

Chas. W. Leavitt, city zoning specialist, will deliver an address before the first program meeting, his subject to be "Street and Park Trees; Their Selection and Planting." This work of beautifying Brunswick has long been a special theme of the woman's club, most of the work of this nature in Brunswick having been accomplished through the efforts of this group of women. Extensive plans are now in the making by the civic department, of which Mrs. M. B. Merritt is chairman, and as soon as the work of removing the tires, rails and light poles from the principal streets is completed, interesting announcement will be forthcoming by this branch of the woman's club, which will work hand in hand with the city. Circulars will be distributed by Mrs. Merritt advising what and when to plant in the way of perennials, annuals and other flowers and shrubs for fall planting, which will be very helpful to prospective gardeners. Letters of appreciation were read from winners of prizes in the city beautification contest of last year, in which it was stated that they would again enter the contest to be inaugurated. Col. F. E. Twitty, patriotic and enhtusiastic citizen, provided the money for these prizes.

The club went on record as indorsing the amendment to the state constitution to be voted on in the general election in November which provides that county funds be made available for payint registrars, who keep the vital statistics records in the counties of the state. This has been a law in Glynn county for the past two years, but with the amendment voted on favorably in the election, will become mandatory over the entire state. Mrs. Cate urged all members to aid in passing this most important measure, and also to register at once for voting in the coming bond election in this city.

Miss Martha McAlpin, of the University of Georgia, will be in the city the first week in November, to give a free course on child training, at the Memorial High school. Miss McAlpin comes under the auspices of the home economics department of the club, of which Miss Catherine Spence is chairman.

Children's Book Week.

Children's book week comes in November, and as usual, the club will observe this date in some interesting way. Members and friends of the club are asked to contribute books and magazines for distribution over the city, to Mrs. Joseph Borchardt, library chairman, who has charge of this feature of club work.

Attractive year books or programs, will be issued by the woman's club, these proving very helpful last year.

A number of new members were added to the club roll at yesterday's meeting, including Mesdames Edwin Fendig, R. S. Bedsinger, Robert S. Browne, Robert Sparks, A. N. Shelander, W. B. Williams, W. C. Little, and F. N. Aldrich.

"The Georgians" Honor Mrs. J. H. Redding.

The founder and president of "The Georgians"—one of the leading women's organizations of Waycross—Mrs. J. H. Redding, has been elected honorary president, having declined to be re-elected to the active presidency. The active officers elected are: President, Mrs. T. J. Darling; first vice president, Mrs. F. A. Bates; second vice president, Mrs. W. W. Sharpe; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank McDonald; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. L. Garrett; treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Vann.

Fine Art Department Chairman Issues An Excellent Report

Mrs. W. R. Johnston, of Sylvester, chairman of fine arts for the Georgia federations, whose excellent report appears on today's official page.

Increasing interest in the fine arts in our state is evidenced by the fact that more clubs have reported work in this department than ever before. General federation activities have been stressed; most of the districts have reported work and some have been unusually active, doing splendid work. There have been literary and musical programs at all club meetings and a few have given serious study to literature, music and art. At least one program on American art has been given by practically every club, many have had several, a few have organized departments of art, devoting the programs to the study of art.

In music the greatest activities are programs on American music, contests, study of opera, community singing, cantatas, May day pageants and more have observed music week.

In literature the greatest activities are study classes in ancient and modern literature, study of drama, short-story writing and many observed children's book week.

In art there has been more activity reported than in the history of the federation, in the form of lectures on American art, exhibits of paintings and prints and placing prints in the schools for study.

District Accomplishments.

The outstandings accomplishments are the following:

First District—Waynesboro reports a flourishing music club. Statesboro study of great painters. Savannah Kindergarten club doing splendid work with the children, who write, direct and act their own plays.

Second District—Moultrie Woman's club has purchased an American painting for club room. Thomasville Study club has done splendid work.

Fourth District—Columbus federation sponsored the second Naegle art exhibit, which gave more than 900 school children and the public at large an opportunity of enjoying a collection of paintings from the Grand Central and Macbeth galleries of New York, as well as a splendid loan collection of paintings, Oriental rugs and art objects from the Orient and Philippines. This exhibit resulted in the purchase of a painting of H. Bolton Jones, N. A., to be added to a collection for a future city museum of art. The Conrow art exhibit of 16 canvases by the portrait painter, Wilford Seymour Conrow, of New York, followed by three lectures on art by Mr. Conrow, are worthy of note.

Fifth District—Atlanta has been unusually active. The art exposition held in March deserves special mention. The entire Woman's club resembled during this date a great museum of art, with articles of every description, all beautiful and of artistic merit, in the form of furniture, jewels, silver, paintings, rare laces—heirlooms and home treasures of many kinds.

The Southern States Art League exhibition, containing more than 100 examples of oil and watercolors by southern artists, was shown in Atlanta in 1925.

The annual exhibition of the Atlanta Art association restricted to first showing of the work of artists living in Atlanta had more than its usual attendance during April, 1926. Prizes amounting to $300 were offered.

The Grand Central Art Galleries exhibition in Atlanta in May, 1925, was viewed not only by thousands of Atlantans but by many throughout the state. Many paintings and sculptures were sold during the course of the exhibit. This exhibit has had a great influence in stimulating art interest in the state.

An exhibit of public-school art, worthy of interest, was shown at the fifth district meeting at College Park in the fall of 1925.

Eighth District—Comer Women's club did splendid work with the school children in art understanding and appreciation by showing and studying American art.

Ninth District—The establishment of a free library in Buford under the supervision of the fine arts department.

Tenth District—Round Table club of Sparta devoted 18 programs to art, and several to period architecture. Milledgeville Woman's club had several programs on American art with lectures. Tennille Fine Arts club devoted all programs to fine arts. Norwood Woman's club gave a program on fine arts. Augusta Woman's club sponsored an exhibit of etchings by Emile Fuch.

Eleventh District — Did splendid work. Douglas had two programs on American art. Brunswick club had three illustrated lectures on art from art division general federation, observed better speech week and held music memory contest.

Twelfth District—Vidalia Woman's club had program on American art, and gave Victor records for use in schools in music appreciation classes. Observed music week.

The annual Fort Valley Peach festival, Albany Pecan festival, Cornelia Apple Blossom festival and Thomasville Rose show deserve special mention.

A resolution asking the approval of our United States senators and congressmen of an appropriation of $10,000,000 for the erection of a national art gallery of art in Washington, D. C., was passed by the executive board of the Georgia federation. Copies of this resolution were sent to all congressional representatives from this state and replies were received showing their approval and indorsement.

May I urge that the chairmen and clubs arouse interest in circulating 21 illustrated exhibits and lectures offered by the art division of general federation, for small rental and expressage, organize art clubs and art sections in existing clubs. Secure at least one program on American art in every club. Have an art week when possible. Secure teaching of art history in all high schools. Do away with silver cups as prizes, substituting small bronzes. Get art books and art magazines into every public library and into club rooms. Encourage reading among the children and observe children's book week. List all activities and interest and report them.

The fine arts department of the Georgia federation feels that a great amount of constructive work has been accomplished during 1925-26.

'The Wife, the Home and the Job' Discussed by Nancy B. Mavity

In the July number of Harper's, Nancy Barr Mavity in "The Wife, the Home and the Job," says of the women entering club work: "Housework is a desperately lonely occupation, each woman in her solitary kitchen doing her task and meeting her problems in complete isolation. Women do not associate with one another in their work. When the work is done they are inevitably hungry for social intercourse. Their husbands on the contrary, usually have worked all day among other people and want rest and solitude. The division of labor according to sex tends to prevent husband and wife from sharing not only their work interests but their play interests as well. In this separation the Woman's club arose to meet a real need for social recreation.

"But the women I knew were not inwardly convinced that they had done a full job by caring for the household and that they were ready only for play when the job was done. Even when women's responsibility is limited to the home, her interest has ranged afield. She wants to know the larger world—to look upon it even though she does not enter it. Hence the 'study sections' of the women's clubs devoted to current events, music, art, literature, or social service."

It is this isolation of farm women that so impressed Mrs. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, that she took as the goal of her administration the addition of 2,000,000 farm women to the general federation. Mrs. Sherman says that the federation needs them and they need the vision, the contacts and interests in the work of the federation with its 70 departments of work.

A city woman, a stranger in the city where she makes her home says that the farm woman has the companionship of the animals and chickens while she has nothing but brick and motar to look at, and nothing but inanimate things to work with, and a tired husband to entertain in the evening. It is these lonely ones that the federation would enlist in the great work of the federation. Cultural, philanthropic, civic its departments take in every thing concerning the welfare of the human family.

Year Book Received By Mrs. Brantley.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley acknowledges with thanks receipt of the following year-books: Fine Arts club of Tennille; Woman's club, Bowman; Vidalia Woman's club; Bainbridge Woman's club; Augusta Woman's club; West End Study class.

Twelfth District President Issues Important Notice

Mrs. J. Cleveland Meadows, twelfth district president, issues the following notice to district club treasurers:

All club treasurers are requested to pay funds direct to district treasurer or state chairman of fund to which you wish to contribute. Notify each district chairman and district treasurer of each amount paid to state chairmen. This is imperative if clubs wish to be credited with donations.

Send general and state federation dues—30 cents per capita—to Mrs. Wallace Harris, Cochran, Ga., district treasurer; Tallulah maintenance $39 pro rata share to Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Atlanta Ga., state chairman; Mrs. C. H. Kittrell, Dublin, Ga., district chairman; Ella White memorial, 75 cents per capita to Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Madison, Ga.; Student aid to Mrs. H. B. Wey, 125 Elizabeth street, Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. E. H. Langston, Dublin, Ga., district chairman; Home economics fund to Mrs. Joe Myers, state college of agriculture, Athens, Ga. or to Mrs. W. B. Hendricks, Cochran, Ga., district chairman; Club district dues, 10 cents per capita, to Mrs. Wallace Harris, Cochran, Ga. The twelfth district allotment for the Home Economics fund is $250 per year for four years, making a total of $1,000.00. These scholarships are established in the student aid foundation, known as state university scholarships in home economics of the Georgia State Federation. Since we are behind with our allotments, suppose we pay all that we can afford entirely to the Home Economics fund until it is paid and then go back to gifts for the student aid. If we are able to clear our Tallulah indebtedness this year, we will be in position next year to probably meet our economics allotment.

Following is a list of the twelfth district officers and chairmen:

First vice president, Mrs. C. C. Fulgum, Abbeville; second vice president, Mrs. W. D. Brooks, McRae; recording secretary, Mrs. W. B. McNatt, Lyons; treasurer, Mrs. Wallace Harris, Cochran; historian, (appointment) Mrs. William J. Lipfort, Fort Valley; department American citizenship, Mrs. J. E. Pope, Lyons; division community service, Mrs. L. A. Whipple, Cochran; division moving pictures, Mrs. Hal Macon, Vidalia; division civics, Mrs. Moses Solomon, Fort Valley; cooperation with world war veterans, Mrs. T. R. Lee, Vidalia; junior membership, Mrs. W. O. Brooks, McRae; department education; Mrs. C. L. Foote, Abbeville; division of national resources and forestry, Mrs. John Stamps, McRae; division home economics, Mrs. W. B. Hendricks, Cochran; division thrift Mrs. J. K. Hall, Lyons; division library extension, Mrs. J. W. Daugherty, Abbeville; division school improvement, Mrs. W. B. Folsom, McRae; division of gift scholarship, Mrs. V. L. Adams, Cochran; department of fine arts, Mrs. Tyndall Harris, Cochran; division of music, Mrs. H. A. Threlkeld, Vidalia; division of art, Mrs. J. E. Johnson, Abbeville; division of literature, Mrs. C. H. Mathews, Fort Valley; department of legislation, Mrs. D. C. Patillo, Vidalia; division of federal laws, Mrs. Edgar Duke, Fort Valley; department of public welfare, Mrs. A. L. Mosely, Lyons; division of health, Mrs. C. D. Williams, Vidalia; division social and industrial conditions, Mrs. B. M. Brown, Lyons; division child welfare Mrs. W. D. Horton, McRae; division state sanitarium, Mrs. J. H. Rowland, Cochran; division American home, Mrs. J. E. Thompson, Vidalia; Tallulah Falls Industrial school, Mrs. C. H. Kettrell, Dublin; student aid, Mrs. E. H. Langston, Dublin. Several reappointments have been necessary because of resignations, etc.

Mid-Biennial Council Meets March 29.

The second mid-biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in Albany, Ga., March 29 to April 1, inclusive, by invitation of the Albany Woman's club. Full details regarding the council will be given later.

MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Canton Woman's Club Holds Reciprocity Meet.

The Canton Woman's club featured a reciprocity program at the November meeting with Mrs. O. G. Glover, the president, presiding.

Representing different organizations, Miss Hester, home economics teacher of the Canton school, presented plans for "Evening Classes for Mothers," which were accepted.

Mrs. Zebulon Walker represented the U. D. C.; Mrs. A. P. Bobo, president of the W. M. S. of the Baptist church, sponsored the society; Miss Daisy Crisler, president of the Missionary society of the Methodist church, spoke on this topic; Miss Dale McClure talked in behalf of the Epworth league, while Miss Grace Moody represented the Junior Missionary society, gave not only a good report in general, but statistics that proved this society to be an unusually fine one.

Mrs. A. P. Bobo represented the W. C. T. U.; Mrs. H. L. Ogborn, as representative of the Cherokee chapter No. 192, O. E. S., made quite an interesting talk; Mrs. J. W. Blackwell and several members of the Y. W. A. of the Baptist church, represented this organization; Mrs. Joe Johnston, a former president of the woman's club, spoke for the club, setting forth the aims and high ideals of this organization.

Miss Daisy Crisler rendered two piano solos during the afternoon.

Mrs. Bailey Heads Cobb Federation.

At the meeting of the Cobb County Federation of Women's Clubs, held at Kennesaw Thursday, October 28, the following officers were elected for the next two years: Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, president; Mrs. Roland Russom, of Kennesaw, first vice president; Mrs. C. G. Green, of Smyrna, second vice president; Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, of Acworth, secretary; Mrs. A. B. Karwisch, of Marietta, treasurer.

Mrs. Eugene W. Ray, of Acworth, was appointed publicity chairman. The retiring president, Mrs. H. E. Hague, of Marietta, presided at the meeting. The election of officers was followed by an inspiring program and an elegant luncheon which was served by the ladies of the Kennesaw club.

Dalton Woman's Club Sponsors Oriental Art Exhibition

The exhibit held at the Dalton Woman's club during last week gave an opportunity to all Dalton to see one of the most perfect and representative collections of Oriental art, costumes and curios ever shown in the south. The president of the organization, Mrs. M. E. Judd, to whom the collection belongs, has spent many months in China, Japan, India and Palestine and had exceptional opportunities for making selection from the best private and commercial sources and the articles displayed are the cream of the collection. They were shown in three rooms of the Woman's clubhouse and were beautifully arranged and marked so that whosoever runs might read the long story of Oriental art, so beautiful and so different from anything seen in the western hemisphere.

Embroidered Gown.

The outstanding features of the exhibit numbered a wonderful embroidered gown worn by the mother of the emperor, Chong Lung, in 1734. This was carried out of the purple palace when the Manchu royal family was turned out by Fong Yu Chang and was sold by the owner under pressure of poverty during Mrs. Judd's visit in China, where she was the house guest of the president of Pekin university. It is done on black satin, heavily embroidered with colors and gold, so that the foundation is practically invisible. A little boy's coat of a kind no longer made, of white silk entirely covered with gay embroidery and over 100 years old, was a noticeable piece, as were the wall hangings of heavy embroidered satin, also very old. Chinese jewelry of seed pearls and pink coral was displayed next to a collection of a dozen or more snuff jugs of coloisonne enamel, carved ivory, old glass and beautifully decorated porcelain. Old carved jade, green, cream and white, in necklaces, pendants and ornaments of various sorts was in evidence also. Several pairs of shoes worn by the bound-feet women of the upper class attracted much attention, as did the Japanese house slippers of straw and the outdoor clogs worn by the same people.

One corner was devoted to Korean garments, wall hangings and embroidery and a bride's chest of crimson lacquer beautifully decorated. The white clothing worn by Korean men—linen of lovely texture by the upper classes—and the curious little black which goes with it caused much amused comment. There were also garments worn in India, in Darjeling, in Thibet, in Syria and in Japan, the latter including the native kimonas in wonderful silk and entirely different from those made for the American trade. From Syria came a costume exactly such as was worn by Mary and Martha in Bethany, as the style has never changed in the last 200 years, and the dress worn by a shiek of Damascus, also immemorially old in type. Mexican costumes were also shown.

Remarkable Collection.

In one case was exhibited a remarkable collection of elephants carved from ivory, teak, sandalwood and the wood of the cocoa palm. And a prayer wheel, tiny, of carved wood decorated with turquoise and other semi-precious stone, used by the Thibetans and in part of India which rests on the "top of the world," meaning the Himalayan country.

The exhibit as a whole was such as would do credit to a museum in any city, all the articles shown being museum pieces and attraged many who may not have another opportunity to see so large and so hadsome an Oriental collection again.

Augusta Woman's Club Issues Valuable Year Book for 1926-27

The year book for 1926-27 of the Augusta Woman's club has just been issued and every member of the club should procure one immediately for they are invaluable for information all through the year.

The year book is a great credit to Mrs. A. H. Brenner and her committee who had this in charge, for the book is complete in every way and perfect reference for the members as to the work of each department and division and as to the times of meetings, the personnel of the various committees and everything that they will need for information.

Officers for Year.

The officers for the year are as follows: President, Mrs. David Nachman; vice president, Mrs. Albert Von Kamp; second vice president, Mrs. Bessie N. Cranston; third vice president, Mrs. M. C. Bains; recording secretary, Mrs. V. P. Sydenstricker; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ralph Griffin; treasurer, Mrs. Louis H. Clinton; auditor, Mrs. John W. Walker; parliamentarian, Mrs. David Bloch.

Departments of work: American citizenship, Mrs. W. C. Kellogg; applied education, Mrs. W. P. Manning; public welfare, Mrs. Lindsey Arrington, Mrs. Ernest Squire, vice chairman; fine arts, Mrs. William M. Howard.

Standing committees: Press and publicity chairman, Miss Anne Sanckenen; program, Mrs. J. P. Mulherin, chairman; printing and year book, Mrs. A. H. Brenner, chairman; finance, Mrs. M. C. Bains, chairman; membership, Mrs. Bessie N. Cranston; house and hospitality, Mrs. W. E. Platt; hostess club luncheon, Miss Anna Ayer; social events, Mrs. J. S. Flaxco; scrap book, Miss Sophie Schneiker.

The treasurer's report as printed in the year book shows a balance on hand of $1,433.38.

The chairmen of divisions are as follows: Under the American citizenship department, Americanization, Mrs. F. E. Fleming; citizenship training, Miss Annie Wright; cooperation with war veterans, Mrs. Alice Bleakley; legislation, Mrs. Dewey Gray; community service, Mrs. W. P. White.

Applied education department, chairmen of divisions: Education of the adult citizen, Mrs. W. C. Hilt; conservation, Mrs. Guy Bowen; home making, Mrs. Milledge Murphey; Tallulah Falls, Mrs. Sibert Jones; civic education, Mrs. M. M. Hurst.

Department of public welfare, chairmen of divisions: Public health, Mrs. W. W. Battey (this division includes Red Cross Christmas seal and milk and ice fund); problems in industry, Mrs. E. M. Espey; child welfare, Mrs. Ernest Squire; problems in delinquency, Mrs. P. F. McAnnally, chairman; Mrs. W. N. Benton, vice chairman.

Fine arts department, division chairmen: Concerts, operas and lectures, Mrs. Campbell Chafee; music, Mrs. Clarence Duvall; literature, Mrs. Thomas J. Hamilton; art, Mrs. Sanford Gardner.

The "In Memoriam" page in the year book is devoted this year to Mrs. S. S. Underwood, a valued member of the club who has passed away since the last year book was published.

The year book also includes the constitution of the club which every member should know and the by-laws as well as a complete list of the membership of the club. There are two honorary life members, Mrs. Roselle Mercier Montgomery, and Miss Julia Flisch. There are 104 members of the club.

Mrs. Evans Issues Citizenship Card.

Mrs. J. D. Evans, citizenship chairman of the fifth district of the Georgia Federation, has issued the following card to district citizenship chairmen:

"I am hoping that many of you availed yourselves of the privilege of the citizenship school put on by the League of Women Voters, and that you will each of you try and put on at least a one-day school in your club. The slogan for the citizenship committee is 'Every Member a Voter,' and to make this possible we chairmen must work to educate our members as to the importance of conscientious and intelligent citizenship, and avail ourselves of every opportunity for education as to our duties and responsibilities. I have obtained much help from the University of Georgia, at Athens, general federation headquarters at Washington, Mrs. Alvord, our national citizenship chairman; the League of Women voters, and also the citizenship bureau of the Woman's Home Companion, edited by Anna Steese Richardson. All of these sources are so obliging and prompt in their responses. There was also an excellent article in the City Builder for November by Judge Eve on "The 17 Points on the Duties of Citizenship."

"Another thing I want us to stress this year is education along the line of the proper use of our flag. I would suggest that you each procure a flag code and put on one program this year covering this subject, using your junior department. This can be made very effective, and we each of us need to be instructed in the proper respect and love for the emblem of our country. We should talk love of our country. We most of us take our country too much for granted and are guilty of flagrant (though unintentional) disrespect to our flag. Washington's birthday would be an appropriate time for this program.

"I have as yet received very few notices of apointment from the club presidents of their citizenship chairmen, but I feel sure that you are working and I would be glad to have you get in touch with me. I assure you I am eager to work with you along the lines suggested, and to have your plans for the year to inspire and help me put our program through."

Mrs. Armistead Makes Tallulah Contribution.

Mrs. W. W. Armistead, past president and charter member of the Crawford Woman's club, recently contributed $50 to Tallulah school maintenance. At a recent call meeting it was decided to send a box of jellies, etc., to the Soldiers' hospital in Augusta.

Fourth District Holds Convention In Gay, Nov. 12

The sixteenth annual convention of the fourth district of the Georgia federation will be held in Gay Friday, November 12, by invitation of the Gay Woman's club.

Mrs. Henry M. Bird, of Bowden, district president, will call the convention order, and Mrs. A. G. Estes, president of the Gay Woman's club, will preside.

The program includes: Song, "Battle Hymn of the Federation;" collect, read in unison; address of welcome; response, Mrs. Neal Kitchens, past district president, Warm Springs; song, "Georgia Land;" prayer; president's message and report, Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, first vice president, presiding; reports of officers; reports of departmental and divisional chairmen; music; reports of clubs; address, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president Georgia Federation Women's Clubs; song, juniors of Gay Woman's club; noted women of the fourth district, Mrs. Charleton Battle, Coumbus; address, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director of Georgia; announcements; adjournment for Tallulah Falls school luncheon, at which Mrs. John King Ottley will preside.

Miss Dora Freeman, second vice president, presiding; reports of committees; special program honoring Mrs. Brantley, Mrs. W. D. Hudmon and her juniors; address, Mrs. Ira Farmer, home demonstration chairman G. F. W. C.; closing song, "Bless Be the Tie That Binds."

Carlton Club Maintains Splendid Library.

Mrs. Howard Long, president of Carlton Woman's club, is district chairman of library extension, and with the splendid cooperation of her club is maintaining a library for school and community. Mrs. Ethel David is librarian and is using her time and talent to make this library suitable to the needs of her town. A reading table, filled with the attractive books, was a display of this meeting.

The out-of-town visitors were Mrs. J. W. Gholston, eighth district president; Professor Griffith, of the Glade; Mrs. A. N. Wilkins, district chairman of Tallulah Falls endowment; Mrs. J. D. Thompson, district chairman of international relations, and Mrs. C. B. Ayles, district chairman of publicity.

The club observed better book week with an appropriate program, with Mrs. T. J. Stevens general chairman of arrangements.

Worth-While Club Studies Subject Of Supreme Court

The Worthwhile club was entertained at the home of the president, at 598 Arthur street, Thursday morning. Mrs. A. G. Helmer, the president, presiding. The club is composed of a group of women who assembled twice monthly to study the Constitution of the United States and the history of the states as they came into the union.

"The Supreme Court" being the subject of the discussions, Mrs. Oscar Ragland led by saying that when Washington was inaugurated (April 30, 1789), there was no federal judge to administer the oath of office as was required by the constitution; so this service was performed by Robert R. Livingston chancellor of New York. A huge bronze statue of Washington now stands in Wall street where the ceremony was performed.

Mrs. Lela W. Smith told the club about the formation of the plan for the judiciary, with Oliver Ellsworth as chairman. Washington appointed John Jay, of New York, to be the first chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, there being five associate justices.

The robes that are worn by the supreme judges were shown by a picture. The courtroom is tucked away in the middle of the capitol at Washington between the senate and the house of representatives.

Mrs. Nannie Rapp stressed the character of the wonderful men of those stirring times, and their far-seeing vision. Mrs. Eleanor Graham read the proclamation issued by John Jay March 20, 1779, and with a short sketch of his life the meeting adjourned, to meet in the same place December 16, at 10 o'clock, the subject to be "North Carolina."

Junior Division Aids Needlework Guild.

Six members of "Owacika" campfire of Girls' Senior High school, joined the Needlework guild in 1926 as members of the junior division. Other organizations joining include the "Ihaha" campfire of Bass Junior High school, a flock of "blue birds" of the Civic club of West End, and some juniors of the Atlanta Woman's club; six troops of girl scouts, one section of girl reserves, the Junior Red Cross of Girls' Senior High school, Joe Brown and Hoke Smith Junior High schools and the Sunday school juniors of West End Christian church and primary department of Druid Hills Methodist church.

About 212 yards of goods have been donated for starting the work. Mrs. Fred Paxon's gift of 47 yards of ginghams, longcloth and bright outing flannel made it possible for some girls to enter the list of contributors of garments and be represented in this year's collection. Asa Candler's generous loan of the room in the Candler annex provided the opportunity to make the exhibit, at 100 North Pryor street.

Passersby entered the store and offered to buy the garments artistically displayed in the window by Mrs. W. J. Stelpflug and Mrs. T. W. Farris, and were told what the Needlework guild means to Atlanta each December.

Children came to see what other children had done; officers of organizations came and carried back to their members the worth-while object of the juniors and the reality of the 1926 collection.

The amazement of visitors centered on one thought when shown garments made by junior high school members of the Red Cross under the guiding hand of the home economics department of the public schools and the foresight of Mrs. Louis J. Elsas and Mrs. C. B. Dexter, of the Junior Red Cross, who take a vital personal interest in the advancement of the Needlework guild's junior work.

Reports show over 500 garments turned in for this division of juniors.

Interesting Notes From Shorter College.

Rome, Ga., December 4.—The Spanish department at Shorter has organized the Hispanic society with a membership of about 100 and Miss Mary Bryan Weaver, Thomaston, president, and Miss Rebekth Skeen, Decatur, secretary. Two programs have already been presented by the club; one on "American Literary Men Who Were Interested in Spanish Literature," the other on "Moorish Influences Upon Spanish History, Literature and Art."

Dr. W. D. Furry, president of Shorter, attended the annual session of the Southern Association of Colleges, held last week in Jackson, Miss., representing Shorter college, which is a member of the association.

Miss Texys Morris, Maysville, was signally honored in her election by the student body to the responsible office of student treasurer.

An interesting evening was afforded Shorter players and a group of invited guests on Monday evening when three of their members directed the presentation of one-act plays in the studio of Mrs. Allie Hayes Richardson, head of the department of spoken English. Miss Ethnell Morton, Rome, directed the presentation of "Fleurette and Company"—Essex Dane; Miss Isabelle Miller, Fort Payne, Ala., directed "When Love Is Young"—Marjorie Benton Cooke; Miss Elizabeth Fall, Atlanta, "Six Cups of Chocolate"—Edith V. B. Mathews.

Among members of the class of '26 who spent Thanksgiving at Shorter were Misses Evelyn Sheffield, Atlanta; Elizabeth Hardy, Barnesville; Mary Thompson, Columbus; Marjorie Johnston, Canton; Katherine Gaines, Dothan, Ala.; Helen Methvin, Eastman.

School of Expression To Give Program.

The Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial Church building, is planning a very interesting and instructive program for Wednesday morning, December 8, at 11 o'clock. The program will be participated in by the morning students and include subjects ranging from story-telling, extemporaneous speeches, readings, dramatic sketches, orations, jokes and Bible-reading. The public is cordially invited.

News of the Georgia State Woman's College.

Valdosta, Ga., December 4.—The Faculty Poetry club of the Georgia State Woman's college, at its regular meeting Wednesday evening, heard D. G. Bickers, of the Savannah Morning News, the subject of his talk being "Modern Poetry." The Faculty Poetry club had as its guest for the occasion the entire student body of the Georgia State Woman's college and many friends from Valdosta. After the program an informal reception was given.

The first meeting of the year of the Georgia State Woman's College Alumnae association was held on the college campus Wednesday evening, November 4, the seniors of this year acting as hostesses. Talks by Miss Rena Mae Campbell on "Values of a Degree," and by Miss Christine Meadows on "The Advantages of a Reunion," featured the program.

The Thursday evening vesper services for the second semester are to be in the form of projects. These projects, four in number, were presented to the girls on Tuesday evening, November 30, by Miss Christine Meadows, the students later being allowed to sign for work on the project in which they were most interested.

The Sock and Buskin Dramatic club held a program meeting on Tuesday evening, November 30. Each member answered the roll call with the name of a popular play of the season. Following the roll call a review of the play, "Craig's Wife," was given by Miss Sarah Mandeville, of Jesup, Ga. The chief feature of the program was the presentation of the play, "The Acid Test."

The Georgia State Woman's college goes on the first honor roll of the Georgia Education association for having 100 per cent membership of the college faculty in the association.

THE CONSTITUTION'S PARENT-TEACHER PAGE

Edited by MAINER LEE TOLER

OFFICERS GEORGIA BRANCH, NATIONAL CONGRESS OF MOTHERS AND PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS—Mrs. P. H. Jeter, of Decatur, president; Mrs. J. J. Hoffmayer, of Albany, first vice president; Mrs. A. F. McGahee, of Macon, recording secretary; Mrs. James Callaway, of Columbus, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John Dessausure, of Decatur, treasurer; Mrs. Lawrence Kelly, of Savannah, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Nunnally Johnson, of Columbus, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. W. Rowell, of Atlanta, historian; Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, of Atlanta, second vice president; Mrs. Fred Wessels, of Savannah, third vice president; Mrs. Charles A. Hilbun, of Macon, fourth vice president; Mrs. Duncan Burnett, of Athens, fifth vice president; Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, sixth vice president; Miss Katherine Dozier, of Gainesville, seventh vice president.

OFFICERS OF ATLANTA PARENT-TEACHER COUNCIL—Mrs. C. J. Foster, president; Mrs. W. L. Schell, first vice president; Mrs. R. L. Cliett, second vice president; Mrs. W. L. McCalley, Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. H. T. Loehr, corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. C. Byers, treasurer.

"Every Mother a Voter" Is Slogan Of Atlanta P.-T. Association

"Every mother a voter," is the slogan of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher associations. The plans of Mrs. J. H. Boulineau, chairman of citizenship as presented to P.-T. A. council Thursday, were for each grade chairman to make a house to house appeal to the mothers to register and each association to give a prize to the room which showed the largest registration, prize to be awarded in May. Mrs. Boulineau said, "if the mothers were held responsible for the conduct of the children they should name those who governed them and called attention to the fact that double poll tax had to be paid after December 19, and that, while no poll tax was paid to the city of Atlanta when you registered to vote in city elections, you took an oath that your poll taxes had been paid to the county."

Following the report of Miss Ruby Falls, nurse for special classes, showing the splendid results accomplished a recommendation from the executive board asking for appropriation to continue Miss Falls until June, was adopted. A resolution thanking the Junior league for the bus provided for taking children to the clinics and other assistance in the work for underprivileged children was adopted by the council.

Special Classes Exhibit.

Mrs. W. D. Colby, chairman special classes, had an exhibit of the work done by the pupils of the W. S. Thompson school, which the committee is selling for the children. She asked for contributions of silk pieces and old silk hose for making rag rugs.

Mrs. W. D. Farnham, chairman of recreation, reported her committee was particularly interested in finding occupations for the boys and girls of 18 and there seemed to lie the problems of the present day. She requested each president to give on recreation program.

Mrs. Bazemore, chairman of preschool circles, asked for more cooperation from the associations and announced that a display of toys, selected for different ages would be shown in Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose's windows next week.

Mrs. John W. Lloyd, chairman of better films, asked contributions of clothing for the Christmas party for underprivileged children given by the better films committee and commended the plan of the Forrest avenue school for collecting such contributions.

A motion was adopted asking city council to employ three doctors for white children and one for colored for the entire school year instead of only two doctors for fall term. Willis Sutton, superintendent of schools, in speaking of this matter stated it was impossible, with the limited number of physicians and with the new pupils entering after Christmas for adequate examination to be given and asked that the active support of the associations be given towards pushing this resolution through council. Mr Sutton stated that the most serious problem with which the schools had to deal were the boys and girls of senior high school and that it was a matter to be handled by the homes, urging upon the council a study of the best methods to combat present conditions.

Classes for Illiterates.

Miss May Walker, principal of Wm. S. Thompson school and chairman of illiteracy, announced two classes for adult illiterates, one in the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mill district, taught by Mrs. John Young and one at the Stewart Avenue Day Nursery, taught by Miss Hill. Commendation was expressed of the movement to secure funds for the pay ward at Grady hospital to meet the requirements of the Elsas gift.

Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Byrd, of Dallas, Ga., were introduced by Mrs. D. C. Shepherd who was in charge of the program of the day. Mrs. Charles J. Foster, president of council, who presided over the meeting, read a letter from a rural mother, who wanted to furnish Christmas greens, holly, mistletoe and galyx leaves, in exchange for clothes so that her eight children might continue in school. The name of this mother and ages and sex of children may be secured from Mrs. Foster. The council endorsed the movement of the Camp Fire Girls to have trees and windows lighted for Christmas.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, state chairman of organization and regional director of publicity for the national association, announced that a display of publicity would be made at the next national council, each state being permitted to send 10 scrapbooks.

State P.-T. A. Home Service Director And Chairmen Outline Year's Work

Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, Ga., is at the extreme left. Mrs. Miller is sixth vice president of the Georgia branch, National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Miller is director of the home service department for the Georgia branch and with her capable group of chairmen she is making excellent progress with this phase of parent-teacher work. Center, Mrs. J. O. Langdon, of Woodberry, Ga., who is a chairman of home education and standards of literature and on the right is Mrs. W. P. Martin, of Gainesville, Ga., who is chairman of children's reading.

Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, Ga., state director of the home service department of the Georgia branch of parents and teachers, issues the following article pertaining to the work of this department:

"The home service department of the state will constitute a bureau of information, and an advisory board, and will also promote desirable activities. It has one great objective and that is to reach the local P.-T. A. and to render personal advice and assistance, not only with helpful suggestions but with definite instructions, necessary blanks, and poster size bulletins. Major projects are being planned which will interest P.-T. A. councils and large associations.

"The local P.-T. A. which conforms to the general plan of organization used by the national congress and the state branch and the districts will receive the greatest benefits from their affiliation. To this end each local should appoint standing committees corresponding to the state departments as outlined in the state P.-T. A. year book, public welfare, education, home service and health.

"The home service plans have been worked out with the needs of the local P.-T. A. constantly in mind. Every president of every association is urged to appoint a local chairman of home service and report the name of that person to the district director of home service. Information and instructions from the national congress, the state branch, and the district organizations will come through a direct channel to the local, which will put the plan into effect and personally benefit every child and every mother and every home connected therewith.

"The following suggestive plans are recommended to all local chairmen as suited to the progress of home service:

Home service committee should consist of a chairman and two or more members one of whom should be a teacher.

Information: Consult your district director of home service for general advice. Consult district chairmen for specific advice, and state chairman for major projects.

Exhibits: Make every effort to have an actual exhibit of materials and periodicals mentioned in these projects, both at meetings and in suitable store windows.

Bulletin Service: Post lists of recommended publications under the P.-T. A. home service name. (Caution, these lists must be approved by state chairman).

Consult chairman of children's reading, then buy books for the school room; subscribe for magazines by grades (recommend to mothers); fit up a school reading room; arrange for school library or extension (traveling library).

Consult chairman of home economics, then establish a lunch room for your school; consult mothers' classes in child care, food and clothing; cooperate in local campaigns for pure food, correct weights and measures, municipal markets, etc. Encourage the organization of home economics clubs for girls and boys.

Consult chairman of home education and standards of literature, then organize mothers' educational clubs, magazine clubs, book clubs, cooperate to suppress improper literature; secure a public library or extension.

Consult chairman of thrift, then inaugurate a school savings system (if your town is large enough); put on a thrift program for a dads' night some time in January (write to your district director for a speaker); put on a thrift exposition in March and compete for a state prize; operate a continuous thrift shop; induce each school room to collect junk of all kinds and to invest the proceeds in essential equipment for that room, as a lesson in thrift; exchange magazines, patterns, seeds, with a small charge for revenue; consider family budget and children's allowances.

Consult chairman of social standards, then dramatize social customs for benefit of both mothers and students; put on exhibitions of good taste in dress.

Reports: Report at least one project, either under way or accomplished at every meeting; report accomplished projects to your district director of home service; your accomplished projects will count for your association in the credits for standard of excellence. Your president will receive this list.

Literature: Subscribe to Child Welfare magazine; consult your president's copies of the year book, bulletin, and Georgia Educational Journal.

Home Education.

Mrs. J. O. Langdon, state chairman of home education, outlines the work under her direction in the following article:

"The object of this chairmanship is to supply list of books that have been carefully selected by leading educators of America and compiled so as to appeal to all. There are 29 different lists and all have been selected by specialists in their line of work. Credit is given to any reading circle or study circle if they use these required lists but for this year great stress is placed on child problems, but other lists will be given credit if preferred. Some of the lists are: American History, No. 10; American Literature, No. 8; Thirty American Heroes, No. 9; 30 Books of Great Fiction, No. 6. Course No. 28 gives Kindergarten Ideals in the Home and School, and No. 29, Pre-school; both excellent lists for study circles. No. 26 and 27 courses deal with children's reading and these lists can be combined with other lists of suggested readings for children given out by the state chairman. No. 26 deals with stories and No. 27 with poetry. Both lists will be sent upon request to anyone who asks.

"Attention is called to the great need of parents to read books dealing with child problems. Courses No. 3 and No. 21 give excellent material for parental understanding of the child.

"These two lists are the ones I am asking all home education chairmen to concentrate their efforts on for this year's work. No. 3 has 36 books and is divided into three courses designated as 3-A, 3-B and 3-C. Readers may select eight different books on the list for each of these courses for which a certificate of the bureau of education will be issued. No. 21 has 20 books and is divided as 21-A and 21-B. Readers may select 10 different books on the list for each of these courses and certificate will be given. All books listed in No. 3, Reading Course for Parents; No. 21, Twenty Good Books for Parents, can be borrowed for a two months' time if P.-T. A. or principal will assume responsibility and pay return postage. Credit is not given to study circle unless home education lists are used and reqirements fulfilled. Standards of excellence desired: Home study circle using course 3 or 21, 50 points; permanent adequate library established, 50 points; card index system, 25 points; traveling libarary units used, 25 points; presenting standard literature, 25 points; do not present negative side, but select best of magazines and books in fiction, 25 points. Each of the 29 home study circles have requirements given on lists of books. State chairman sends lists to district chairman and district sends to local and makes report same way. District chairmen please help promote this work.

"At the national convention held in Atlanta the board added to the duties of home education chairman that of encouraging home and public libraries. This should be a part of our year's program.

"The library commission will lend Looks to traveling library direct to school and teacher in grades if asked for and teacher assumes responsibility for books borrowed for her grade. Write for application cards and lists of books that can be loaned. School pays transportation charge on books."

The annual daddies' meeting of the P.-T. A. of the Ella W. Smillie school met Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium with a fine attendance, Mrs. Cecil Angell, president, presiding. John White, councilman, spoke briefly about the plans for the year around recreation work in Atlanta. Professor Willis Sutton gave a helpful talk, his text being, "Thinking in Terms of Things Rather Than in Terms of People." Mrs. M. Hudson read several selections, accompanied by piano and the meeting adjourned.

Bass Junior High P.-T. A. Adopts Recommendations

A large attendance of parents and teachers marked the interest felt in the splendid program arranged by Mrs. George Price for the Bass Junior High P.-T. A. meeting Wednesday. The meeting was in the nature of a book shower for the library of the school and the meeting was presided over by Mrs. W. V. Kingdon, president. Among the recommendations of the executive board adopted at the meeting were to make the bathhouses in the park into indoor playgrounds during the winter; that a meeting of the parents and teachers be held for 30 minutes before the regular meeting each month; that working mothers who were unable to attend the meetings could be counted as present if they showed their interest by writing or sending in their names on the day of the meeting. Plans were discussed for aiding in Christmas observances at the Detention Home and at Inman Park school.

Mrs. Adams, chairman of membership, announced 950 paid members. Rooms having 100 per cent membership were Miss Foreman's 9-B, 11; Miss Stokes' 8-B, 1; Miss McLean's 9-B, 3; Mr. Burgess' 9-A, 1; Miss Rushin's 9-B, 1.

J. H. Smith, principal, expressed his appreciation of the valuable assistance to the school of the association. He announced that the art class had sold of its work articles to the amount of $150, which with other funds made nearly $200, which would be expended in the nucleus of an art gallery for the school.

Mrs. J. D. Evans, chairman of citizenship, reminded the members that they must pay poll taxes by December 19, and asked all who had not voted to stop by the polls after the meeting. The president announced that helpers were wanted for the cafeteria at the Inman Park school sopnsored by the Junior Red Cross. Mrs. Butler, welfare chairman, asked for donations of clothes. Mrs. Henry Bower, granddaughter of Henry Mayer, for whom the school library is named, gave a brief sketch of Mr. Mayer. Interior decorating classes were announced to begin as soon as a sufficient number of members was obtained.

The beautiful music was arranged by Mrs. Charles Sheldon, chairman of music. Dr. Sheldon played the accompaniments to two vocal numbers sung by Miss Minna Hecker. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson talked on "Better Films," explaining clearly the duties and the limitations of the reviewer and placing before the members the responsibilities of the parents for the class of pictures coming to a city. Miss Annabel Horn, teacher of Latin, Girls' High school, gave a delightful talk on "Bookshelves for the Boys and Girls" and the value of books in the child's development.

Central P.-T. A. Hears Rev. Williams.

The outstanding feature of the November meeting of Central P.-T. A. was the inspirational talk of Rev. Williams, pastor of the Presbyterian church, on "The Relationship of Parents to Children," in which he pictured the home as the "sheep-fold" where all the child's knowledge learned at school and elsewhere may be put into daily practical use in developing his well rounded character. He stressed the fact that it is the parents' privilege and responsibility to make the environments of the home conducive to such development.

Miss Tyler's fourth grade C presented several numbers in keeping with the harvest season and Mrs. Mixon's 4th grade A presented a playlet portraying the customs of early Americans. More than a dozen baskets, consisting of groceries brought by the pupils as a "thank offering," were distributed to the needy. Several grade mothers are busy raising funds to finance a Christmas entertainment for their respective grades.

The S. M. Inman Pre-school circle meeting was held Wednesday, December 1, at 3 o'clock p. m. Mrs. Edith O'Stein Ward gave a very instructive lecture on "Children's Playthings."

Dr. Willis A. Sutton will speak to the daddies of the children of Tenth Street school, at the annual daddies meeting which is to be held in the school auditorium, Tuesday night, December 7, at 7:45 o'clock. The meeting will not last more than an hour and all parents are cordially invited to be present.

The regular meeting of the Avondale P.-T. A. will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium, with Mrs. H. C. Antrim presiding. The speaker of the afternoon will be Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, director, department of organization and efficiency of the state P.-T. A.

All members are urged to attend and bring a new member to this meeting.

Luckie St. P.-T. A. Gives Health Program.

The meeting of the Luckie Street school P.-T. A. was held Wednesday in the school auditorium with Mrs. P. C. Smith, president, presiding. Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, spoke on the health and care of the child. Dr. G. A. Mitchell spoke on the care of the teeth. Both addresses were helpful and interesting and enthusiastically received.

Mrs. L. G. Stowers, better films chairman, urged mothers to cooperate in making the better films Christmas party a success for children, who, otherwise would have no Christmas. The children of high first grade, Miss Pierce, teacher, gave a playlet entitled "Little Pig, Little Pig," which was very much enjoyed. The children of low fourth grade, Miss Cockerel, teacher, dramatized "Wait for the Wagon" in song.

Avondale Pre-School Circle Holds Meet.

Pre-School circle of Avondale school held a very interesting meeting Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. H. C. Antrim on Fairfield drive with Mrs. T. L. Freeman, chairman, in charge. Mrs. J. L. Bond read a most instructive article on "The Mind of the Child," by Jessica Cosgrave. Mrs. W. C. Wilson was appointed study class chairman. Plans for Christmas activities in the school were discussed. It was determined to hold regular meetings on the third afternoon of each month at 2:30 o'clock, the next meeting being January 21.

Oakland City P.-T.A Meeting Is Featured By Excellent Talks

A very interesting meeting was held by the Oakland City P.-T. A. Wednesday in the school auditorium, Mrs. N. W. Printup, president, presiding. The chairmen reported their activities during the past month.

The speakers of the afternoon were Mr. Jamison and Miss Clara Lee Cone.

Mr. Jamison spoke on the Boy Scout movement and plans were made to organize a camp which the association will sponsor.

Miss Cone held the attention of all with a very interesting and beneficial talk on the proper dietary.

The P.-T. A. will also sponsor an exchange to be held December 15 in the school auditorium at 2:30 o'clock. The low fifth grade, Miss Cunningham's room, won the attendance prize, having 25 mothers present. Mrs. Rogers drew the lucky number.

Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. Meet Is of Interest.

The Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. held its meeting in the school auditorium with the vice president, Mrs. Fontaine, in the chair. Mrs. Fontaine called for the reports of chairmen. Mrs. Cowart, of the better films, gave an enthusiastic report of the meeting of the general better films committee. She made a plea for the children, if possible, to help in the splendid work this committee is trying to do at Christmas time for those less fortunate children. The welfare committee, Mrs. Fontaine reported several garments and several pairs of shoes given out during the month to our own children. The ungraded class has been making some attractive gifts which they wish to sell. A paper sale has been held since the last meeting. Miss Greer's fourth grade won the prize for the most papers. Mrs. Fontaine spoke of the need of visiting the sick among our members.

Mrs. Slate, membership chairman, spoke of the membership drive. She is urging that the dues for the mother and father in each family be paid for December, making us 100 per cent for the month.

Mrs. Cumbea reported on the last council meeting. At this meeting the longer school day and the cafeteria system in the schools were discussed. She made a plea for more members to be interested in going to council and hearing the things of civic interest taken up there. Another member was added to this committee.

Miss Faver read a clipping from the paper. This spoke of the way a real teacher can teach religion by the relation children and teachers have toward each other in their work and play. Mrs. Gurr won percentage prize and Miss McIntyre had the most mothers present. A daddies meeting was announced for the second Thursday night in January.

Joe Brown P.-T. A. Gives Yearly Program.

The meeting of the Joe Brown P.-T. A. was held in the library of the school Monday with the president, Mrs. J. H. Savage presiding. Professor Sutton was the speaker and made a profitable talk, discussing many phases of junior high work.

Reports made by the chairmen proved that all the committees are at work.

Mrs. Asa Dwight, chairman of a committee to select a guardian for the campfire group, introduced Mrs. Fred White to fill this office.

The building and grounds committee, consisting of W. A. Brown, chairman; C. T. Bailey, W. M. Hicks, Frank Evans and Mrs. C. R. Haynes, reported a meeting held November 12 to consider plans for additional units to the building from the school fund of the recent bond issue.

The program committee submitted the following program, which was accepted with thanks by the association: September, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president, spoke on "Value of P.-T. A.;" October, health, Dr. N. M. Owensby spoke on "Adolescences;" November, Professor Sutton spoke on "Health, an Aid to Education;" December, strictly social and a book shower for the library. Each member is requested to bring a book to the December meeting. A number of guests are to be invited to this meeting, and refreshments will be served; January, afternoon meeting, Dr. Elizabeth will speak to mothers; February, child welfare, Mrs. W. J. Agnew, child welfare chairman, will present this program; March, program is to be given by the students of the school, Miss Jeter in charge; April, citizenship, Mrs. Dupont Murphy, citizenship chairman, in charge; May, vocational guidance, speakers, Mr. Martin and Miss Lamar Jeter.

Years of Personal Reminiscences In the National Society D. A. R.

As stated in last Sunday's Constitution, the address by Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel, honorary state regent, of Connecticut, delivered recently in her home state, which virtually comprises a history of the National Society, D. A. R., will be published serially, the second installment continuing today:

Mrs. Manning's Address.

Mrs. Manning's opening address to congress impressed me very much. She made a glowing appeal for Continental hall, then only a vision of beauty, and said among other tributes to the chapters, that "If Ruth Wyllys chapter can raise $80,000 for Gold street's reclamation, what cannot five hundred chapters do for Continental hall?" From that time onwards Ruth Wylys chapter and her regent, Mrs. John M. Holcombe, loomed large in my early D. A. R. outlook. I also caught the vision of Continental hall, then with only $13,000 in its building fund. We were not thinking in millions then. The offerings of chapters brought every year and laid on our altar of patriotism at the congress, were an inspiration to me, and I started home each time with the determination that my own "Mary Tallmadge" should have her share in this memorial to all the "men of the line" in the armies of Washington and all the women of the spinningwheel behind them at home.

At this congress of 1900 the treasurer general reported total receipts amounting to $36,727.25 and total disbursements $21,700.41, leaving a balance of $15,026.84, which seemed so big to many that they began thinking of reducing the amount of the dues that went to Washington.

At this congress, too, the confusion in seating delegates was extreme, the house committee excusing itself on the ground of a "multitude for which it was not prepared." Yet it was hardly bigger than Connecticut's present-day fall state meeting.

This was the congress which got worked up to a pitch of excitement over the appropriation of $2,000 for the purchase of Meadow Garden, in Georgia, the home of George Walton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence from that state. How well I remember how your Mrs. Holcomb turned the tide and won the appropriation for Georgia because it was a debt of honor.

In those days the reporters were ever on the trail of sensational scenes. Such a convention of women was a new thing to them and to the public, and so every debate became a "row" according to the newspapers. The society was jeered at by the press and public. My early reports from congress are filled with tributes to the remarkable order preserved at those early meetings when women were unversed in parliamentary law, and were addicted to sewing circle conversation in the midst of debate. Each year we had to come home to meet the ridicule excited by the exaggerated sensations of the press reports which every one believed, and which we were kept busy denying as unjust and untrue—as, indeed, they were. Press and public know better now—sometimes.

Congress of 1901.

The congress of 1901 was an election congress, and of course, bigger than ever. Sensational tales still persisting in the newspapers, Mrs. Kinney asked the parliamentarian, who was at one time journal clerk of the house of representatives, what he thought of the conduct of our congress. I well remeber with what glee she told Connecticut his reply, that "it was no more disorderly than any other large convention; that representation was too large, necessitating too large a hall; that women could not hear one another as they had a right to; and that the meetings of the D. A. R. were well managed." It all sounds very familiar about our size. What would he say about the size of us now?

In this year came my first experience of a presidential election. The most vivid memory of it is the Connecticut delegation parading up the center aisle to the ballot box, every woman of us, with perhaps two or three exceptions bedecked with Fairbanks badges. We willed the aisle from the rear to the stage, and as I passed along I heard one woman among the McLean delegates say in dismay, "Just look at all those Fairbanks badges!" Imagine doing such a thing now, with our greater knowledge of the sacred secrecy of the ballot! Connecticut always made a big showing when going up to vote. Another delegate said to me as I passed, "Oh, I think you are just beautiful." This didn't mean our votes, but our appearance and our solid strength and steady harmony of spirit and action. Connecticut has been a power in every congress, respected and looked up to always. A rather funny incident relieved the strain of that tense election. During the nominations for the office of president general I well remember Connecticut's uneasiness when Mrs. Kinney failed to appear among the Fairbanks seconders, and the seconding for Mrs. McLean had begun. Suddenly she appeared on the stage and we all gasped. When she came forward you could have heard a pin drop. Then she clamly seconded Mrs. Fairbanks for the great majority of the Connecticut delegation, and pandemonium broke loose.

Balloting Long Business.

In those days the balloting took up a whole day of the congres, for it was carried on in the auditorium and not outside in voting booths as at present. This meant the laying aside of all other business, and sitting in weary patience to be called if your state happened to be toward the end, the elections were conducted in a very businesslike manner, and the tellers sat up all night to count the votes. This method obtained until a few years ago, when we began to separate the balloting from the session of the congress, and a system of counting was instituted by our own Mrs. Bissell when chairman of tellers, whereby they could report the same evening.

Mrs. Fairbanks was as winsome a president general as Mrs. Manning was regal. Her graciousness and charm in presiding were outstanding characteristics, reinforced as they were by strength, fairness and a good-humor never ruffled by the stormiest sessions, and they were stormy, at times. During her administration the site of Memorial Continental hall was purchased for $50,2666.17 and initial plans for the actual building were started. Great was the wonder why such a site was even suggested, such a mud-hole in a wilderness with no Red Cross building, no Pan-American, nothing below the Corcoran Art gallery but a few dilapidated old houses and the Washington monument in the park across the street. But Mrs. Fairbanks knew what she was about as the event proved.

This was in 1902. In October of this year, ground was broken, the first sod being turned by the president general and the second by Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, "Pen-Founder" and "Little Mother" of the D. A. R.

In April, 1904, the cornerstone was laid, Mrs. Fairbanks presiding amidst great pomp and ceremony. Those prsent will never forget the wind of that day, sweeping over that ragged, unkempt lot, which has been transformed for the occasion into a court of honor, garlanded about with wreaths and flags. The cornerstone was laid with Masonic ceremonies, the trowel used being the one used by Washington when laying the cornerstone of the capitol, and then presented by him to the grand lodge of the District of Columbia. Five thousand members and guests filled the open space in front of the stand on which sat men and women of national renown.

At 2:15 o'clock congress adjourned its afternoon session and was escorted from the opera house to the site by a guard of honor composed of members of the First regiment of Minutemen, in their continental uniforms. Then came the members of the grand lodge of Masons, escorted by Columbia commandery No. 2, Knights Templars, headed by the band of the Engineer corps, United States army. The minutemen formed a guard about the stone. Then the president general opened the impressive ceremonies which no one who was present can ever forget. The scene stands out in memory with undimmed vividness, and the voice of Mrs. Fairbanks can still be heard by some of us above the roaring April wind as she said, concluding her address:

"The National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, Deo Volente, lays the cornerstone of its greatest work—Memorial Continental hall, a tribute to the partiots who achieved American independence."

Thirteen Lucky Number.

It should be noted by those who fear the number 13 as unlucky, that the idea of Continental hall had been developing for thirteen years, ever since the first year of our organization, and that the cornerstone was laid by the 13th congress.

In 1905, the one congress I missed, Mrs. Fairbanks presided over the first congress held within its walls, her chief work accomplished. She always said that Continental hall would be found written on her heart of hearts."

But to go back a little, our "unwieldy" congresses of those years of her administration brought reduction of representation in congress to the fore as an amendment to the by-laws, only to go down each year to defeat.

In 1903 my chapter presented an amendment based on representation by districts. It was tabled so quickly you could not see it go. It was your own Mrs. Holcombe who moved its adoption in behalf of the whole Connecticut delegation which had indorsed it. I was prepared to follow with my speech full of cogent arguments when Mrs. Emory Park, state regent of Georgia, sitting directly in front of me, instantly rose and moved to table it before I could get to my feet. The motion was carried with a rush and before we knew what had happened the amendment had vanished along with the other "reduction" amendments that had gone before. Congress would have none of it, and I am glad now that it wouldn't—at that time. However, I wrote in my report for home consumption: "The society is not yet ready for reform and will not be convinced until stern, practical necessity stares it in the face."

Nor is it yet convinced by the stern practical necessity that has driven us into the biggest auditorium now existence in Washington and started us on the task of building another for ourselves. We were then increasing our membership at the rate of 4,000 a year; it is now from 10,000 to 12,000.

The congresses of Mrs. Fairbanks were marked in a most picturesque way by the escort of a detail of minutemen which conducted her in and out of all evening sessions. I thought nothing could be more lovely than the sight of her as she went up the aisle behind them and stepped to the platform under their crossed swords, and again as they escorted her out through the long opera house lobby bowing and smiling so beamingly.

Mrs. W. H. Irvine Entertains Study Class

Mrs. W. H. Irvine entertained the Shakespeare Study class on Thursday, November 27, at her home on West Peachtree street. A contest on quotations from "Love's Labor's Lost" was held, the prize being won by Mrs. Bonar White.

Following the contest tea was served by the hostess and an informal social hour enjoyed.

Chapter Year Books

The year-books from the Hannah Clarke chapter and the Governor John Milledge chapter are acknowledged with thanks by the editor.

The subject of the year's study of the Hannah Clarke chapter is "Evolution of Education in Georgia" and the year-book contains most interesting programs, beginning with "Old Field Schools" and coming up to "Women's Colleges." There are many other valuable and instructive features included in the year-book of this always progressive chapter.

Historical sketches of noted revolutionary patriots, papers on important battles of the revolution and addresses on many revolutionary landmarks make up the programs of the John Milledge chapter, which is noted for its splendid and alert membership, ever on the upward trend for more and better work in the D. A. R.

ELLIS ISLAND BOXES AND CONTENTS.

Recently an appeal for Ellis island from the state chairman, Mrs. Julian C. Lane, of Statesboro, appeared in this column. Perhaps some of the chapter regents failed to see the article, and in the Christmas rush this great Americanization work may be overlooked. The need for materials with which to work, by these immigrants detained at Ellis island, some for indefinite periods, is urgent, and a list of the things most needed is reprinted today.

Boxes should be carefully packed and wrapped, with the name of the sender and chapter marked plainly outside, with the same information on a slip inside, and charges prepaid. Contents should be yarn of all kinds, colors and quantities; cotton dress materials in pieces not less than one yard in length, white and unbleached muslin; stamped embroideries, and cotton or silk for working; crochet cotton, colored and white; knitting cotton; crochet hooks, all sizes; thimbles, needles, scissors, large steel knitting needles.

None of these articles are expensive and Georgia chapters should respond to the call of the state chairman 100 per cent, and all donations should be reported to her.

Chapter Reports

COL. WILLIAM CANDLER.

The Colonel William Candler chapter D. A. R., of Gainesville, held a most interesting Armistice day meeting, being guests of Mrs. B. P. Gaillard in her lovely home on Riverside drive.

Only routine business was disposed of, after which the program committee presented several interesting numbers. Mrs. B. P. Gaillard gave a splendid address on "Armistic Day" and "The First Thanksgiving" was the subject of a talk by Miss Frances McArthur. Mrs. S. A. Smith read the beautiful poem, "In Flanders Field," which brought to a close the afternoon's program. All the numbers were much enjoyed and the program committee was given hearty thanks by the chapter. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

JOHN BALL.

The November meeting of John Ball chapter D. A. R. was entertained in the home of Miss Ida Hughes, of Irwinton. In the absence of the regent the meeting was presided over by the vice regent, Miss Nan Wood, in an easy and gracious manner.

Plans were perfected for a "stunt night," in which all local organizations in the county were requested to compete. There will be a first prize of $10 and a second of $5, and the chapter hopes to realize sufficient funds from the event to help pay some of the obligations required for a place on the state D. A. R. honor roll.

Harry Stillwell Edwards' "Appomattox to St. Mihiel" was beautifully read by Mrs. Victor Davidson, who received the applause of the large number of members present.

Decatur Reserves Plan Year's Work.

The Decatur Girl Reserve club has begun the year's work successfully and is making itself felt in the high school as an influence for the highest and best in school life. Its members have appeared from time to time on chapel programs and at present the club is getting Christmas boxes ready for some Indian children and a mountain girl, in whom the members are interested.

For good times there has been a hike, a tea and a banquet for the new members. The presentation of six Girl Reserve rings on this occasion has aroused much interest among the girls and several are trying to become eligible to own one. The regular bi-monthly meeting will be held Wednesday after school.

A RADICAL DICTATOR.

It is notable that at the recent "harmony breakfast" at the white house, with several of the old-line republican senators vieing with the president as to who could eat the most buckwheat cakes with Georgia cane syrup, one of the guests was not a republican, nor a democrat. In fact, there were no democrats invited.

This particular guest, who ate breakfast under the presidential roof for the first time, was no less an important figure—in the 70th congress—than Senator Henrik Shipstead, the wild, broncho-busting "farm-labor" solon from Minnesota.

He sat in the solemn presence of such old-guard leaders as Senators Curtis and Capper, of Kansas; Shortridge, of California; Couzens, of Michigan; Bingham, of Connecticut; Vale, of Vermont; Gooding, of Idaho; Stewart, of Iowa, and Sackett, of Kentucky.

Fine company for the recalcitrant and incorrigable Shipstead!

And the whys and wherefores are just beginning to dawn upon the bewildered public. Cool head has Coolidge! The truth is, Shipstead holds a complete and unquestioned balance of power in the next senate—Shipstead the radical! Worth cultivating, even with little pork sausages from a St. Paul packing house!

The election Monday of the republican candidate in Maine makes the Minnesota senator a determining factor. If he votes with a solid democratic alignment against a solid republican alignment a tie will result which must be broken by the vice president.

Says the Washington correspondent of The New York Times:

"His invitation to meet a group of republican senators at the president's board is taken to be part of the current effort of the republican organization of the senate to receive the La Follette senators back into the republican ranks, out of which they were cast two years ago. One of them, Frazier, of North Dakota, has accepted forgiveness and will get a committee chairmanship."

The 70th congress, which will not convene until December, 1927, unless called into extra session, will run continuously until the summer of the national election year, recessing just prior to the national party conventions. Therefore it is this particular congress that will be involved most heavily in national politics, as is every congress extending through the presidential years.

It is obvious the president feels insecure. Party disaster has been invited by primary corruption, and by the failure of congress thus far to provide the needed farm relief legislation.

The president undeniably wants a second regular term. He feels his failure to coordinate the regulars and insurgents, and the recent democratic gains, combine to jeopardize both personal and party success. In the president's desperation, therefore, insurgents feel that they have won a great victory. The president even yielded to Senators Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota, in their protests that an appointment had been made without consulting them.

Hence, too, the overtures that are being made to all the La Follette group, of which Shipstead—though not even professing to be a republican—now becomes the most outstanding figure! In reality he becomes a dictator, radical as he is, if he chooses to capitalize his position.

LESSON OF FAILURE.

The Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia, now permanently closed, made a sorry mess of it from the beginning. It rang the curtain down with a deficit of $5,500,000, although the municipality had contributed some $18,000,000 and debentures to the extent of $3,000,000 were sold to the public. They are worthless as they were without guarantees except as participating in profits. Such certificates cannot find redemption in a deficit.

There were many reasons for the failure — mismanagement perhaps being foremost. But in the failure there is also emphasized some facts that ought to be given serious thought by all future international exposition movements in this country. To illustrate the centennial celebration in Philadelphia 50 years ago, visited by thousands who are living today, drew a total attendance of 10,000,000 as against 5,000,000 for the sesqui. The country had little more than one-half the population in 1876. The San Francisco exposition drew a total attendance of 18,000,000. The World's fair at Chicago drew about the same. The St. Louis exposition drew about 15,000,000 attendance. Of all of these the San Francisco exposition actually paid big dividends. It gave the city the nucleus for its great civic center, and its net profits in cash were around $1,000,000.

The failure of the sesqui in 1926 stands out gloomily in such company. The fact is—and this is the lesson the last exposition's fate conveys—the times have so changed that there is no place for such an undertaking.

With moving pictures, expanded amusements, quick transportation, aerial navigation, the speed in traveling overseas—with all of these modern developments, in connection with an advanced order of state and local fairs, and sectional expositions of educational merit, such as the Southeastern, the people do not enthuse to the great "internationals," nor is there any good, impelling reason to visit them in this day and hour.

TALMADGE IS RIGHT.

Eugene Talmadge, Georgia's commissioner of agriculture-elect, who will take office in June, 1927, struck the nail on the head when he said, in an Associated Press interview in Atlanta Friday:

"Credit is the biggest curse to the farmer today. It has sapped him of his independence and has tended to lower the dignity of dirt farming. There is only one recipe for successful farming in Georgia, that is for the farmer to raise all he needs at home and then as much cotton as he can. When the farmer varies from that he raises nothing but the devil. Every farmer who has been following that recipe is all right today. It has tided him over the bad years and helped him to 'mop up' in the good ones. The so-called over-production in cotton this year would not have been disastrous to the Georgia farmer had he raised all his home needs."

The Constitution has consistently maintained that politicians, including members of congress, have had in mind too much the idea that farm relief legislation devolved almost entirely upon the extension of credit agencies. There has been a great deal of demagoguery about this view of it—and not enough sincere determination to help the farmer by helping him market his products, and by the proper control of surpluses.

The farmer needs legislation that will help to get him out of debt rather than to invite him, with gestures of sympathy, to go further into debt.

That the growing of all needed supplies for home consumption, including foods and feeds, thereby making cotton or other purely money crops surpluses, is the only formula for enduring farm prosperity, is as plain as the nose on one's face. There is no dependable alternative.

The Constitution has consistently urged this program, and with a marked measure of success. The recent statistics issued by the department of commerce show that Georgia has advanced more rapidly in diversified production in the past five years than any other state in the country. And yet the farmers have a far way to go before Georgia agriculture as a whole will be properly balanced.

There is no reason why every farmer should not provide first of all for the essentials that must be either grown or purchased—and if purchased they must be paid for from the proceeds of a single crop. That means agricultural slavery.

Time was, in the old crude days, before we had good roads and automobiles and close-by markets, that farmers entitled to the name raised practically everything they needed—not merely corn and hay and wheat and meat, but fruits, year-around vegetables, cane syrup and sugar, and many of the delicacies that enter into good living at home all the time. They went further. They made many of the other necessities around the farm. Every good farm had its blacksmith shop, its cane mill, its woodworking shop, etc.

Those were days of economy—the days before the jazz and the joy-riding mania struck the country, as it did the towns and cities.

Perhaps it would not be economy to do all of these things now, since ready markets are at hand, and labor is high, but it shows what they can do if they have to. It is not only economy, but common horse-sense, to raise the grains and hays and meats for a full year's supply—from "hog-killing time" to "hog-killing time."

And how independent and inviting such a program makes life on the farm!

THE CURTAIN AT LAST.

However divided may be the opinions of the American people as to the verdict in the Hall-Mills case, in one particular they ought to be united—and that is that the whole miserable mess has been brought to a close.

Not in the history of this country have the people been so completely surfeited with salacious reading as that which has been poured out of "Somerset courthouse" daily during the past several weeks.

The most noted writers of America, particularly those who pander to that element that devours sex and social sensationalism, were dispatched to Somerville, N. J., to "cover" the story and to watch every opportunity to "grip the public" with some new exploitation of the social sins.

The trial, the evidence—running the gamut of every sordid appeal that enters into what the public loves to call "the human triangle"—kept its place on the front pages of every newspaper in America. The feature pages have been filled with the human-interest discussions of literary observers and commentators.

The public demanded it. The newspapers were not to blame. But there isn't a respectable newspaper in the country that has not already registered a hearty relief that the curtain has fallen.

The truth is, the story did not deserve the publicity given to it. It was but one of many of the kind that is occurring every day.

It is unfortunate that the reading public demands to be fed daily with so much of this kind of stuff. But it does—else great fortunes would not have been spent by the agencies of printed communication to carry it.

We need in this country an aroused national conscience against the especial exploitation of the so-called social sins and crimes.

For the curtain on the Hall-Mills case, heaven be thanked!

BOOTLEG LIQUOR.

"An idle brain is the devil's workshop." Somebody said it long ago.

One is reminded of it almost every time the tragedies of a day are scanned in the newspapers.

Before us is the story of a woman having shot her husband in self-defense. "He was out of work and had been drinking heavily of late," she sobbed.

Here is the news of a divorce suit. The wife says her husband does not work but "drinks heavily and is cruel."

Here is another story of one of the thousands of divorce cases that congest the courts in every state and section. It relates the same sad facts—idleness, hooch, brutality.

And here is a husband suing for divorce. "My wife spends her time in dance halls and butterflying around with no thought of home or the child."

Idleness, a "good time," the "party fever," home wreckage!

And here is another of life's tragedies—

A young married woman attempts suicide. There are scores of such attempts in Atlanta every month. Some are successful. Ask the Grady hospital authorities. They know life's woes as none others do. She rallies, and she says her husband refuses to work and provide for her, leaving her to the mercy of the streets to keep body and soul together. She preferred death.

"An idle brain the devil's workshop."

Marriages are decreasing in proportion to population. Divorces are increasing.

There are obvious reasons for both—

The women of today are more independent, more self-sustaining than ever before. They are in business. They give less thought to the necessity of marriage. That is why marriages are decreasing.

As to divorces—the streams of bootleg liquor that flow as never before in the history of the nation carry an overload of home wreckage with their tides.

The rum-fired brain is unfitted for work. It becomes idle—"the devil's workshop."

The use of bootleg liquor is not confined to men. It is far too general also among women.

It fosters the social license system that is ruining the American home, and debauching too many otherwise fine young people.

Bootleg liquor! It is the fountain head of most of our serious social problems.

Can't we do without it this Christmas season? And show to the world that we are law abiding? And that the sanctity of the home—in this joyous period of cheer and good will—shall not be sacrificed to that which destroys soul and conscience, and makes acute brains idle, and good people brutes?

JUDICIAL COURAGE.

Courageous Judge "Bob" Hardeman! He deserves the commendation of every law-abiding citizen in Georgia.

Following the acquittal of four men in the superior court in Toombs county Friday, all of whom were charged with participation in a masked mob that recently shot down a white man in the presence of his wife and children, Judge Hardeman said from the bench:

"If hooded men continue to parade the streets at a midnight hour, marauding and prying upon the public, and taking human life, the right men will be caught some time and then it will be my pleasure to sentence these masked hoodlums to hanging or death in the electric chair."

And again:

"The law does not provide for hooded men to sit in judgment in the dark to administer punishment which they have no power to give. As much as I hate immorality, intemperance and whisky, I would rather see an open barroom in every corner of the streets of my home county than a hooded organization that undertakes to administer punishment without trial. You men know, you who invade homes, who cover your faces, who work in darkness to prey upon defenseless women, you haven't the backbone or the blood in your veins to come out in the open and I have denounced you from the bench all over Georgia."

Judge Harry Reed, of the Waycross circuit, convened the Coffee county grand jury the day following a recent lynching in that county and charged it to the same effect.

Indictments were quickly found and in less than six weeks after the mob had done its work all but four were convicted and serving long sentences, the leader under a sentence for life.

This is the spirit of judicial courage that will break up mob violence, eliminate inexcusable trial delays through technicalities, and restore the full confidence of the public in the integrity and the efficiency of our judiciary system.

DESERVES SUPPORT.

The movement to raise an endowment fund of $150,000 for Young Harris College—a Methodist institution located in the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains—is worthy of earnest and enthusiastic support.

The campaign has been opened with splendid spirit in Atlanta, Colonel W. L. Peel, of this city, who had already done so much for this college, heading the donations with $5,000. Dr. J. A. Sharp, the president, who has made personal sacrifices to serve in a work that means so much to the boys and girls of the mountains, donated $1,000 from his meagre salary.

Young Harris College has done and is doing valiant service in giving education and vocational training to mountain youth. Some of the most distinguished men in Georgia, in professional, business, industrial and social life, received their education at this institution. Many of the school rooms, and more of the happy, Christian homes of Georgia, are presided over by the daughters of this institution.

It has carried the light of understanding into the darkest crevices of the mountain fastnesses, and has lifted the shroud of illiteracy from hundreds of homes.

The institution is located in a beautiful valley in Towns county, almost on the North Carolina line. It is thorough, with refreshing environs, and a most heartening moral atmosphere.

TAX REDUCTION FIGHT.

Democratic leaders who are members of committees dealing with revenue legislation are determined, it is announced, to put forward a tax reduction bill at the short session of congress to absorb the $350,000,000 surplus which is already in sight.

There is no good reason why the democratic plan should not prevail. The $350,000,000 surplus is not only foreseen, but it will probably be much larger than that figure by the end of the fiscal year. That is admitted by treasury actuaries. Certainly it should not stay idle in the vaults when the reduction of the war tax burdens will mean so much to the economic welfare of the country. And it should not be applied to reducing the national debt. We have been doing that too fast. Future generations should help pay for the war. The great business interests of the nation of today should not be wholly penalized for a war fought and won for the benefit of the ages to come more than specifically for the benefit of the age in which we live.

A tax reduction bill, equitably drawn, should pass at the short session, and it should apply to 1926 taxes.

THE RETURN

(TO FRANCES.)

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

You come to us like life, once more,—
A phantom from that dreamless shore
Where God gives His beloved sleep
And the weary never wake to weep.
You come to us like morning light
After the shadows of deep Night.

II.

Prayer heavenward went for you, but I—
Who have no commerce with the sky,
Hid my heart's grief, for that I knew
Morning would bring the light of you!
The light of you! Let gloom depart,—
'Tis morning in the world, Sweetheart.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY ASHBY JONES.

The Average Man.

In the classic story which Jesus of Nazareth told, about the employer who gave five talents to one of his men, two to another, and one to another, the emphasis is usually placed either upon the five talent man, or the man who received one talent. Even the preacher, who reads the story to his congregation, usually hurries over the account of the two talent man, slurring his words, until he comes to the man who received one talent. And yet, the story teller must have had some reason, other than merely padding the incident, for telling about the man who received two talents.

It seems characteristic of human nature to be interested in extremes. We love striking contrasts, and sensational comparisons. Mountain and valley are very much more attractive than the unrelieved monotony of the plain and prairie. So the interest in this story has centered almost entirely upon the striking contrast between the five, and the one talent man. We look with intense interest and expectation, at the man of brilliant promise who has every advantage in life, or we look with intense sympathy upon the poor street urchin, handicapped by birth and environment. Great wealth or great poverty will attract attention, but the man who is neither rich nor poor seems to hold very little interest. Yet, by far, the most important man in all that pertains to the welfare and progress of the world, is this man of two talents, whom we sometimes speak of as the "average man."

The General Public.

To begin with, he is decidedly in the majority. He is very apt to be overlooked because he is so poorly advertised. He is not the object of admiration or envy on account of his great wealth, nor is he the object of charity and sympathy on account of his poverty. Neither his successes nor his failures are striking enough to attract attention. His joys are not unusual enough to call in his friends to rejoice with him, nor are his sorrows uncommon enough to attract special sympathy. He is not a scholar, to draw about him disciples to learn. Neither is he an illiterate, to demand special efforts for his enlightenment.

Your two talent man escapes individual attention. He is dealt with en masse. He is what is known as the "general public," and is thus addressed through the papers and in circular letters. Politically, he is not great enough to be wooed and not mean enough to be bought. He is seldom waited upon individually, but is reached from the stump, or by general campaign literature.

He seems to be less interesting from the religious standpoint. He is not a man of surpassing power and influence, whose advent to the ranks of the righteous would be of great help. Neither is he an outcast in the highways and hedges, whose conversion would bring great rejoicing. He is not a man of unusual wickedness, against whom mothers warn their boys. There is so little sentiment about the average man. He is just a common, every day sort of a man.

Value of Two Talents.

Most of us ought to be very sympathetic with this man of two talents. For most of us belong to just that crowd. For that reason I am thinking of the dangers of being an average man. There is the danger of losing one's individuality in the crowd, which means losing one's sense of responsibility. Nearly all the appeals of life are made either to the splendid ability of the five talent man, to arouse him to a sense of his responsibility, or to the lowest order of man, to assert his manhood. The danger is, that the average man will do just enough to "get by."

I do not discount, for a moment, the splendid work of the five talent man, but it must be remembered that it is the two talent man who makes the work of the five talent man possible. He furnishes the audience for the orator and artist, the poet and musician. It is his vote which realizes the dreams of statesmen, and his arm which accomplishes the triumph of great generals. It is the average workman who creates the wealth of the great financier, and the average law abiding citizen, who makes property and business secure. It is, after all, the two talent man who makes a city, or a nation, what it is. That subtle but irresistible influence, which we call "public opinion," which rules in every society, is made up of the opinions of the men of two talents.

Now, here is to be found the inspiration for the average man. He is an essential part of the great whole. His vote counts in the final result. This is true, not only at the ballot box, but in making a book or a man popular, or in giving currency to a sentiment or an opinion. Let him understand that, though he has only two talents, they are his, and no one else can use them.

The Final Award.

But the real significance of this story is to be found in the fact that the two talent man increased his talents in the same proportion as did the man of five talents. That, after all, is the inspiration and glory of this adventure, which we call life. Life is not defined and fixed in any limitations. One is not put in some particular place at birth and forced to finish his life there. Life is an opportunity for growth and development. Every man may multiply his personality.

The final award, as revealed in this story, is significant also. The Master's commendation of the two talent man is just as hearty, as of the man of five talents. Indeed, the words are the same, "Well done, good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many things." Here is a beautiful glimpse of the principle of immortality. The grave is not the end of anything. Death simply ushers one into a still larger opportunity. All that has been accomplished here is a promise and prophecy of a larger opportunity for larger accomplishments.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

What the Nation Should Do to Honor Washington's Bicentennary.

Sunday last with some valued friends I motored to the Washington Memorial and the encampment field of Valley Forge. The names of three places form the trefoil of our revolutionary history—Lexington, Valley Forge and Yorktown!

Lexington is, and will ever be while Americans survive, the revered birthplace of freedom's largest human adventure.

Valley Forge must rank second only to Gethsemane as "the garden of bloody sweat" for those who agonized for the salvation of a people.

Yorktown memorializes for all time the victory that blessed the patience and valor of patriots "who leaned upon the arm of God" and prayed for "liberty or death!"

But more than the first and the last of them Valley Forge makes the strongest, the most poignant appeal to the sentiments and gratitude of the descendants and beneficiaries of the heroic men who suffered and died there as martyrs of independence.

The historic and sanctified field has been recovered and its landmarks restored, and volunteer patriots have been slowly but persistently, building upon it a fittingly splendid Washington memorial in the form of associated buildings to contain in perpetuity the relics and symbols of the world-transforming revolution.

Creating for Centuries.

The planners of this preeminent project had the vision of artists and the faith of priests and prophets. Their eyes went forward into the centuries ahead and saw untold millions of the races of men from all earth's continents coming upon this glorified terrain to honor Washington and his "ragged regiments," to look upon the tributes of a grateful people and to draw emulative inspirations from their examples.

The alpha of the ambitious scheme is the Washington Memorial chapel, which has reached complete construction and is nearing perfection of its assigned appointments. The exterior is majestic and the interior both awes and charms everyone who loves the icons or religion and patriotism.

This chapel is filled with costly and beautiful memorials of the men and women who builded the republic. Herein one looks with reverent feelings upon the Ped of the Patriots, the Washington-Sullivan font, the Washington-Wood memorial pulpit, Perclose and Lectern, the Washington door, the Door of the Allies, the Inauguration Door, the Washington-Wanamaker Altar and Reredos, the Snyder-Austin Memorial Organ, the Holstein Prayer Desk, the Washington-Green Litany Desk, the Hovrnden Tablets in memory of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and of the framers of the constitution, the Screens of the major and brigadier generals at Valley Forge and the Choir Stalls in memory of the several brigades in the encampment. The ensemble is of unequaled beauty.

The completed memorial will include the Memorial Chapel, the Patriots' Hall, the Memorial Library, the Cloister of the Colonies, the Porch of the Allies, the Thanksgiving Tower and the Woodland Cathedral. Apart from this administration group will be erected nine Halls of History, as follows:

1. The Aborigines—Pocahontas Hall.
2. The European Background—Raleigh Hall.
3. The Colonial Period—Franklin Hall.
4. The Revolution — Washington Hall.
5. The Period of National Development—Jefferson Hall.
6. The Civil War—Lincoln Hall.
7. The Period of National Expansion—Roosevelt Hall.
8. The Period of International Influence—Wilson Hall.
9. The World War—Victory Hall.

A Splendid National Shrine.

Even this brief summary will suggest to the most casual reader that this Valley Forge Washington memorial is destined to become in time the most splendid national shrine on the globe.

There is nothing transient or merely superficial about it. All is solid, superb and posited for the ages.

The memorial windows excel the greatest windows of European cathedrals. That over the altar is the Martha Washington window given by the Colonial Dames of Pennsylvania. Next to it is the Bishop White window, which is of particular interest to this writer, since it memorializes his great-grand-uncle, William White, who was the first bishop and "Father of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America." In history it is recorded that:

"He had carefully studied the reasons for the rebellion, espoused the American cause, and placed himself in the attitude of a rebel to his king."

The continental congress had fled from Philadelphia on the approach of the enemy. It was at York and there appointed Bishop White to be its chaplain. He hurried thither and became "the chaplain who followed that congress as it was driven a fugitive from place to place, while directing the revolutionary war."

All the memorial windows, each a superb witness to some great American principle and event, are in place; the "Roof of the Republic" with panels for each state, the Cloister of the Colonies and the Porch of the Allies are being completed.

* * * *

The "Peace Chime."

A "Peace Chime" of thirteen fine bells, one for each colony, is now in a temporary wooden belfry, but is eventually to be in the Thanksgiving Tower that will dominate the congeries of buildings.

One of these bells is assigned to Georgia, of course, but Georgia is one of the five colonial states that has not yet adopted and paid for its bell. That should get the attention and efforts of our patriots at once.

The principal contribution from Georgia is that of the panel for the Georgia bay in the "Roof of the Republic" and is due to the state pride and generosity of Hon. Charles Adamson, of Cedartown.

It is a great pity, to my notion, that Philadelphia did not see the supreme opportunity to put the millions she has squandered upon an unsuccessful sesqui-centennial show into the splendor and permanence of this Valley Forge Washington memorial. Its significance and proximity make it a genuine adjunct of Philadelphia history. By completing and dedicating it this year she would have captured a real world-wide glory and the possession of a shrine that will intrigue the freemen of the world to the end of the ages.

That local opportunity has gone by, but another and nationally noble one comes forward to confront and challenge us.

Washington's Bicentennary.

Congress has taken preliminary steps toward the celebration in 1932 of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Washington.

A number of more or less ambitious projects have been suggested in that connection, but what one would be better than for the congress of our whole people to devote the necessary $20,000,000 to the completion in the time of this splendid Valley Forge memorial? They can easily pare the sum from our annual war budgets for the next four years, without peril to our national defense, and dedicate in 1932 the shrine that would inspire the nation and the world with the loftiest ideals of Freedom and Peace!

History's Day Book

BY SAM W. SMALL.

DECEMBER 5.

Fifty years ago on this date the first legal and formal cremation of a human body was performed in the United States.

It was the body of Baron De Palm, a nobleman who was born at Augsberg in southern Germany in 1809, but who had for many years resided in the United States as a plain citizen, though generally mentioned by his title. He was a public advocate of cremation as the sensible and sanitary method of disposing of the body after death. Therefore he ordered that his own body should be so treated.

The cremation took place in a prepared furnace at Washington in Pennsylvania. The ceremony was attended by notable physicians, publicists and officials of Pittsburgh, New York and other leading cities, who were curious to watch the process and judge its circumstances.

Since then cremation has become more or less common throughout the country. The writer of this article is a confirmed believer in the propriety of cremation and the bodies of the deceased members of his immediate family have been so treated.

The reduction of the human body to ashes by fire was an early and widely practiced usage of antiquity. The early Aryans, Greeks, Romans, Slavs, Celts and Germans were accustomed to cremate their dead. The graves that are found throughout northern Europe and that date from the "bronze age" contain only jars of ashes. Now in the United States nearly every considerable city has a crematory for the reducing of dead bodies to ashes.

The body is placed in an oblong brick or metallic chamber underneath which is a furnace. The air of the chamber is raised to a very high temperature before the body is put in, and a stream of heated hydro-carbon from a gasometer is then admitted, which on contact with the intensely heated air within at once bursts into flames. Outer air is not admitted nor the noxious gas evolved by the combustion permitted to escape. It passes into a second furnace where it is consumed. By this process a body weighing 144 pounds is reduced in about fifty minutes to not more than four pounds of lime-dust. The process is both decent and reverent.

Everyday Questions

ANSWERED BY

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Watertown, N. Y.

"I know of no law involving the moral conduct and personal liberties of the people that was repealed because the people obeyed it. It is because the people have refused to obey the laws which they consider a violation of their personal rights and liberties that such laws have been repealed.

"The Puritans refused to obey the laws of the Colonies against smoking. The patriots refused to obey the Stamp act. The abolitionists refused to obey the fugitive slave law. Wisconsin refused to obey the Burnett law and the state went democratic, electing George W. Peck as governor.

"Now we erect monuments to these law-breakers. I hope to live long enough to help dedicate memorials to the defenders of personal liberty, the great army of men and women now engaged in defying the Volstead act. Even the Master and Savior of us all broke the laws regulating the observance of the Sabbath."

What does Dr. Cadman think of this quotation?

The massing of these precedents, some of which are irrelevant, masks the essential weakness of the argument presented. Our Lord encouraged nothing unlawful. On the contrary, He specifically stated that He came not to destroy but to fulfill the law. The fact that He allowed His disciples to satisfy their hunger or relieved suffering and distress in defiance of Sabbatarian bigotry has no logical bearing on the issue between the wets and the drys.

What He would do in reference to the drinking customs of today is not so speculative. Nor does it require a stretch of imagination to conceive His attitude toward those who deliberately and openly defy legislation which is intended to secure the greatest good for the greatest number.

The refusal of the colonists to accept the Stamp act and of the abolitionists to respect the fugitive slave law was based upon a conscientious resistance to measures destructive of fundamental freedom. The stand this question announces has nothing directly to do with representation in government nor with personal liberty in general. It relates solely to the right to drink alcoholic beverages.

What is more to the point, the patriots lugged in here for the defense of drinking were prepared to face the consequences of their opposition, which in two instances the author of the quotation names entailed war. Does he seriously purpose a similar opposition? Is he ready to dedicate public memorials to the thieves, thugs and gunmen who bribe or fire upon state officials and murder their fellow conspirators or to bootleggers who purvey poisonous liquors?

Are professional criminals and malefactors who have acquired wealth through lawlessness his civic heroes? If not, why should he rank them with the men who fought for our common liberties? His wild and whirling words but reveal the extent of the demoralization they endeavor to justify.

The two questions which should not be muddled by his sophisticated rhetoric are simply these: Has the state the right to regulate and control public evils as it pleases? Is drink such an evil as to require that regulation and control? The people have replied in the affirmative to both queries. If they desire to revoke their decision as to either or both it is entirely within their power to do so.

I for one do not believe they will take any such retrograde step. And if this gentleman, who evidently believes otherwise, lives till they do he may have to be congratulated upon making actual the return of Methuselah.

Englewood, N. J.

By what authority are the prelates of the Roman Catholic church who came to this country in connection with the Eucharistic congress referred to as princes of the church?

I do not recall in reading the life of our Lord as set forth in the New Testament that His apostles were ever referred to as princes.

Ecclesiastical titles are largely honorary and carry no necessary significance outside the communions bestowing them except in countries having state churches. Courtesy demands, however, that they shall be respected in society.

So cardinals as princes of Catholicism or patriarchs as primates of the Greek Orthodox church, or His Grace of Canterbury as the head of the Anglican church and a "lord spiritual" of the state, as well as American doctors of divinity or the reverend brethren of all ranks of the clergy, derive these titles from custom and not from Christ.

The New Testament invests His ministers with a certain amount of authority and St. Paul insisted that they should be treated with the respect due to their vocation, provided this was fully served by them. The rest is the outcome of twenty centuries of church law and usage.

COOLIDGE TO TRY TO AVOID EXTRA CONGRESS SESSION

President May Be Forced To Make Call, However, By Congressional Leaders

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, December 4.—(Special Correspondence.)—Congress assembles next Monday and President Coolidge at one of the early meetings will deliver his annual message. The probable contents of the message and the probable legislation by congress have supplied the bulk of the political discussion in the newspapers for some two weeks past.

This condition in other years would provide the text for reflection on a change in newspaper custom. Possibly a statistician would compare the number of times newspapers of an earlier day used the past tense, with the number of future tenses in a modern paper. Older persons would deplore the era of "the journalism of anticipation," and would emit cynical recollections about a time when the pride of a newspaper was the quality of its descriptions of what took place yesterday, rather than the abundance, if not the accuracy, of its forecasts about what is expected tomorrow. To this argument point would be added by the fact that much of the anticipatory discussion about the coming session focuses on one aspect of it—and that the most distant in time; namely, whether there will be an extra session of congress after the immediate impending one comes to an end on March 4.

But as it happens this year, the question whether there will be a special session is a present, immediate subject, and a broad and important one. It touches the heart of nearly everything else. To understand this, it is desirable to begin with some very A. B. C. explanation.

I suspect a large part of the public generally thinks that the congress which meets on Monday is the new congress that was elected last month. (Let the reader ask himself if he has not had this impression.) With that election fresh in their minds, people think of its results as taking effect on Monday. They think, for example, that Wagner, of New York, will step immediately into the shoes of the defeated Wadsworth; that Vare, of Pennsylvania, will appear to claim his seat; that the Vare and Smith cases will be threshed to a conclusion during the coming weeks; that all the important effects of the recent election will come to fruit on Monday.

But the fact is, the congress that meets on Monday is the old one; it is not the new one that was elected last month. The new congress will not function, normally, until next December, December, 1927, a year from now.

A congress is elected in November, 1926; it reflects the public feeling of that time, the judgment of the people about the party in power and about pending subjects of election. But that newly elected congress does not come into existence, normally, until December, 1927. For 13 months the judgment of the people and the verdict of the voters does not take effect. Meantime legislators who have been voted out of office continue, nevertheless, to legislate. Under our mechanism of government the expression of public opinion in actual legislation waits 13 months after that public opinion has expressed itself in the election.

That this is awkward almost everybody admits. It has disadvantages additional to the one already mentioned.

To remedy this awkward detail of our mechanism of government is one of the items on the program of the session of congress that begins Monday. There is pending before it a constitutional amendment which would enable a congress elected in November to meet the following January. By this pending amendment a new congress would go to work two months after the people elected it, instead of 13 months. (The same amendment would provide that a president elected in November be inaugurated in January.)

This proposed amendment has been passed by the senate. So numerous and convincing were the arguments for it that in the final roll call only two senators (out of 96) voted against it. Whenever a measure passes the senate with only two votes in opposition, you can reasonably say the decision was unanimous; for two is, so to speak, the normal average of eccentrics in any body of 96, the normal number which on any one subject will depart from the crowd for reasons probably more marked by whimsicalness or other individual eccentricity than by soundness.

This amendment, having been piloted successfully through the senate by Norris, of Nebraska, is now before the house. The house can add its approval any time; nothing really stands in the way except inertia, or preoccupation with other things. The only valid reason for the house not acting on it this session is lack of time within the fixed limitation of the present congress, which is March 4. That is, the only valid reason for the house not acting on this amendment is precisely the reason that would be overcome if the house would act. If this amendment were in effect the coming congress would not come to an end March 4; it would have no fixed limitation, but would go on comfortably until its necessary work should be finished.

This brings us to the next elementary fact about the coming session, a fact associated with the one just discussed, and equally awkward.

The coming session of congress is a short one. It is not short in the sense of having little business to do; on the contrary it has more business than it can do. It is short because it had a fixed limitation; it expires automatically on March 4, next. Thereafter there will be no congress in session until the following December.

That is, there will be no congress in session unless President Coolidge should call a special session of the new one.

Since we are being very A. B. C. we may set out like a schedule:

December 6, 1926 (next Monday)—old congress begins its final session.

March 4, 1927—old congress goes out of existence.

March 4, 1927—new congress comes into existence, but does not normally meet.

December 5, 1927—new congress holds its first regular session.

Between March 5, 1927, and December 5, 1927—no congress in session unless President Coolidge calls a special session of the new one.

To recapitulate this difficult but necessary explanation: The congress which sits on Monday is not the new congress that was elected seven weeks ago. It is the old congress that was elected more than two years ago in 1924. This old congress dies, goes out of existence, on March 4 next. But the new congress does not hold its first regular session until December 5, 1927. Consequently, from March 4 next until December 5 following, there will be no congress in session.

There will be no congress in session, that is, unless President Coolidge calls a special session of the new one. Whether he will; whether he will be obliged to; or whether those who want an extra session can so maneuver as to compel him to call one—all that composes a primary aspect of the session that begins on Monday.

President Coolidge does not like special sessions of congress. One might say he does not greatly like regular sessions. President Coolidge likes congress best when it is in recess with the members away at their homes. This preference on Mr. Coolidge's part is temperamental; but let no one infer it is vanity or egotism. It is not that he wants the spotlight on himself. The New York World, (which is the most pungent of Mr. Coolidge's newspaper critics), advocating a special session, said the other day:

"In the republican press here in the east the alarming legend is being created that the wicked democrats will be more wicked than usual if they compel Mr. Coolidge to call a special session of congress after March 4 next. That is easy to understand. Mr. Coolidge shines most brightly when he monopolizes the publicity from Washington through the uninterrupted and uncontradicted outpourings of the official spokesman. Mr. Coolidge shines least brightly when he is attempting to lead the party which is supposed to think so highly of him. This new congress, moreover, is less than ever a Coolidge congress, and the longer it can be kept from assembling the more placid will be the atmosphere of the white house."

Part of that may be a fair surmise. As between one congress and another, doubtless Mr. Coolidge is just a little more comfortable—yet very little more—with a congress like the old one, which is fairly strongly republican, than with a congress like the new one, which is very close to democratic.

But the other motive ascribed by The World to Mr. Coolidge: "Mr. Coolidge shines most brightly when he monopolizes the publicity from Washington"—that imputation shows failure to grasp Mr. Coolidge's psychology. (Possibly there may be confusion between the word "publicity," which The World uses, and the word "spotlight," which I use. It may be argued fairly that Mr. Coolidge likes to use publicity. He knows how to use it effectively. But he uses it with himself in the background—hence the fiction of the "official spokesman." I am only saying that Mr. Coolidge does not take an egotist's delight in the spotlight.)

If Mr. Coolidge really enjoyed the spotlight as—may one suggest?—President Roosevelt enjoyed it, he would encourage not the absence of congress but the presence of it. Mr. Roosevelt got the maximum of publicity out of controversies with a congress much less hostile to him than either the present congress or the next one is to Mr. Coolidge.

This is not defending Mr. Coolidge. It is not arguing at all. It is merely trying to explain one aspect of Mr. Coolidge's temperament. If one were to express individual bias, a good many persons would say Mr. Coolidge's distaste for the limelight is rather a weakness; that he would be a more desirable president if he enjoyed battling with congress and liked to have them here to shoot at from short range.

Mr. Coolidge prefers that he be out of the spotlight, that congress be out of it, that the whole government be out of it, that all Washington be out of it. He shows suppressed disquiet when any department or individual in the government seems to be causing over-much publicity, whether by design or unavoidably. On some occasions he lets his irritation show, as when the army and navy, or some of the semi-volunteer attachments of the army or navy, seem to be inciting publicity designed to get larger appropriations or to avoid reductions of personnel or equipment.

Mr. Coolidge's distaste for any part of the government attracting much attention is fundamental and inclusive. Once, just after a congress had adjourned, the president told the newspaper men he hoped that for some months now there would be the minimum of news out of Washington. He indicated that on the whole he thought the country was better off in proportion as news out of Washington was scarce. Mr. Coolidge is personally most comfortable, and thinks the country is more comfortable, when the spotlight is at Somerville, N. J., occupied with a murder trial; or, better yet, at the even more distant trial of another sort at Los Angeles.

Congress as a whole does not share this point of view of Mr. Coolidge; it likes to be in session. And so one of the important aspects of the coming session—perhaps the most important—may be a contest of wits and endurance between Mr. Coolidge, on the one hand, and the bulk of congress on the other over the matter of a special session to be called after March 4.

Congress may so act as to compel Mr. Coolidge to call one. Congress has not Mr. Coolidge's temperament about publicity and activity. In addition, the fact already mentioned, the awkwardness in our system of government which prevents a new congress from functioning until 13 months after it is elected, constitutes a legitimate motive for this coming session so acting as to compel a special session. The new congress, elected on current issues and as the reflection of current conditions, is rather entitled to its "place in the sun" before the sun sets on these conditions. An extra session after March 4 could be brought about in any one of many ways, and for justified motives.

The best possible motive for a special session after the coming one is the quantity of business before it. This session will be very short. Count the days between December 6 and March 4; deduct the Christmas recess and the Sundays and Lincoln's birthday and Washington's birthday, and not a great many working days are left. Those days could readily be consumed by the absolutely indispensable routine business of the session.

The main business of the coming session is the passing of the appropriations necessary to pay government salaries and otherwise keep the government going. (In the early days when the government was organized that was all these short three-month sessions were intended to do.)

Since the introduction of the budget system the passing of appropriations has been simplified some. Nevertheless, the immense and detailed bills providing the money for literally thousands of activities and hundreds of thousands of employees contain abundant occasions for legitimate debate. Quite often fundamental principles are involved in mere details of appropriations. The wets in congress usually oppose the constantly increasing appropriations for prohibition enforcement. The Washington Conference for the Limitation of Armament, which was regarded as the outstanding achievement of Harding's administration, was authorized by an amendment which Senator Borah introduced to the navy appropriation bill.

If any or several appropriation bills in the coming session should involve so much debate and delay as to compel the president to call a special session later in order to keep the government going, no one need be certain the motive on the part of congress was merely to compel Mr. Coolidge to do something they know he doesn't like. The motive can be legitimate and the event can be justified.

Since the coming session is very short and since the indispensable appropriation bills could readily consume all the time, we must now consider the general legislation which is either scheduled to come up or may be brought up. If that general legislation, or any items of it, seems to congress or to the country to be very important, it will follow that congress presumably will try to act on it in the coming session. If the action is not completed by March 4 President Coolidge will be obliged to consider whether the country thinks such legislation can wait a year, or whether he should call a special session after March 4.

One piece of legislation, because of the publicity attending it, has come to be regarded as almost indispensable as the appropriation bills. The nature of it is such that it can cause much debate and delay. The proposal of it came from Mr. Coolidge, and this is the solitary initiative he has so far taken about the coming session, although in the formal message he will deliver to congress next Tuesday he may make further important recommendations.

President Coolidge did not make his sole proposal, so far, of legislation to be passed by the coming session with the notion it would involve debate and delay. Precisely the contrary. He made it to avert delay and possible embarrassment in future sessions.

During the campaign the democrats quite generally said that if the country would elect them they would reduce taxation. They meant they would take their action in the session for which they were soliciting action; that is, in the new congress which will not normally meet until December of next year. (Here is another example of the awkwardness explained above.) Quite a number of democrats were elected, or in many cases reelected, on this pledge.

About the time the elections were held it became apparent that the tax rates now in effect would produce a considerable surplus, about $300,000,000. This seems to be justification for immediate action on the rates.

The democratic proposal was for tax reduction as the term is commonly used. They would pass a bill reducing and rearranging all the tax rates; it would be applicable to all future years (until some subsequent change could be made).

It is apparent Mr. Coolidge disliked that proposal. His dislike may have been political or fundamental, or both. One infers that Mr. Coolidge and the members of his administration think the tax rates as they now stand are as low as it is prudent to make them. True, they bring in a surplus over what is necessary to pay the expenses of the government. But, while these rates bring in a surplus in a year of prosperity such as the present one, it is conceivable they might fail to bring in enough in some future year when general business and prosperity may fall off.

Consequently Mr. Coolidge and Secretary Mellon think the way to treat the surplus is to return it to the taxpayers in the shape of a rebate or credit—applicable to this one year's surplus only. That would call for a simple act of congress; it need not consume more than a few days. But once the broad subject of taxation comes up, as it is now sure to, the democrats and some others will produce a general and permanent reduction and rearrangement of tax rates. That will give rise to a debate which can be very time-consuming, and can create the necessity which would cause President Coolidge, however reluctantly, to call a special session of the new congress after March 4.

As much general legislation is pending or proposed as would consume the time of congress for a full year. Some of it is certain to come up because there is general assent that the questions involved should be decided. Some of it has powerful supporters who will try to bring it up, and powerful opponents who prefer it should not be brought up. There is general assent that the property of German citizens held by the American alien property custodian should be returned to them, and that the claims made by private Americans against the German government should be settled. Legislation to achieve this is certain to come up; Speaker Longworth thinks it should have first place on the program.

The corn belt farmers will revive their bill for farm aid which led to more debate in the session of congress last spring than any other one subject. Since the corn belt congressmen lost their fight last June encouragement has come to them in the shape of a sudden drop in the price of cotton below the cost of producing it—a phenomenon which will cause the southern cotton democrats to look with tolerance on an alliance with the corn-belt republicans, aiming at a form of farm aid that would help both. This subject could readily lead to an amount of debate that could consume half the session. This and taxation promise to be the two important items of legislation most certain to come up.

The bill for the disposition of Muscle Shoals is in a state where it can come up if those who favor the pending sale to a group of public utility corporations wish it to come up. The constitutional amendment I already have mentioned merely awaits passage in the house; it could be brought up and presumably could be passed in a brief time if any one has enough interest in it to push it.

There is a bill for appropriations for rivers and harbors, irreverently called "the pork barrel bill," which can consume much time and give rise to much oratory. One detail of it which proposes to divert more water from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi is violently opposed by communities bordering on the Great Lakes.

An important bill for the reorganization of the government departments has been ready for action during more than three years. If the French government should ratify the agreement for the settlement of the French debt to America it would follow that our congress would be called upon to ratify it within a reasonable time afterward. Legislation for radio control is regarded as urgent by many, though they differ violently among themselves about the precise form of it. The wets will introduce a number of measures; none of them will be passed, but the wets will emit a maximum of individual oratory for the consumption of home communities. The report of the senate committee on primary election expenditures in Illinois and Pennsylvania may give rise to discussion in the present congress, although the question whether to seat or to unseat Smith and Vare is for the next congress to determine. Legislation providing for railroad consolidation is regarded as urgent. So also is the bill to extend the charters of the Federal Reserve banks. The advocates of higher salaries for federal judges were disappointed when their bill failed to come up last July; they will try to bring it forward in this session.

Finally, there are several subjects which hardly will appear in the public debates, but which, in the conversation of the cloakroom, will consume as much time as any one subject of legislation. The republicans will discuss: Shall we or shall be not renominate Coolidge; and shall we or shall we not modify our present accepted dry position on prohibition? And the democrats will discuss the even more contentious and difficult problems inherent in the cleavage between their two most conspicuous leaders.

UNCANNY CANNER CAN CAN VITAMINS.

Recently I explained here why the home canner can't can vitamins while the factory cans 'em readily enough—the factory process is a vacuum process, and that prevents oxidation during the heating, and oxidation is destructive to vitamins. The home process ordinarily consists of heating with the lids tightly closed or even in open vessels with free access of air, so that oxidation inevitably occurs. But Mrs. L. H. F. makes me feel very uneasy about this, for she assures me I do not know whereof I speak. She believes she cans all the vitamins any factory can can, and she drives me into a funk hole by describing her process in detail. Let her have the floor—that's my policy whenever a member of the militant sex rises to remark:

"It makes me smile when you say, doctor, that the housewife cannot can vitamins while the canning factories can can them. I have to tell you that you do not know.

"I can show you in my fruit closet now 175 cans, all glass, and every can was sealed airtight before cooking. I never take the government's foolish instructions to leave the lid loose and screw it down tight after lifting the can from the cooker. You say 'if the screw caps were applied tightly first, to seal the cans hermetically, and then the tomatoes cooked, that would amount practically to vacuum process canning, but it would probably burst the jar.' This makes me laugh, and I can positively assure you, doctor, after canning, 1,000 glass jars of fruit this way that you don't know. Yes, seal 'em tight and cook 'em that way, but never, never allow them to process over 20 minutes in order to keep the fruit the natural color.

"Any housewife who will buy screw top cans has a lot to learn about the kind of can to use. The self seal can with a heavy rubber so as to make the short wire pull the glass lid down into the rubber is the only can worth carrying home. You can seal up such cans and with a wire rack or basket in the wash boiler cook them just as you would potatoes. There is not a particle of danger to the glass jars unless the jars are packed too tightly in the cooker and then one must break to make room.

"The factory processes in a steam chest while I process in boiling water that covers the sealed cans just as the factory seals tins airtight. When I open a can of pineapple for example, the delicate fragrance fills the whole room and the pineapple is the same color it was when I put it in the can. Did you ever buy factory canned pineapple like that? I never did.

Of course, I cover my jars with cold water, the jars sitting on a wire frame to keep them from contact with the bottom of the boiler. Now the principle is so simple. How does it come, doctor, that you do not know it? The pressure inside the can together with the sugar and other solids dissolved in the contents of the can, raises the boiling point in the can so much above the boiling point of the water outside of the can that no steam is generated in the can to break it. This is just as true of factory canning as it is in the home glass jar process. Tin cans would burst just as easily as glass jars if steam were produced inside them when the fruit is processing.

"Try this, doctor, or ask a nurse to do it for you: Cut a nice beefsteak into small cubes and place in a pint glass jar and fill the jar with water until it will not hold another drop, as I fill my jars when canning fruit. Seal 'hermetically.' Now put it on a wire frame in a cooking vessel and cover with cold water. Bring the water to a boil and let it cook three hours, to make broth for a convalescent. I have tried this. The screw cap can will not stand it because the rubber ring will squash out from the worthless screw top, but a heavy rubber with the self seal jar stays on the job to the end.

"When I am filling my fruit jars I always add the sugar when the can is half filled with fruit. Finish filling, then draw cold water into the can until it will hold no more, seal up and stand on the lid end for the sugar to work to that end. In this way the sugar will all be dissolved when the can is ready to take from the cooker."

Something about Mrs. L. H. F.s' letter arouses the suspicion that she may be working for a fruit jar manufacturer or a rubber ring concern. Her letter is neatly typewritten, and it was mailed to my home address and not in care of this newspaper, and it comes from a city where considerable propaganda in the interest of questionable commercial movements originates. However, if this base suspicion is justified our canny canners, home and factory, will presently clear up the mystery for us.

Acid fruits such as tomatoes, pineapple, cherries and the like are more readily preserved than ordinary vegetables and for such fruits the method described by our correspondent is no doubt sufficient. In such a process the temperature in the center of the contents of the jar or can probably does not exceed 170 degrees Fahrenheit, which is far below boiling (212 degrees Fahrenheit) yet sufficient to sterilize acid fruits or vegetables.

There is no evidence that vitamins are preserved by the method which Mrs. L. H. F. describes.

Freshly picked fruits or vegetables are living, respiring things and their tissues contain some oxygen and if such fruits or vegetables are immediately heated the contained oxygen destroys vitamins. This is avoided to a certain extent by first "drowning" the fruits or vegetables; that is to say, by preparing them for canning and then immersing them in slightly salted water for a few hours before canning.

In factory canning, some fruits and heating for a short time before the cans are sealed, and to steam or hot vegetables are subjected to moderate water pressure sterilization after the cans have been sealed. This preliminary open heating drives off oxygen—the process is called "exhausting," and talks from 6 to 10 minutes or a little longer with solid fruits or vegetables. This "exhausting" would tend to lessen the vitamin content of the vegetable or fruit just as does similar heating in the process of pasteurization lessen the vitamin content of milk.

If the home canner can can her winter's stock of fruits and vegetables in the way described by Mrs. L. H. F., it is a distinct advantage over the ordinary open process, for certainly this method would permit less oxidation and therefore tend to conserve the vitamin value more effectively than does the usual home canning process in which the fruit or vegetable is first heated and afterward sealed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Disinfecting Feathers.

Please let me know how to disinfect feathers from a bed which was used by a person with internal cancer. Would it be sufficient to bring two or three pounds of feathers to a boil in a solution of carbolic acid or lysol? (G. L.)

Answer—Ordinary washing is entirely adequate disinfection. Boiling for five minutes will kill all germs, though not necessarily their spores. Adding the chemicals is no advantage. Cancer, however, is not communicable.

Eleven-Year-Old Lady.

Are high heels, that is, ordinary heels, not those pointed spool heels, injurious for a child 11 years old? My daughter craves high heels and I fear they may injure her health. (Mrs. G. J.)

Answer—Far better for a girl's health, development and beauty, if the shoes have no heels or only the lowest heels. Until your daughter is at least 16 years old she should not wear heels more than half an inch high. After 16 she maw occasionally put on stilts, provided her ordinary shoes are hygienically correct. French heels for occasions are all right for girls who regularly wear shoes of an athletic type—low broad heels, flexible soles, wide, broad toes.

The Deaf Do Bite.

What do you think of rubber artificial ear drums for the hard of hearing? (Mrs. M. E. R.)

Answer—The artificial ear drum business is conducted on the plan of the old army game. In that game the customer was fortunate if he thought to save out carfare home. The old army game was played in shady spots behind the sideshow tent. The artificial ear drum game is conducted through the medium of shady magazines. There seems to be something they want to keep out of the sunlight. Eardrums, bowleg straighteners, nose moulders, rupture cures, bust developers, spectacle eliminators, fat shrinkers, height stretchers and wrinkle eradicators will be marketed as long as Barnum's beloved people are born.

Girls Should Play the Game.

I am coaching a girls' basketball team. Most girls refuse to practice when they are menstruating. Would or would it not be harmful for them to practice while menstruating? (F. I. H.)

Answer—Modern experience has proved, I think, that it is better for girls not to modify their physical activities because of menstruation.

WATER AT SCHOOL POISONED, PUPILS VIOLENTLY SICK

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Warsaw, Ind., December 4.—Arsenic contained in the water pumped from a well at the Mount Tabor grade school in the north part of Kosciusko county, caused 13 pupils to become violently ill.

The school was converted into a temporary hospital and the sick children were placed on improvised cots and cared for by the teacher, Mrs. Pearl Applegate and two pupils who did not drink the water and were not ill.

All of the children recovered.

The fact that the water turned drinking cups green caused suspicion of poison and a sample was sent to the Indiana state board of health where an analysis of chemists showed the presence of arsenic.

Prosecutor Morrison Rockhill, Sheriff Frank McKrill and County Health Officer P. G. Fermier, who are working on the case so far have been unable to determine whether the poison placed in the water with intent to murder or got there accidentally. No ill feeling is known to exist in the community and no cause for such an act is known.

Tenderness as a Virtue

BY DORIS BLAKE.

When has a woman most power? With the opposite sex, I mean, of course, since none of us would be interested in wielding power elsewhere.

Is it in her gay moods, or sober—in her tantrums, or in her tears?

I put the question to a half dozen of the sex that should know, and to a man they answered—when she is tender and sympathetic. If I am to take them at their word, and the six are fully representative of their sex, which I have reason to believe they are, I can assure you girls who want to know how to make an indelible impression that with a tender, sympathetic mood they're putty in your hands.

In extracting the information I asked about the girl of the bright and animated moods. She was reflected upon carefully and admitted charming because of her merry disposition. There was a BUT with her. "But she might be one of those ever sparkling dears who are monotonous and wearying when administered in large doses of companionship."

The perpetual flashing of diamonds tires the eyes and the brain. Sober moments are required if for no other purpose than to throw into higher relief the moments that are gay.

"A girl dazzles when she is merry," contributed one of my advisers, "but when she is gentle and full of sympathy she goes straight to the heart. When her voice takes on that softened tone and her eyes look words that her lips hesitate to say—it's good-night to the bachelor's pledge to go it alone. If women knew the power that lies within that tone and look. God help us, we'd all be roped and tied for life."

Not Done in a Minute.

I don't believe it is a look and tone, however, that you could turn on as you'd turn on a tune on the talking machine. In order to make it letter perfect in effect it would have to smack sincerely of the genuine, or be the genuine article itself. Preferably the latter, and administered unconsciously, so to speak. I do think, however, that a girl could train a disposition that had overlooked this vitally important element of success if she set her mind to it.

One of my little group of informants (of male persuasion, as I said before) decried the self-centeredness of the average girl you meet nowadays.

"She's so darned interested in her career and herself," said Bill, "she hasn't time to listen to a fellow's troubles. You only get a few words out of your mouth, when she takes on with a recital of what she is up against."

"Perhaps she is entitled to a look and a tone, too," I suggested.

"Perhaps she is," responded Bill. "But you were asking us what made a hit with men, weren't you?"

I was telling one young woman about my questioning the men. She said:

"Now, if I would start affecting a tone like that and training my eyes to melt the poor darlings, I'd appear too silly for words."

Egotism Is Everywhere.

I'm not suggesting that girls play out of character to the extent of making themselves ridiculous, but where males are concerned I have noticed they aren't like the keenest detectors in the world between the actress and the genuine emotion.

I do think, too, we live in such a self-centered age that women are losing the art of sympathy, and it is really too productive a virtue to be abandoned. Girls who work side by side with men are a bit doubtful of the male's greater difficulties in battling the world. If anything, they are inclined to think they are the injured parties, and if any sympathy is coming it should be paid the fair sex. Whether they are right in this is another question. The fact remains that men want their women tender and sympathetic, and until such time as women are privileged to do thje proposing they will have to conform to male tastes.

I would not be advocating the cultivation of this particular feature of a woman's charms if I did not see its value in relation to the woman herself. A hard, unsympathetic nature is never a happy one.

That is why I suggest a change where a change is needed.

The people who are dearest to me I know are those who listen to my woes when I am oppressed. They are people who have just that softened tone and absorbing interest that the men vote the winner among charms. I am not peculiar in this respect. The same is true of you. The girls who are closest to you are likewise the ones you seek out in your soberer moments knowing they will give you the cheer you need.

In home relations the fathers and mothers who listen with the kindest sympathy to their children are the most beloved of parents. They never lose their children as do those parents who are self-centered, selfish, and unsympathetic. The brothers and sisters in the household are loved in proportion to their capacity for considering others.

Reaping a Harvest.

So, all in all, tenderness and sympathy are not only virtues with the strongest appeal to young men but also they reap a harvest of love for the individual in whatever capacity she employs them.

A sympathetic individual is always an even tempered one. And good temper is an attraction, even in a plain woman. When a woman has that in addition to her other qualities—when she is natural in her manners, unconscious, animated, tender and gentle—then she is a prize and not likely to be overlooked as such by those who take their matrimony seriously.

There are women who possess a quality known as fascination, which no one yet has been able to define, a quality so independent that men succumb to it without analysis of character traits. This particular fascination I speak of, and commonly called sex appeal, has the drawing power but not always the holding power. Sympathy has both.

Any honest wife of your acquaintance will support my contention that you can browbeat a man, spill tears all over the place, nag and pout, and get not one-quarter so much for your pains as you can with the simple trick of tenderness.

Glimpses of Hollywood

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., December 4.—(Special Correspondence.)—Hollywood seems on the verge of a social upheaval, due to the recent action of the Countess Ilya Tolstoy. Madame Tolstoy, 35-year-old wife of the son of Count Leo Tolstoy, recently entered motion pictures and has been working as an extra woman in "Resurrection," the story written by her famous father-in-law for which her husband is acting as advisor.

At the recent brilliant opening of the Mayfair club, formed of Hollywood's social elect, a snub was administered to Madame Tolstoy. On Thanksgiving day madame was informed by a mutual friend of the snubber and the snubbed that it was because Madame Tolstoy had accepted extra work. As an extra girl she was not socially acceptable to the picture society who play leading roles.

Madame took in the situation at once and promptly sat down and sent regrets to some twenty-odd invitations from Hollywood picture folk. She has also cancelled arrangements for several social affairs at her own home.

Up to this time the Count and Countess Tolstoy have been host and hostess at the most distinguished of the Beverly Hills and Hollywood social events, including dinner parties, musicales, receptions and teas.

The countess is a musician of note and is of a distinguished Russian family. She says that if Hollywood society does not wish to receive her that she will see to it that the feeling is unanimous. She will not receive Hollywood.

"In my country," says the countess, "art knew no social distinctions such as have been suggested to me in Hollywood. Louis XVI. of France was a watchmaker by trade and Nero wrote bad verse. But I may not be an extra girl in Hollywood."

The count, who is 60 years of age, approves his wife's frank attitude in the matter and feels that she is perfectly right—free to undertake a film career by beginning as an extra girl if she so desires.

Hollywood is divided into two camps, those who agree with the countess that art knows no social distinctions and those who hold that they can not possibly be expected to associate with extra girls even though their fathers-in-law may have been prominent Russian nobles.

The former camp includes many picture folk who have been abroad and who realize that their own European social ambitions might be blighted by the Countess Tolstoy if she were inclined to repeat in Paris and London her story of snubbing by social Hollywood.

Dolores Del Rio, young society matron of Mexico City, who has proved such a sensational success in pictures since her entry a year ago, fortunately never met such a problem as now confronts the Countess Tolstoy. Senora Del Rio, though bearing no title, is of an old and distinguished Spanish-Mexican family, as is her husband, Jaime Del Rio. Her first work in pictures was not as an extra but as a supporting character part in Dorothy Mackaill's picture, "Joanna." This made her socially acceptable, which Hollywood says should not have been if she had had the ill luck to start as an extra.

Another lady of leisure who has film ambitions is no less a person than Mrs. Charlie Ray. Mrs. Ray has been attending a local dramatic school for some months and is now appearing with the Pasadena Community Players. This is all preliminary to taking a whirl at pictures. No definite offers have been announced as yet. Mrs. Ray has long been acknowledged as the most elaborately dressed of Hollywood film society women. Her professional name is to be Clare Ray.

The Mayfair club gave its initial party at the Biltmore hotel last week. This is a new club with much the same personnel as the Sixty club, which has moved to the Ambassador hotel in Wilshire. Sid Grauman was chairman of the entertainment committee, which presented some very notable diversions for the guests, including a skit by Rosetta and Vivian Duncan and two choruses, one of 50 girls from one theater and one of 40 from another, as well as an act by Lupino Lane.

Officers of the new club include Fred Niblo, who is president; Charles Christie, of the Christie Comedies, as vice president; Irving Thalberg, and M. C. Lever.

Among those entertaining large parties were Conrad Nagel, Marshall Neilan and Blanche Sweet, his wife; Charles Chaplin, whose wife was in Hawaii; Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil DeMille, Bebe Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. Earle Williams. Other guests included O. O. McIntyre and wife, here from New York; Irene Rich, Matt Moore, Kathleen Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Ray, Billy Dove, Adolphe Menjou, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edeson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Holt; Mr. and Mrs. Conway Tearle, Norman and Constance Talmadge, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Mary Philbin, Mr. and Mrs. Jaime Del Rio, May MacAvoy and Bobbie Agnew.

Lita Grey Chaplin arrived home from her trip to Honolulu two weeks early. She was met at the pier by her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curry, of Beverly Hills, but Charlie Chaplin was nowhere in evidence. This is taken by some to hint the substantiation of gossip that a separation agreement may be announced as consummated by Lita and Charlie through their lawyers at some time in the imminent future. There have been such insistent rumors about the Chaplins in the last two months that Lita has been obliged to add Attorney George Beebe to her staff of lawyers to help her denials carry weight.

Through the stories of separation between the Chaplins runs the name of Merna Kennedy, 17-year-old leading lady for Chaplin who, it is said, was a school chum of Lita's.

It is Lita who is credited with bringing Merna to Charlie's attention as a possible new leading lady after Georgia Hale succeeded Lita at the time of Lita's marriage to Charlie. Merna has been working as the leading lady in Charlie's current comedy, "The Circus," as yet incomplete.

The Hollywood opening of the new Fox picture, "What Price Glory," was held at the Carthay Circle theater with a large and resplendent audience. Raymond Hitchcock acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the principals from the stage.

Edmund Lowe, who played Sergeant Quirt, contented himself with a modest "thank you" speech. Victor McLaglan, who played Captain Flagg, did likewise, while Dolores Del Rio, who played Charmaine, appeared and bowed, but trusted the speechmaking to Hitchcock as she did not trust her English under the emotional strain of her first "first night." Senora Del Rio speaks English well, but with a slight accent.

Following the showing at the theater Mr. and Mrs. Jaime Del Rio entertained at their Wilshire home on Beechwood drive. The hostess appeared in a gorgeous gown in the new shade of red, made with a velvet basque and bouffant tulle skirt in shades of red. A large diamond studded ornament was worn at the left side of the basque at the waistline and a shoulder bouquet of orchids set off the brunette coloring of the Spanish beauty.

A buffet supper was served and prominent among the refreshments on the long Spanish oaken table were several large prize baked hams from the Del Rio ranchos in Chihuahua decorated with the cre... of the Del Rios.

An orchestra of Mexican musicians played and sang at intervals in the large parlor.

Raymond Hitchcock, busily hunting through the holes in the Swiss cheese, playfully flashed his famous diamonds.

Lilyan Tashman, wearing a pale green chiffon gown sewn with pearls and rhinestones with strapped shoulders and decorated ostrich skirt, fresh from Paris, was helping Edmund Lowe, her husband, receive congratulations on his work in the film. Victor McLaglan was also receiving congratulations with the aid of his wife.

Billie Dove was present, escorted by her husband, Irvin Willatt, clad all in white with tulle ruff and crystal beads. Mrs. Tom Mix with her famous diamonds covering her arms and neck, was in white chiffon and accompanied by Tom Mix. Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hay and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Carewe were among the other guests.

Kathryn Hill, the "preferred blonde" of Adolphe Menjou's present picture, "Blonde or Brunette," has filed suit for divorce against her husband, Ira Hill, the photographer of New York, charging cruelty.

Following her work in "The King of Kings" with Cecil DeMille, in which she plays Mary Magdalen, Jacqueline Logan plans a two-months vacation on the Riviera. She says no Paris shops or towers of London will lure her. She wants a rest.

A strong rumor is going about that Paramount will buy Estelle Taylor's contract from United Artists. Estelle recently made "New York" for Paramount and has been mentioned as possible choice for Emil Jannings' leading lady.

THORNE ANNOUNCES WIFE HAS LEFT HIM

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Henry Sanford Thorne, husband of the former Miss Helen Mitchell Havemeyer, announced today through a newspaper advertisement that his wife had left him. The advertisement read:

"My wife, Helen Havemeyer Thorne, having left my bed and board, I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by her."

Mr. Thorne gave his address as the St. Nicholas club in West 44th street, just off Fifth avenue.

The Thornes were married last January 19. Two months later Mrs. Thorne returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Havemeyer of Ardsley-on-Hudson, N. Y. Two weeks later, Mr. Thorne announced that he and his wife were living happily in East 61st street.

Mrs. Thorne is the granddaughter of William F. Havemeyer, three times mayor of New York. Mr. Thorne is the son of Dr. Victor Corse Thorne. His first wife is now living in the west.

Mrs. Thorne said tonight her husband has not supported her since their marriage, and that for this reason she does not understand the advertisement.

'TRIPLE TRIANGLE' IS NOVEL FEATURE OF HOWARD PICTURE

Anderson's 'Lovers in Porcelain' Is Publix Stage Unit.

When a beautiful, dignified gentleman is married to a roistering rounder, marital difficulties are likely—divorce probable. When a beautiful temperamental, sirenesque actress is married to a serious-minded, pedantic author, difficulties are more than likely—divorce almost inevitable.

But when into both marriages a posing, egotistical stage director intrudes, linking both couples in impending scandal, the tragedy of mismated lives is turned into comedy.

Such is the complicated situation arrived at in Florence Vidor's new Paramount starring picture, "The Popular Sin," which Malcolm St. Clair directed from Monta Bell's original screen story. Greta Nissen, Marion Ivy Harris and Clive Brook are the featured players in this comedy of marriage and divorce laid against a background of Parisian society life, which will be the feature screen attraction at the Howard theater all this week.

Many "triangle" stories have found their way to the screen, but Miss Vidor's vehicle is perhaps the first that has ever been described as a "triple triangle" story. In "The Popular Sin," with only six principals, there are three distinct situations in which two men love one woman or two women love one man.

There is to be sure one man whom Miss Vidor really loves, but when she meets him she is married to another. Divorce results and she is happily remarried. But another woman enters her husband's life, and a second divorce ensues. How she finally rewins the man after his second divorce provides the climax of one of the most engaging sophisticated comedies that has yet reached the screen.

John Murray Anderson went back to his first great stage success, "What's In a Name," for the basic idea of his Publix presentation, "Lovers in Porcelain," which will be seen on the Howard stage this week. No one who saw "What's In a Name" will ever forget the music box number in that delightful and novel revue which established Mr. Anderson as one of the foremost figures in the American theater. In "Lovers in Porcelain" a Dresden china musix box number, entitled "A Young Man's Fancy," is used as the fifth and concluding episode. The four preceding episodes feature groups of similar conception, the first representing a frieze such as Josiah Wedgwood used to decorate his jasper ware. Then follow a Swiss china group, a Spanish and a Russian china group, each featuring its own dancers and vocalists, costumed according to the nationality depicted.

Special music has been provided by Milton Ager and the lyrics are by Mr. Anderson and Jack Yellen. The finale consists of a brilliantly colored tableau including all the principals. Featured in the performance are Joan Elliott, prima donna soprano; Carlos and Valeria, Jose and Pepita, Joe Rose, Dorothy Merritt, Grace Pollack, Gail Webster, June Korle Lee, Warren Leonard, Myrtle Pierce and Alexander Zarouhine, balalaika virtuoso.

Ruth Urban, "Broadway's favorite songbird," recently prima donna of Ziegfeld's Follies, will appear as an added stage feature. Joseph Littau and his Howard Symphony orchestra will offe "Pique Dame" as the overture. Other subjects on the program include Pathe News, a novelty reel and selected comedy.

SILLS SCORES AGAIN IN NEW 'PARADISE'

Milton Sills has clicked at the box office again and "Paradise," First National's screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's famous novel, bids fair to taking a front rank in the list of the season's ten best pictures. The film was released for general showing this week after a sensation showing on Broadway, and opens in Atlanta Monday at the Metropolitan theater for a week's run.

After his dramatic sweep of realism in "Men of Steel," Sills has turned to a colorful romance of the South Seas which will undoubtedly bring to a zenith the public's reviving interest in thrilling tales of the tropics.

Cast as a suave ne'er-do-well son of an English Earl, who abandons a pecunious existence of living by his wits in London to battle his way to the sovereignty of a Polynesian "Paradise," Sills creates a magnificent testimonial to his versatility.

Pretty Betty Bronson, who has been the screen's darling ever since her whimsical portrayal of "Peter Pan," is featured as the First National star's leading lady.

In "Paradise" Betty gives a performance that quite definitely proves her acting is not confined to the wistful, child-like roles in which she has heretofore been cast.

As a downcast dancer of the London music halls, who turns from suicide to a sudden impetuous love affair with the English idler, and then fights at his side an adventuresome sequence in the South Seas, Miss Bronson reaches new histrionic heights.

Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will offer an unusually attractive musical program this week. For the overture, Mr. Leide has selected the American version of "Countess Maritiza"—the selections as presented by the Metropolitan orchestra including the "Play Gypsies-Dance Gypsies," "The One I'm Longing For" and the "Finale." The principal theme employed in the musical score for the feature photoplay is "Kentucky Lullaby," by Miller-Cohn and orchestrated by A. Frank Black. The extra screen attractions will include Lloyd Hamilton in his latest comedy, "Jolly Tars," and the newest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views. With this mammoth program of real entertainment, the Metropolitan theater is destined to enjoy one of the most successful weeks of the current year.

Rockliffe's Park.

In Ottawa, Canada, after the rubberneck wagon guide has pointed out the house of parliament and the other government buildings and the Hotel Chateau Laurier, he will speed up his palatial motor bus and head toward the outskirts of the attractive city to Rockliffe park.

One of the show places of the capital, every Canadian is proud of Rockcliffe park, which was donated to the city by one of the bluest blooded families in the Dominion.

But the park was not the only thing of note that the family donated to fame, for it was from this family that the picture industry drafted Rockcliffe Fellowes, a grandson of the man who set aside Rockcliffe park as a playground.

SCREEN

At the top, left, is a scene from "The Popular Sin" at the Howard theater this week with beautiful Greta Nissen. No, we don't know what the popular sin is, but we'll wager Clive Brook was mixed up in it! Milton Sills is in "Paradise" at the Metropolitan theater next week, and from the happy expression on the face of the g.f., it looks as if he had company. In the scene third from the left is shown John Gilbert, famed lover, who is starred at Loew's Grand in a master love tale from the pen of Rafael Sabatini, "Bardleys the Magnificent." Anita Stewart, on the extreme right, top row, is featured at the Rialto in "Whispering Wires," a mystery drama. Middle row, left, is Raymond Griffith, who appears at Keith's Georgia this week in "You'd Be Surprised." Next is shown Clara Bow, who is seen at the West End theater this week in "Plastic Age." Lon Chaney, shown next, is featured at the Palace theater in "The Road to Mandalay." The couple so blissfully happy on the stairs is Harold Lloyd and his sweetie, who are seen in "Bumping Into Broadway" at the Alamo No. 2 theater. Extreme right is shown a scene from "The Fighting Edge" at the Tudor. Bottom row, left, is Monte Blue and Marie Prevost, who are both "Up in Mable's Room" at the Tenth Street theater. Next is shown Conrad Nagel, who is seen with Norma Shearer in "The Waning Sex" at the Cameo.

ALAMO 2 PHOTOPLAY STARS LON CHANEY

"He Who Gets Slapped" is a modern picture production that can truthfully be called great. It will be shown Monday and Tuesday at the Alamo No. 2 and that house should do capacity business during the engagement, for the picture is one of the finest contributions of the year.

Victor Seastrom, Lon Chaney and Leonid Andreyev share honors for this remarkable photoplay. Andreyev's story is internationally famous. Seastrom conclusively demonstrated by his masterful handling of the story and people that he is one of the foremost directors of the day. Chaney gives what is probably his best performance. As the clown in "He Who Gets Slapped" Chaney is not a grotesque figure, but a human and sympathetic character who will tug at the heartstrings of everyone.

Norma Shearer is the girl in the story and she gives a very good performance. John Gilbert, as the young circus rider, also gives an excellent characterization. On the same program will be shown one of Harold Lloyd's funniest comedies, "Bumping Into Broadway."

Nat Ross has been engaged to direct the second series of "The Collegian," ten pictures in all. Ross will use the same cast which registered so well in the first series, that is, George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver, Hayden Stevenson, Eddie Phillips and Churchill Rorr, all of whim are under long term contracts with Universal.

'SQUARE CROOKS' WILL BE PLAYED DECEMBER 13-18

That "Square Crooks," one of the most sensational comedy successes in recent years, will be played here the week of December 13, will be of particular interest to theatergoers.

The Forsyth Players will present "Square Crooks" immediately following "Grounds For Divorce," this week's show, which gets under way Monday night. James Coots, leading man, and Jeanne Devereaux will have principal roles, with Alan Devitt, Gus Forbes, Rhea Divcley, Theodosia Shaler and others of the excellent cast in slightly less important roles.

"Square Crooks" is a truly American comedy in which the author, James P. Judge, indulged in no deceit in trying to conjure up a play plot in which a crook can be a crook and still be square. Although a "crook" play, it is vastly different from the average show of its kind and will be found both amusing, full of comedy and thoroughly wholesome throughout.

In New York, where it opened at Daly's Sixty-third Street theater, the attendance was so great that it was necessary to move it to Maxine Elliott's theater, where it finished the season with one of the most successful records of any show in recent years.

Its humor and action finds hearty and instant favor with audiences and a big week is expected at the Forsyth theater during "Square Crook" week.

Palace Theater.

(Lon Chaney.)

Starting the week at the Palace theater is Lon Chaney at the head of a cast of stars in "The Road to Mandalay," a photoplay of tense action and gripping reality that leaves the audience enthralled with its power. Chaney is at his best in this picture as the one-eyed villain over-lord of the oriental crime headquarters. His portrayal of the part is spectacular and convincing. It's a great play.

Following the two-day run of "Mandalay" a fine double bill will play at the Palace Wednesday only headed by "The Phantom Express," with Ben Alexander in "Scotty of the Scouts" as the second attraction.

Thursday and Friday Norma Talmadge appears at the Palace in the great romance of the little French girl, "Kiki." In the title role of this play Miss Talmadge gives one of the most artistic of her many great successes.

On Saturday one of Manager Alpha Fowler's usual good thrillers closes a week of good entertainment when "Combat" comes to the Palace screen.

RAY GRIFFITH COMEDY ON GEORGIA SCREEN

Comedy and laughs hold sway on the screen of Keith's Georgia theater next week when Raymond Griffith, the high-hat funster, absolutely tops everything he has ever done before in "You'd Be Surprised." Patrons will laugh and gasp every second as Griffith goes through mental gymnastics in the untangling of a murder mystery which would be a credit to any sleuth.

It's hard to say whether the picture contains more laughs or thrills. Griffith, as the coroner, tries to discover who killed the district attorney. Instead of solving the mystery he finds himself in the center of a dozen others, and also discovers that he has fallen in love with a girl whom everyone suspects as the criminal.

The picture's ending will have to remain a mystery because Mr. Griffith has asked that the identity of the murderer be kept secret.

Besides unraveling the mystery of the death of the district attorney, there is the theft of a house boat that baffles the sleuth, Griffith, and gives him innumerable opportunities to provoke laughs from the many bits of business he indulges in to seek a solution to the shooting that occurred on the house boat during a party. It is while he enacts the role of coroner that he meets the girl he loves, played by Dorothy Sebastain. The role of the district attorney is portrayed by Earle Williams.

Cameo Theater.

(Norma Shearer.)

A very diversified program is offered this week by the Cameo, combining comedy, drama, adventure and action.

On Wednesday and Thursday that theater brings back the delightful story of ultra-modern men and women; of manly women and feminine men; and of the woman today entering a man's domain and there waging her fight for victory. The picture "The Waning Sex," is extremely delightful, is peppy, and amazing. Starring in it are Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel, aided by a splendid supporting cast.

Opening the week a tthe Cameo is one of the greatest of all dramas „Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," starring John Barrymore.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is one of the greatest pictures in which John Barrymore has ever appeared, the story of a man with a dual personality, both saint and devil, who discovered the secret of changing one's form; ran amuck as a horrible creature, and climaxed his amazing adventures in a dramatic manner which more than equals anything ever seen on the screen.

Friday and Saturday brings to the Cameo Zane Grey's "Forlorn River," a story of the west in the days when outlaws ran wild; and of one outlaw, Nevada, whose exploits terrorized the country, but whose loyalty and manhood came to the fore in a time of need when he rose to the heights and fought for the woman he had learned to love. Jack Holt and Arlette Marchal have the leading roles in "Forlorn River."

Following its triumphal opening in Washington, D. C., "Michael Strogoff," the Universal-Film de France production, will open in New York at the George M. Cohan theater on December 5. An elaborate musical accompaniment is being devised by Edward Kilenyi.

Tudor Theater.

(The Fighting Edge.)

From the novel by William MacLeod Raine, "The Fighting Edge," which opens Monday for a three-day run at the Tudor, is a story of the border country of smugglers, and of one man, half Spanish and half Irish, who hid behind a smooth exterior, and easy indolence of his half Spanish face the fighting heart of his father, and who was commissioned by the government to rid the territory of a band of smugglers infesting it; and who dashed headlong into danger and did his fighting with a smile.

The picture is replete with hard fastaction, and the scrap said to be staged between the Spanish-Irish government agent and the smugglers is one of the fastest ever shown on the screen.

Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Miller, Heinie Conklin and Pat Hartigan.

Staged in the border country, the picture could be called an epic of the country's fight against smugglers. It is entertaining to a wonderful degree.

Opening on Thursday at the Tudor is "The Yellow Back," a splendid story of the west, replete with action and thrills, and introducing a new star, Fred Humes, who has risen to stardom through his wonderful work.

Immediately upon completion of "Alias the Deacon," which by the way, promises to be one of the outstanding Universal pictures of next year, Edward Sloman will start the production of "The Bargain Bride," with Mary Philbin.

'WHISPERING WIRES' STARS ANITA STEWART

Rialto Also Introduces The Collegians Comedy Series.

"Whispering Wires," the film version of the stage play, is the feature picture at the Rialto theater this week. It is accompanied by the first installment of the new series of short films, "The Collegians." Pathe News is shown and Frank Turner directs the music.

Anita Stewart and Edmund Burns are the featured players in the headline picture.

"Whispering Wires" centers in a mansion full of trap doors and secret passageways and in this lives Doris Stockbridge (Miss Stewart) and her father, Montgomery Stockbridge, a broker. The father had been associated with Andrew Morphy and Bert Norton, an inventor, in the promotion of a flying boat company that failed. When the concern failed Norton disappeared. Morphy was sent to prison and Stockbridge acquired the mansion without learning of the secret hallways and entrances.

McGill (Mr. Burns) is in love with Doris, but Stockbridge opposes their marriage because his father was one of his enemies. McGill and Stockbridge are in the midst of an angry scene when the wires begin to whisper death threats to Stockbridge. Miss Cartwright, Stockbridge's stenographer calls detectives and they arrive just at the height of the quarrel.

The detectives search the house but fail to find the secret passages and do not detect Norton in a secret cellar where he has control of all the telephone and electric wires that center in the mansion, and over which he sends the threats.

Morphy notifies Norton that he is ready to escape from prison and Norton makes the final preparations for the killing of Stockbridge and Doris. While the girl and the detectives are conversing with her father, Norton, in the disguise of a telephone trouble shooter, places a loaded gun in the phone receiver.

Morphy returns to the city and from a booth phones to Stockbridge. While he holds the receiver to his ear, Morphy runs the receiver of his phone about the rubber mouthpiece, inducing a current which releases the trigger of the gun. Stockbridge falls dead.

The police are called and give everyone in the house the third degree. McGill and all the others in the house are eliminated as suspects except Triggy Drew, the detective, who was in the room at the time of the murder. Drew is arrested in spite of McGill's protests and Drew warns him that an attempt will be made to kill Doris.

The following night, Norton is arranging for the girl's murder. McGill accidentally discovers a secret door and finds the secret cellar. After a hard fight with the demented inventor he takes his captive into the library just as Morphy phones again.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

'Ground for Divorce' At Forsyth Next Week

What things actually constitute reasons for divorce will be shown next week when "Grounds for Divorce" plays at the Forsyth theater.

Whether and to what extent a man's business should be given preference over his attentions to his wife will be portrayed in an interesting Broadway show that is full of spicy humor and fine situations.

James Coots, Jeanne Devereaux, Rhea Diveley, Alan Devitt and Gus Forbes will have outstanding roles, with other stars of the Forsyth Players group in less important characterizations. Harry McRae Webster, director of the players, has devoted considerable extra time to perfecting every phase of the production to get as much of its flavor and richness as was embodied in the Gotham sensation.

"Grounds for Divorce" treats more generally with modern divorce ideas and while being constructed around an interesting plot affords an abundance of fun and merriment, with fine comedy running through every line and situation.

The play first was presented in New York at the Empire theater by Charles Frohman, Inc., with Ina Claire in the leading role. It was an instant success and had a long and successful run.

The central character is a Parisian woman, the wife of a famous divorce lawyer who becomes so engrossed with his litigation for and in behalf of clients that he forgets his wedding anniversary. The wife is deeply hurt and chagrined and forthwith decides to seek the balm her absorbed husband has doled out to others—divorce. She spoils his nice shirt with a murky ink filled bottle and leaves his domain. A few months later, and the divorced husband begins his second on-to-the-altar march which is halted when wife No. 1 enters the plot again, to secure his help in securing separation from husband No. 2 to wed the third admirer.

Then a real love scene. They discover how real and true their own love was and, sprinkled with rich humor, the third and final act of the production finds them reentering life again, re-wed and happy.

It is an absorbing story and embodies no little of the present day life. It is a play that quickly grips one and holds interest throughout. It is rich in spicy humor, overflowing with romance and quick-changing love scenes, and a modern play that Atlantans will find even more entertaining than the laughable "New Brooms" in which the Forsyth Players will have a second consecutive vehicle that affords fine opportunities for each member.

"Grounds for Divorce" is a big-time Broadway success that certainly will find big audiences here this week.

West End Theater.

("The Plastic Age.")

One of the most stirring stories of life on the campus as it is today is "The Plastic Age," a screen picturization of a novel from the pen of a young college professor, is playing the first two days of this week, Monday and Tuesday, at the West End theater. Clara Bow, scintillating star, who has so dramatically portrayed the character of the modern girl, is seen in her biggest role in "The Plastic Age"—that of the jazz-mad young co-ed who lives only for conquest among the students of her university. There is one, however, as there is one for every girl, who breaks the heart of the breaker of hearts—but he does it so gently that the girl realizes that the boy is far too good for her, but the boy doesn't think so. You'll find "The Plastic Age" one of the most entertaining pictures you have seen in a long time.

"Empty Hands," featuring the popular western star, Jack Holt, is scheduled for showings on Wednesday only. West End patrons are sure to find "Empty Hands" pleasing to the nth degree.

On Thursday and Friday, another campus film is billed—but this time it is a riotous comedy. Bebe Daniels, delightful comedienne, is seen in the name role as a daughter of wealthy but honest parents who have educated her abroad until her father decides that in order to Americanize her, she must finish her education at an American college. She arrives at the selected college with an exceedingly inflated idea of her importance to the said college. As a result, she "highhats" every one on the campus, as modern parlance has it. And she quickly acquires the reputation of a snob until, by a strange incident, she beats the renowned Charlie Paddock in a 100-yard dash, which, you will admit, is quite an incident. "The Campus Flirt" is one long laugh from start to finish. In addition to Charlie Paddock, himself, Miss Daniels is supported by an excellent cast. "Black Lightning" will be shown Saturday.

Going Abroad by Proxy.

Irene Rich, though very much at home in Hollywood, with those two bewitching little girls of hers, so far as the make-believe world of the films is concerned, spends most of her time abroad. Three of the four pictures in which she starred last year were laid in Europe.

"My Official Wife" transports her to Nihilistic Russia, and later after tumultous times of battle, ignominy and loneliness, to the swift-picked strings, the laughter and song and wistfulness of the city of dreams—Vienna!

"My Official Wife" was directed by a native of Vienna, Paul Stein. Irene Rich and Conway Tearle, the featured players, have worthy support. "My Official Wife" comes to the Metropolitan theater soon.

Pauline Garon.

Pauline Garon, who is Mrs. Lowell Sherman in private life, and Forrest Huff, of "Chocolate Soldier" fame, have been signed for parts in Gloria Swanson's United Artists' Picture, "Sunya." Huff's last appearance in motion pictures was in a film with Gaby Desleys. In "Sunya" he plays the role of Goritz, an opera singer.

Stage

Forsakes Society.

For a social leader to abandon an assured position among the elite and completely absorb herself in another and strangely different career entails many readjustments.

Dolores del Rio, leader of Mexico City society, when she came to Hollywood to enter the films recently, had to devote an entire month to close her affairs in the Mexican capital.

First Miss del Rio released the retinue of servants that had been in the employ of her family almost all their lives, then she packed, put her big town house on the market and moved into her new Hollywood home.

Miss del Rio, however, retained her Durango ranch and will return there every year for a three or four months' rest between seasons. She has just completed the leading role in First National's "Pals First," playing opposite Lloyd Hughes.

Fairfax Theater.

("Birth of a Nation.")

"The Birth of a Nation," the thrilling film of the war between the states and conditions immediately afterward, is scheduled at the Fairfax theater in East Point on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Henry B. Walthall is seen in the leading role as the "Little Colonel" and has created one of the most prominent characters in the world. It has been said that "everyone should see 'The Birth of a Nation' as least once a year," and as the years go by, the increasing popularity of this epic testifies mightily to the veracity of that statement. "The Birth of a Nation" is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday only, and record crowds are anticipated by the management.

On Wednesday Len Chaney will be seen in one of his famous crook dramas, "The Black Bird." Chaney gives his usual excellent performance in "The Blackbird."

"Kiki," considered by many to be one of the 10 best pictures of 1926, will be shown on Thursday and Friday. Norma Talmadge is seen in the name role, that of the delightful little street gamin of Paris who aspires to a career on the stage—and what girl doesn't? In the role created on the stage by the famous Lenore Ulric, Miss Talmadge gives a highly creditable performance.

On Saturday only the feature is "The Combat," featuring House Peters.

Gloria Swanson.

Gloria Swanson's leading man in "Sunya," John Boles, arrived at the studio the other day ready—with the exception of his top hat and cane, to be shot to death. Andres de Segurola, the impressario in the picture, was not so forgetful, but decided he might as well have been. Here's the reason: Boles borrowed Segurola's hat and cane. The first time Director Albert Parker took the shooting scene, Boles fell clear of the hat and cane. On the second take, however, he partially crushed the hat and on the third and last turn of the camera, he finished the topper and broke the cane!

Tenth Street Theater.

("Up in Mabel's Room.")

A rollicking French farce, "Up in Mabel's Room," is slated for showings Monday and Tuesday of this week at the Tenth Street theater. Marie Prevost, a comedy star of the first water who graduated up from the ranks of the bathing girl, is featured at the head of a big cast in the comedy-farce. Laid along the lines of the typical French comedy, "Up in Mabel's Room," is a thoroughly delightful comedy with the star in her most entrancing role.

The attraction on Wednesday is "A Social Celebrity," one of Adolphe Menjou's films. The suave impersonator of clubmen has an entirely new role in "A Social Celebrity." It is that of a small-town barber. Although he is a small-town barber, the world quickly beats a path to the door of the barber shop which he and his father run. Inevitably he is bitten by the bug of ambition and he longs for a beauty parlor in New York. One of his wealthy patrons, in a moment of weakness, says that she will be glad to place Adolphe in New York. When he arrives, however, he finds that the "place" is as a common barber shop. He meets "the only girl" and in order to disguise his position he poses as a member of foreign nobility. As such he becomes a "social celebrity."

"The Unknown Soldier," one of the most dramatic films ever made of the world war, is scheduled on Thursday and Friday. Emmett Mack, a newcomer to the screen, is starred with Marguerite de la Motte. Their work is excellent as is that of the rest of the cast. The remainder of the cast is headed by Henry B. Walthall. The story, as suggested by the title, deals with that part of the war which has not been touched upon before by film producers, the unknown soldier. On Saturday, "Black Cyclone" will be shown.

"Resurrection."

Edwin Carewe's cast for Tolstoy's "Resurrection," which Inspiration Pictures and Carewe, are producing for United Artists' release, is growing space since the announcement that Rod La Rocque and Dolores Del Rio would be co-featured. Now comes word from Carewe that Marc McDermott, loaned him by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will play Major Schoenbeboch in "Resurrection," and that Lucy Beaumont, who has just finished playing John Barrymore's mother in his first United Artists' Picture, will play Aunt Sophie in "Resurrection." Vera Lewis will be the other aunt, Marya. "Resurrection" is now in production at the Tec-Art studios, Hollywood.

Franklin Pangborn will seize his first day to gather together his costumes for his next production "Getting Gertie's Garter," for Metropolitan productions. His starting date for this is Monday. The actor has still work to do in "Finger Prints," for Warners.

NAYLOR'S BAND TOPS KEITH GEORGIA BILL

The excellence of the entertainment both on stage and screen is evidenced by the crowds that continue to visit the Georgia theater. For the fourth week's bill the celebrated musical organization, Oliver Naylor's band will top the bill. This aggregation of 10 musicians are recruited from the leading colleges of the east and all are specialists with the various instruments that make up a dance band. Patterned after the celebrated Waring's Pennsylvanians, Naylor's band offers an exceptional program of syncopated popular numbers. These young musicians have been a sensation wherever they have played engagements.

Second honors go to Tommy Reilly, who appears as the featured artist in a very dainty revue that is billed as "The Wife Hunter." Reilly is a very clever light comedian of the juvenile type recalling to mind Jack Norworth, with a wonderful sense of humor and a natural ability to read comedy as well as dance in a manner equal to the foremost in that line. Reilly has surrounded himself with a bevy of beautiful and talented girls which includes Kay Murray, Kitty Claire, Clare Crystal and Kitty May.

The appearance of Jack "Rube" Clifford on the bill assures theatergoers of many hearty laughs superinduced by his character creation that has made him known on the stage and screen. Mr. Clifford's "Sheriff" is the rural community type, of the sleuth who is always sleuthing and following a clue that never develops into anything but a clue, the type who proves his official position by his badge.

An eccentric novelty is promised by the Le Grohs as pantomimic contortionists that is full of all sorts of twists. The trio work in evening dress and attempts to give the effect of being quite at home in a drawing room. They can twist themselves into as many different forms as a sailor can a bit of rope.

Perez and Marguerite are unique jugglers whose unusual method of manipulation has caused them to receive much favorable comment from theatergoers wherever they have appeared. On the screen will be seen Raymond Griffith in his latest Paramount picture, "You'd Be Surprised," with Dorothy Sebastian and Earle Williams.

Duncan Sisters.

The names of Rosetta and Vivian Duncan, stage stars, have just been added to the ranks of film players doing the "brother and sister act" in pictures. The stars of "Topsy and Eva," which they are also doing as their first film for United Artists, are now in the "family circle" with Norma and Constance Talmadge, Dorothy and Lillian Gish, Dolores and Helene Costello, Charlie and Syd Chaplin, Mary and Jack Pickford, John and Lionel Barrymore.

Sabatini Novel In Film Version At Loew's Grand

The beautiful and glamorous picture, "Bardelys, the Magnificent," a stirring story of the days of sword fighting and chivalrous romance, will be the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week. In this dramatic and exciting tale of court adventure John Gilbert plays the leading role and his work is said to surpass that of many of his other famous characterizations. The picture was directed by King Vidor and is based on a novel by Rafael Sabatini.

King Vidor, noted screen director of "Bardelys the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, says that the lowly motion picture extra is a living example of the secret of a successful picture.

"No picture," says Vidor, "can be great unless it is human—in other words, unless audiences can see it through their own eyes. Take for instance, 'The Big Parade.' It proved successful not because it was a war drama, or because there were big scenes, but because the audience saw the reactions of an every-day young American and an every-day girl, just human folks, under certain circumstances. It might not have been war, it might have been anything.

The extras in a big production illustrate this point. We see them on a set, part of a spectacle. Are they interested in the play, or the dramatic values, or the technical details. Not a bit. They are interested in what is important to them, when they'll be through, when they'll eat, whether they'll work again tomorrow, or whether they will wear heavy costumes. The pageant means nothing compared to the problems nearest them personally.

"So with a picture. It interests the public in that degree that it deals with primary emotions best known to them. A spectacle arouses temporary enthusiasm perhaps, but a human situation will live in public memory."

Vidor has applied this line of reasoning to his production of "Bardelys," a picture, it is believed, that will stand as his masterpiece. It is enacted by a distinguished cast, including Roy D'Arcy, Karl Dane, Arthur Eleanor Boardman is leading woman.

'REVUE FANTASY' IS LOEW'S HEADLINER

One of vaudeville's most beautiful and colorful acts, "Revue Fantasy," with 10 people in the cast and with nearly a carload of scenic and lighting effects will be the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Many pretty stage pictures are presented in the headline act and numerous costumes of rare and gorgeous beauty are displayed. In the turn are such stars as Casa and Lehn and Sammy Krevoff who stand around the top of the list of high class dancers.

Another act of note on the new bill is that of Helene "Smiles" Davis and Earl Nelson, two musical comedy stars whose work is well known in Atlanta. They will appear in a new comedy skit full of popular songs and comedy.

Much of the comedy on the new bill will be provided by McDevitt, Kelly and Quinn in their burlesque novelty, "The Piano Movers and the Actress." This skit is excruciatingly funny and is a wide departure in the line of fun making.

Late topical song hits will be sung by Rose O'Hara in "Songs and Personality." Miss O'Hara possesses a sweet-toned singing voice and selects a program of songs which appeals to a wide variety of tastes.

The opening act on the new bill will be presented by the Powers Duo, in "A European Thriller," a novelty act which is full of many difficult and daring feats of balancing.

The Loew feature picture, which will round out the new program, is "Bardelys, the Magnificent," a brilliant drama of hearts and swords of 300 years ago with John Gilbert in the leading role.

Wesley Ruggles has so splendidly acquitted himself in the first series of "The Collegians," by Carl Laemmle, Jr., that he has been signed to direct "Beware of Widows," which will go into production within five weeks, in fact as soon as Laura La Plante is through with "The Cat and the Canary."

He's never made one greater!

He made his claim for immortality when he performed in this great picture!

THE CONSTITUTION EXPRESS

Boys Girls

It's Easy

ONLY 3 NEW { Daily and Sunday } SUBSCRIPTIONS NEEDED

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION makes it possible for thousands of boys and girls in Georgia, and especially the city of Atlanta and suburbs, to possess the "Constitution Express."

This smooth-running, balloon-tired COASTER WAGON wins its way into the heart of every child that sees it. It's the dandiest COASTER WAGON ever given away by any newspaper. It has a large-sized hardwood body (16x36 inches) finished with glistening varnish and brilliant paint. Heavy steel bolsters front and rear are extra braced. Silent running roller bearings and extra heavy single disc wheels make this the fastest and handsomest COASTER WAGON that you have ever seen. Tires are solid rubber and are of the full one-inch balloon type.

Strong—Swift—Silent

You cannot surpass this handsome "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" wagon for strength and durability. No old-fashioned wood bolsters to split and crack — The "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" has bolsters of heavy steel. Wheels have roller bearings, just like the big automobiles, and the full one-inch balloon-type tires make the coaster whiz by almost without a sound.

Read These Instructions:

New subscriptions must be from persons not at present subscribers to the Daily and Sunday Constitution, nor have been for the last thirty days, and must not, directly or indirectly, take the place of someone who is now or has been a recent subscriber.

Such new subscriptions will be acceptable in Atlanta and in any town where The Constitution has a carrier delivery service, provided the new subscriptions are acceptable to the carrier.

HOW TO EARN ONE

If you want one of these beautiful "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" wagons, the first thing to do is to clip out the coupon at the left, bring or mail it to The Constitution for a Contest Book. When you get the book, if "Dad" isn't a subscriber to the Daily and Sunday Constitution, get his subscription first and then you will need two more.

THREE DAILY AND SUNDAY NEW SIX-MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTIONS.

That's all! Just three new Daily and Sunday six-months' subscriptions are required to earn one of these beautifully finished "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" wagons. You are not to collect any money.

IT'S EASY WORK!

It will take you only a short time to get three new subscribers to The Constitution, because everyone knows that The Atlanta Constitution is Atlanta's outstanding newspaper. Besides helping you earn your "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS," the people who sign the agreement or contract for you are receiving the news of the world, interesting reading articles and features for every member of the family for six months.

Start out right now! It's more like fun than work. Get a contract book, secure from good, reliable, financially responsible subscribers, "signature of each," bring or send it to The Constitution office. After the subscriptions are verified and found "O. K.," the wagon is yours.

Read These Instructions Carefully:

Out-of-town workers must turn their coupon book of subscriptions, after it has been filled out with the required number of subscriptions, each signed by the subscriber himself, over to the local Constitution dealer for his acceptance of the new subscriptions.

Newsdealer will indicate his acceptance by writing on the back of the subscription agreement "O. K., accepted by me," and sign his name. Then the book with required number of accepted subscriptions to be sent to The Constitution.

COASTER WAGONS will be shipped by express (collect) to out-of-town workers. Those who live in Atlanta and suburban towns will get the wagons at The Constitution office.

GRAVURE PICTORIAL SECTION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY DECEMBER 5th, 1926

BRITAIN'S STAGE BEAUTY BOAST is Sylvia Spiers, of the angelic face, limpid blue eyes and cupid's-bow lips. The famous theatrical star is a typical English blond and goes in strongly for outdoor sports. (Herbert)

THE DEATH STROKE—Here's one of the most gripping and remarkable photographs made in many months. The photographer caught this great rattler sinking his fangs in the side of a fleeing rabbit on a Texas sand flat, the camera portraying in graphic detail the tragic moment. (Underwood & Underwood)

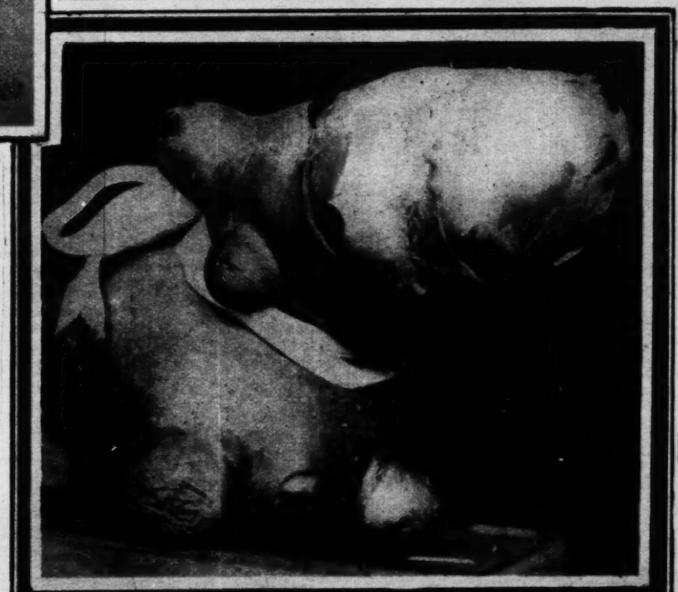

ADOPT BARBARA LaMARR'S FOSTER SON — Zasu Pitts, film star, and her husband, Tom Gallery, actor, have adopted Donald, adopted son of the late Barbara LaMarr, to show their regard for the dead silver screen artist. Zasu Pitts is here shown with her little daughter and Donald. (International)

THE LARGEST GORILLA EVER CAPTURED is shown in the above photo. The beast was taken after ten months of tracking through the jungles of Africa. He measures over seven feet in height and three feet four inches across the back. (International)

IF LADY GODIVA HAD HAD THIS HAIR HER ACT WOULD HAVE BEEN A FLOP When Mrs. Ernest Morsell, of Clarendon, Va., stands her hair covers her like a shroud. On "wash days" hubby has to stay home and help, as there is too much of it for her to handle alone. (Underwood)

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE" — Here's nature's own reproduction of the famous talking machine pup. It's a freak potato unearthed near Liverpool. (International)

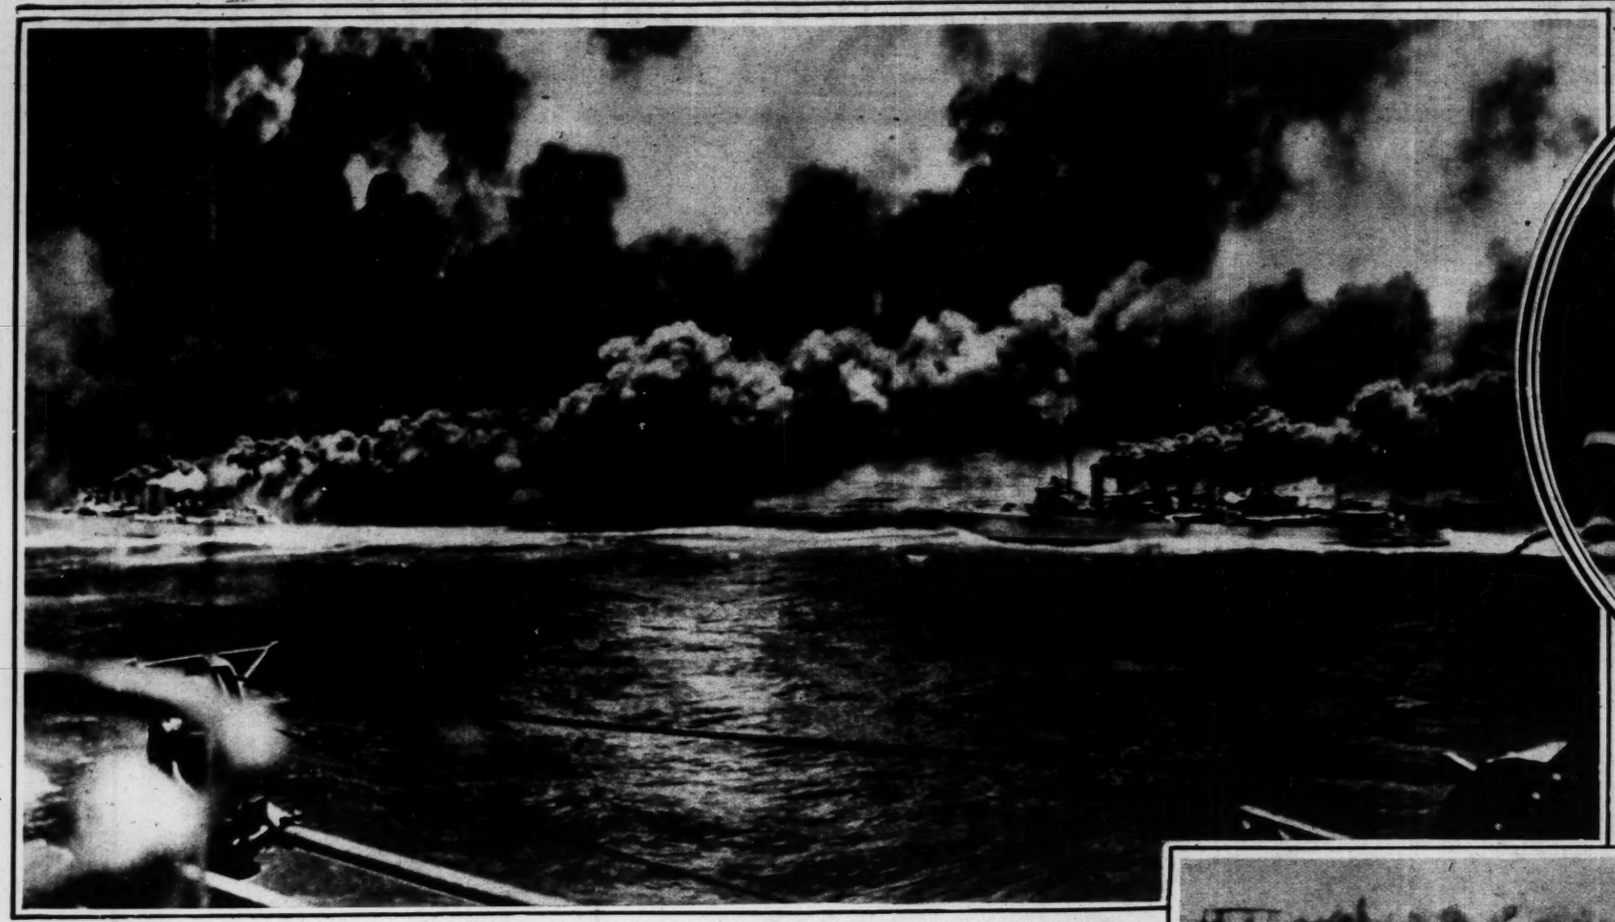

HOME TO HUBBY—Queen Marie and her royal brood standing on the deck of the Berengaria just before they sailed for home. The queen cut short her American trip, due to the illness of the king. (International)

PINE TREES AND HANGING MOSS greeted the Georgia motorcade as it sped over the hard-surfaced road between Folkston and the Florida line. Until recently this road was a sand bed.

GIRLS' BAND OF FITZGERALD — These lassies were the sensation of the recent motorcade run from Fitzgerald to Jacksonville celebrating the opening of an 82-mile stretch of hard-surfaced pavement from Waycross to Jacksonville. (Kenneth Rogers)

AW, I SAY, OL' TOP—The pretty little thing is Miss Alice Watkins, of Venice, Cal., an admirer of Austen Chamberlain, England's foreign minister, who sports a swanky monocle, a cane and an elongated cigarette holder as adjuncts to a spiffy and rather scant bathing suit in honor of her idol across the briny deep, tra la. (Herbert)

DESTROYERS SCREEN OCEAN'S BREAST WITH SMOKE—A striking photograph snapped during the recent battle maneuvers of the Pacific fleet, when all machines of modern warfare were tested. (Underwood & Underwood)

"SERGEANT JIGGS" ON GUARD—The bulldog mascot of the Marines is shown standing sentinel over the president's cup, for which the Marine football team contested with Fort Benning, Ga., in Washington. (Herbert)

FOR THE GLORY OF THE MARINES—Ryckman, of the U. S. M. C. football squad, is shown getting away for a 60-yard run in the Marines' game with Fort Benning, Ga., for the president's cup. (Herbert)

TERRIFIC EARTHQUAKE WRECKS ARMENIAN CITIES—Pictures of damages done by the recent quake in Armenia. At the top is a view of one of the ruined streets and at the bottom is a mass of ruins of a two-story building. Reclamation work is now under way. (International)

"FIGHTING BILL" NOW A GENTLEMAN-FARMER — General William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service, now spends his time at "Boxwood," his rural home near Middleburg, Va., raising thoroughbred horses. He is shown with Mrs. Mitchell about to set out on a quail hunt.

A FAIR DAY FOR THE NIMRODS A two-day duck hunt for W. Bird and J. A. King at Clandeboye Bay, Manitoba, Canada, netted them 201 ducks. The results of the hunt are remarkable for even that splendid shooting field. (Underwood & Underwood)

AIR PIONEERS MEET—The two smiling gentlemen are leaders in man's rapidly-developing conquest of the air. At left is Orville Wright, the first man to fly in a "heavier-than-air" machine, and at right is Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, the first to fly over the north pole. Both predict amazing futures for aviation.

ATLANTA FAVORITE TO FEATURE BROADWAY REVUE—Pretty Bonnie TeBeau, musical comedy star, who plays dhere in "Tangerine," a road show, and was leading lady in the Jimmy Hodges musical comedy company that played many weeks in Atlanta, will star in the Strand roof revue.

AMERICAN GIRL MAKES METROPOLITAN DEBUT Miss Elda Vettori, St. Louis songbird, appeared for the first time on the opera stage in the role of "Santuzza" in "Cavalleria Rusticana." Prominent St. Louisians became interested in her voice while she was in a stock company. She was born in Italy, coming to America when a small child. (International)

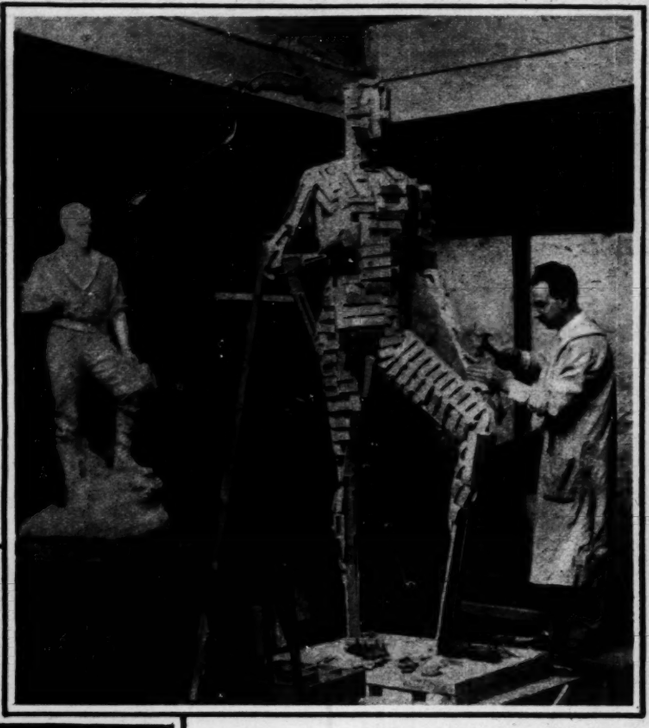

FISHERMAN'S PRIDE is gratified by the new practice of labeling big fish with a placard showing their weight and the name of the angler at the famous fishing grounds at Catalina island. Here are shown two big black sea bass, the first to be so ticketed. (Underwood & Underwood)

ITALY'S "WAR BABY" GROWS UP—Princess Maria, of Savoie, youngest daughter of the king and queen of Italy, was born on December 26, 1914, when Europe was seething with war. Brought up simply, she speaks English fluently, is said to have a flair for kitchen work, and wants to marry a real he-man. (Herbert)

Making of a Monument

A peep behind the screens of a sculptor's studio is afforded by this series of photographs, showing the seven stages of progress of the Spanish war memorial to be unveiled in December on San Juan hill in Cuba by the 71st New York regiment. The sculptor is Joseph P. Pollia. Photos by Herbert.

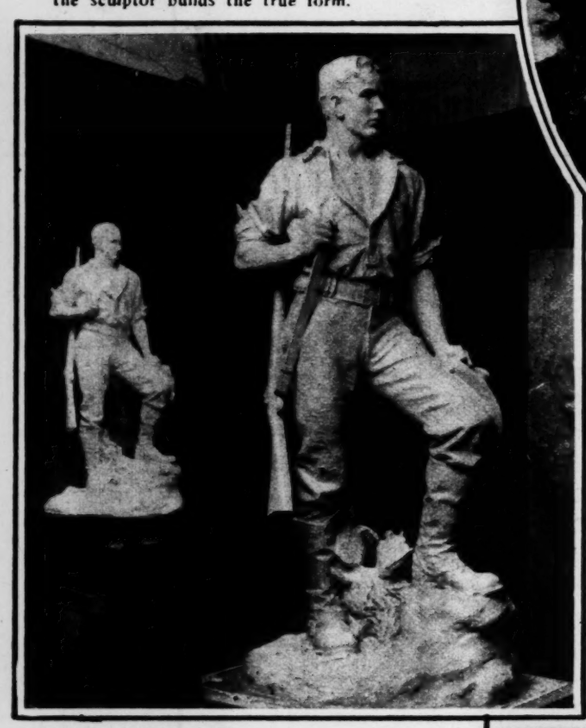

THE FIRST STEP after completion of the small working model is to construct an "armature" or framework of wood and steel on which the clay is to be placed. The figure is built of small pieces of lath, proportions being measured with the pentagraph, or pointing machine.

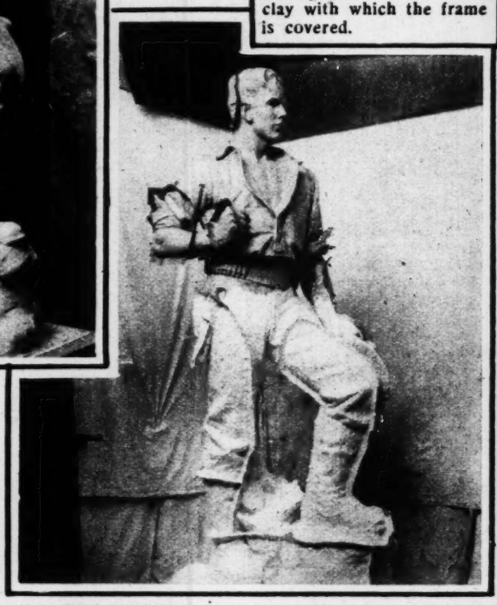

STAGE NO. 2—After shellac has been applied to the armature, it is covered with clay one or two inches thick, this supplying a rough base on which the sculptor builds the true form.

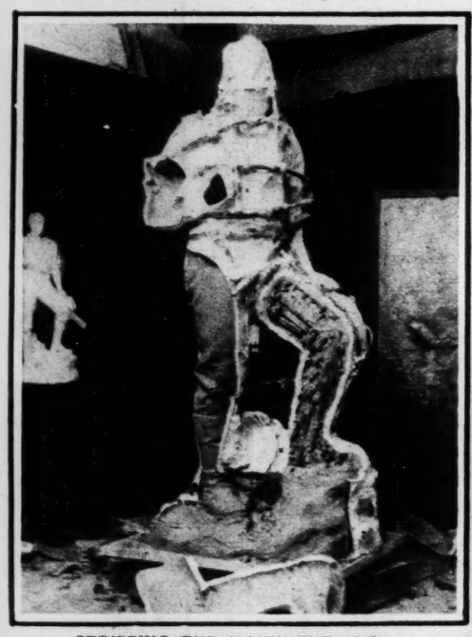

ARTISTIC WORK BEGINS—In the third stage, the pentagraph is brought into use, "true points" being taken from the smaller model and these marked with pegs thrust into the clay with which the frame is covered.

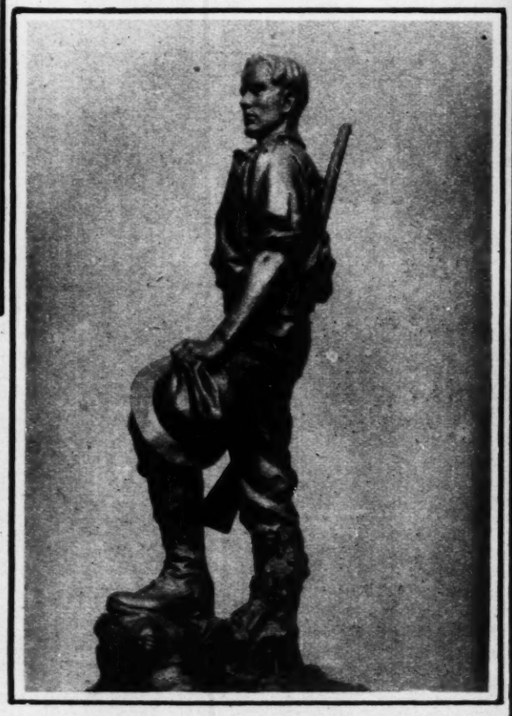

CLAY WORK COMPLETED—After weeks of careful work, the sculptor has built his figure in clay, an exact copy of the small working model.

BRONZE CONSTRUCTION BEGINS—The clay figure is made only to be destroyed. Thin strips of brass are inserted to form the necessary divisions so the plaster mould may be made. Thin solution of plaster is then splashed over the figure, filling every line and crevice. A heavier coat follows. This is known as making the "waste mould."

STRIPPING THE MONUMENT—When the plaster mould dries it is broken away in sections marked by the brass strips previously inserted. This illustration shows how the plaster parts come off. The mould is reassembled and a plaster cast made to be reproduced in bronze.

COMPLETED STATUE—From the plaster cast a sand mould is made in a foundry and into this is poured molten bronze that forms the finished monument. The metal is smoothed and burnished and is ready to be shipped and erected.

What is "THE POPULAR SIN?" It's not listed with the seven deadly ones, and you may never know if you commit the unpopular sin of missing this intriguing picture of frisky Paris—at the Howard next week! But it's no secret that alluring Greta Nissen as the vamp, "La Belle Toulaise," puts in lots of the popularity and pep! Another unpopular "almost-a-sin" lies in failing to enhance Nature's loveliness using the velvety Black and White Cold Cream, when so many women everywhere find it so effective in cleansing and softening their skin, preventing wrinkles, and keeping the youthful beauty of their complexion. You can get this dainty cream from any of 80,000 dealers.

GUIDE BOARDS THAT POINT THE WAY TO SOUTHERN PROSPERITY

The Lullwater Manufacturing Company is a one-hundred per cent Southern corporation, owned by Southern capital and operated by Southern men.

The products of the Lullwater Manufacturing Company—shirts, overalls, pants, play suits and house dresses—are made entirely of cotton, the basic and staple money crop of the South.

The Lullwater Manufacturing Company recognizes the fact, as every loyal Southern business enterprise should, that only in the measure that prosperity prevails in the homes of the South may Southern industries hope to realize a return on their capital investment.

It therefore is now and always has been, the policy of the Lullwater Manufacturing Company to give liberally of its resources in maintaining and promoting the prosperity of the entire South.

But no one Southern industrial enterprise has sufficient resources, regardless of the liberality of their business policy, to establish throughout the South the sense of responsibility on the part of dealers, and consumers, to see that every dollar they spend is invested where it will become an asset in the development and maintenance of prosperity in the South.

To accomplish this there must be cooperation.

Upon the quality of its merchandise and its policy of sharing in full proportion the responsibility of maintaining the conditions in the South by which it hopes to benefit, the Lullwater Manufacturing Company bases its appeal for the patronage of Southern consumers and the co-operation of Southern dealers and Southern business men.

This policy is not merely a thing of spoken or written words; it is the fundamental principle upon the business of the Lullwater Manufacturing Company is built; and it is the controlling factor, not only in its business operation, but in the personal affairs and activities of its executives and employes alike.

Co-operation is the pass-word to prosperity in the South. With the magic of co-operation the Southern states can be transformed into the richest, most powerful and influential section of our country. And every loyal Southern man and woman who is willing to do their part—just their part and no more—will share bountifully in the wealth which co-operation can and will create.

The answer to how can you cooperate in the work of permanently establishing prosperity in the South is by buying Southern-made merchandise from Southern-owned and operated business enterprises; and whenever through your influence you can bring about the use of cotton or other Southern products in the manufacture of commodities of any kind whatsoever, leave no stone unturned to accomplish this end.

This kind of cooperation is just a matter of every-day common sense; just the practice of mutual loyalty between Southern consumers, dealers, and manufacturers.

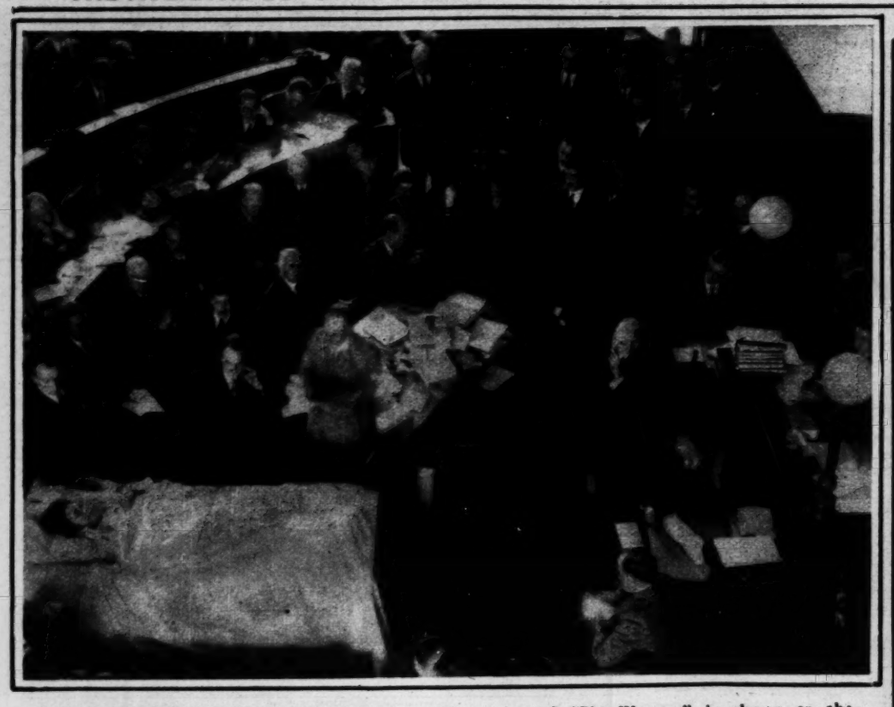

The outdoor advertising shown on this page, and this page itself, are concrete evidence of the sincerity of the Lullwater Manufacturing Company to promote the prosperity of the South.

And when cooperation is thoroughly established in the South between consumers, dealers, and manufacturers, the great basic industry of our section of the country and those engaged in it,—cotton raising and cotton farmers,—will be placed on a sound and independent financial footing and will be able to maintain permanently the balance of power that will ultimate in the prosperity of every man, woman and child who lives in the Southern states.

EPIC MURDER TRIAL SCENE—Mrs. Jane Gibson, noted "Pig Woman," is shown as she gave an unshaken story of the killing of Mrs. Eleanor Mills and the Rev. Edward W. Hall while near death in the courtroom in Somerville, N. J. She was brought from the hospital to the courtroom to give her testimony. (Underwood & Underwood)

"HOW'S YOUR RABBITS" AGAIN IN VOGUE—Rabbit fur-trimmed bathing suits are now the rage along the winter bathing beaches in California and the price of rabbits have gone up. Growing rabbits has become a booming industry along the coast and one company uses 40,000 rabbits a week to keep up the supply. (International)

"HAVE A CAMEL" IS MUSIC TO YOUR EARS

Camel is totally different from any other smoke. . . . It is more than a cigarette. . . . A lighted Camel is smoking enjoyment realized—the closest thing to the perfection of taste this old earth ever knew.

Camel's popularity has no equal. Camel demand exceeds any other cigarette preference ever known. To say "Camel" is to ask for the world's most popular cigarette. And to light a Camel is to taste the best.

For there's a solid reason back of the fame and the enjoyment of Camels. Quality. Camels are rolled of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos money can buy . . . blended for matchless taste and fragrance.

If you would know how mild and mellow a smoke can really be, just treat yourself to a pack of Camels. Once you know what these words mean, they're music . . . "Have a Camel!"

WALT, I'VE BEEN WONDERING WHAT WE'D BETTER GET FOR SKEEZIX FOR CHRISTMAS. IT'S TIME TO BE THINKING ABOUT IT.

I'VE BEEN SEARCHING FOR A BRIGHT IDEA TOO. I THINK A SAXOPHONE WOULD BE SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

THAT WOULD BE TERRIBLY NOISY, WALT, BUT HE COULD TAKE LESSONS AND REALLY LEARN TO PLAY IT.

THAT'S WHAT I FIGURE. IT WOULD BE A REALLY EDUCATIONAL TOY.

UNCA, WALT, WHAT YOU GOIN' TO GIVE AUNTIE BOSSOM FOR CHRISMAS?

I'VE GOT AN' IDEA BUT I WOULDN'T DARE TELL YOU. THOSE THINGS SORT OF LEAK OUT.

I WOULDN'T TELL, UNCA WALT.

AW, GO LONG WITH YOU. LITTLE BOYS ARE NO GOOD AT KEEPING SECRETS.

HONEST UNCA WALT I WOULDN'T TELL IT TO ANYBODY.

DO YOU MEAN THAT IF I TELL YOU IT WILL BE A SECRET BETWEEN YOU AND UNCA WALT? AND YOU'LL KEEP YOUR LIPS SEALED TIGHT?

SURE I WON'T TELL.

ALL RIGHT THEN. I'M GETTING HER A DIAMOND PIN. NOW THAT'S A DEEP DARK SECRET AND YOU'RE NOT TO BREATHE A WORD OF IT TO ANYONE.

I KNOW A SECRET, AUNTIE BOSSOM.

A SECRET? YOU'D TELL IT TO ME WOULDN'T YOU?

HEY! HOLD ON THERE!

SKEEZIX IS GOING TO TELL AUNTIE BLOSSOM.

SKEEZIX YOU BE CAREFUL.

I WOULDN'T TELL ANYBODY BUT AUNTIE BOSSOM.

WAIT! THAT WAS TO BE A SECRET. REMEMBER WHAT YOU PROMISED.

I'M GOIN' TO TELL IT.

SAY! YOU'D BETTER NOT COME BACK UNTIL YOU'VE DECIDED TO KEEP QUIET.

I KNOW A SECRET I'M GOIN' TO TELL.

SKEEZIX HAS YOU WORRIED. I BELIEVE I'M GOING TO FIND OUT SOMETHING— FOR INSTANCE WHAT I'M GOING TO GET FOR CHRISTMAS.

SAY IF THIS LITTLE RASCAL TELLS, I'LL CHANGE IT.

I KNOW A SECRET! GOODIE! I'M GOIN' TO GET A SAXOPHONE FOR CHRIS'MAS.

FREEDOM

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by Struthers Burt

The Story of a Girl Who Confused the Semblance of Liberty With the Real Thing.

At the end of the week Dorothy tried to stab Mario with a nail file, the only weapon she could find.

THE pursuit of liberty is essential, but sometimes it lands one in gaol. When, twenty years before, Mrs. Herbert Quinn—the beautiful Heloise Quinn—in the quaint romantic days when people eloped instead of getting divorced, decided she would leave her husband for Luigi Marco, the violinist, at that time playing his first and last engagement in New York, she had made a final generous northern gesture, the effect of which upon the Latin mind of her lover must have been terrific. Stripping herself of most of her worldly goods and keeping only a bare thousand a year of her income for herself, she had left the remaining three thousand a year to her baby daughter, Dorothy. Another example of the truth that if you are going to be cold blooded you had better be cold blooded all the way through. No Latin would ever have made a similar mistake.

By this generous gesture and because, disappearing, she became a myth and not a real woman, Mrs. Quinn—or Madame Marco, for after a while she got a divorce and married Marco—bequeathed more than three thousand dollars a year to her child, she bequeathed as well what is nowadays known as a "complex." Belonging to a generation in which woman's fear and hatred of man were first rising to the surface, without any definite plan of how to satisfy this fear and hatred, she had left a tradition that carried over into a generation in which fear was submerged and hatred transformed either into unthinking comradeship or good natured contempt. Where her daughter was concerned, although the daughter had never definitely formulated her ideas, it was good natured contempt.

In the figure of her father, which is the first male figure to interest the female eye, Dorothy, through her thin legged girlhood and rounder young womanhood, saw the world mean and smothering; that would, if it could, kill laughter and bravery and swift action; in the figure of her mother she saw joy and all the fine bigness of defiance. Her mother was that thing over the hill you never quite reach but are forever running after. Mrs. Quinn, stooping over a crib on a cold February night of nineteen hundred and two, must have left some impression of her thoughts on the mind of her sleeping baby—an impression subsequently transmuted and brought up to date.

Being a modern young woman, and, above all, a modern American young woman, Dorothy had decided, as soon as she could think at all, that she would lead her own life, and, being a modern young woman, and above all a modern American young woman, she had also decided that where men were concerned she would have no more compunction toward them than they had always had toward women. When she became aware of herself she was amused and interested to observe suppressed excitement she had not consciously provoked and had not the slightest intention of satisfying. In this she was wrong; men have much more compunction than they are supposed to have. The difference is that they see a great many things, but confusedly, while women see only a few things, but clearly.

In fact, Dorothy, like most young people (and most old people), was wrong in a great many ways. She was entirely wrong about her father. Mrs. Quinn had been too shallow pated in her shining lovely way to realize that selfishness and neglect can turn even the gentlest husband grim, and her baby, now the exact age when her mother had run away, was still too childish to know what bitterness and wounded pride can do to the sensitive—unless the sensitive are great. Dorothy could not be aware how much, and at the same moment her father hugged to himself and dreaded certain ways and methods of thought she had, that reminded him of the woman who had so badly hurt him. Dorothy thought she concealed her good-natured, not unaffectionate contempt—a contempt added to by a belief that a woman does not run away from a first-class man, but she did not conceal it. Mr. Quinn recognized it, although the knowledge only made him the more awkward.

You see, he agreed with his daughter. A shy man and a self-deprecatory one, he had performed the unusual feat of falling desperately and mortally in love, and when this love had been thrown back in his face he, too, had come to the conclusion that he was far from first-class. This had happened at about the point where, under happier auspices, his shyness might have ripened into self-confidence. And he also had had his wild moments. Who hasn't? There had been a time when he had seriously contemplated abandoning everything but a Dionysinic pursuit of pleasure, but he had put this aside in order to make enough money so that never again would he have to deny any woman—wife or daughter—any trinket she desired. His self-esteem, however, was permanently unsettled.

He found himself in a quandary. He had no more idea how to bring up a daughter than he had how to keep a wife. Unable to speak frankly, he confined himself to occasional, and —so it seemed to Dorothy—unimportant and surface advice. This is usually the way with shy and uncertain people—their speech turns into symbols, and the symbols sometimes indicate no more than a petty convention, even when back of them there may be a burning philosophy.

Mr. Quinn said, uncomfortably, with a dry grimace, "Don't you—eh —think, sweetheart, that dress shows a trifle too much of—er—your back?" And Dorothy thought, "O Lord!" When what Mr. Quinn really thought was, "Bless her—God bless her—she's so sweet, really, and so clever, and she must be happy—happy in the way I wasn't—but some of the secret of happiness lies in the integrity of your own individuality and the respect given it by other people, and how in the world can women achieve the first and arouse the latter when they will continue to make every one concentrate upon the whiteness — however lovely — of their flesh? All right in its place, but too much of it. Too insistent. Cheapening."

He should have said: "Look here, child. I'm an old fool—every one is—but I've lived longer than you, so if you contemplate folly come to me and we'll talk our mutual folly over. It may not prevent anything, but at least it will make you feel that you've always some one to talk to. The real horror of the world is not folly, but loneliness."

Outside of this misunderstanding, however, Dorothy, for some one only twenty-four years old, had done fairly well. In the first place, she had gone to college and had graduated without in the least losing the soft allurement of her blonde hair, of her misty blue eyes, and her rather full mouth. She had retained, smoothing down an alert, not uninformed brain, a vague elusive charm which encouraged shy and callow men, pleased wise and witty men, and occasionally fooled stupid and brutal men. In the second place, after graduating from college and spending a year as a poor member of a rich society—this was to please numerous rich relatives, who had done nothing in return that was not subtly offensive, and Dorothy was not really poor—in any place save New York she would have been considered well-to-do, for Mr. Quinn was president of a small but solid bank, not counting the three thousand a year Dorothy had from her mother—she had in disgust, and in pursuance of her plan of leading her own life, gone out and definitely got a job.

She had always wanted to write, some day she was going to write, and so she had got a job with a publishing house; her salary was immoral—because she was a girl—and every day at nine she sat down at her desk and read until five in the afternoon dreadful manuscripts that came in from all over the world.

Work pleased her, also the atmosphere this particular work created. She found that as an editor she was a far more piquant and interesting figure than she had been as merely one of scores of other nearly rich girls. Her vague, heavily lashed eyes were thrilling to the intelligent masculine soul when the red, rather full lips pronounced editorial opinions. In the little house on Fourteenth street where she lived with her father she began to receive for tea or small candle-lit dinners many of the so-called brilliant younger men and women of the city. She even descended at times to the nearby cellars and dance halls of Greenwich Village and came away with the feeling that life, after all, was perhaps no more than the unpleasant taste left in the mouth after too many cigarettes, a disillusionment that lasted until sleep, a toothbrush, and the necessary thinking that goes on in editorial offices had set her straight again.

Out of the mist of personalities surrounding her two began to appear more definitely—William Fonda del Comercio, a poet, who, with bitterly sardonic mental grin because of his own lack of commercialism and a not unwitty knowledge of the average American's lack of languages, had taken the name of the hotel owned by his Spanish grandfather, and William Hewlitt, a leftover from more conventional days. William Fonda del Comercio—that was merely his writing name; his real name was William Sansom — considered himself Dorothy's necessary and evil genius, and William Hewlitt thought himself her good one. Both rather irritating points of view.

William Fonda del Comercio was grimly intent upon making Dorothy a —well, to put it delicately—practical Egeria; that is, with American trimmings. He did not believe in marriage, but as there seemed no other way out of it on this side of the Atlantic he wanted Dorothy to marry him with as few words spoken as possible and the determination to make marriage just as little as marriage could be done. William Hewlitt was equally intent upon making Dorothy his wife until death did them part. He was junior partner in a tea house, and somewhere out in New Jersey supported an ill mother.

You can imagine that when the two Williams met in Dorothy's drawing room, which sometimes happened, Dorothy was not happy.

But she was very happy about them when they were away from each other. She used Fonda del Comercio's wicked theories to upset William Hewlitt and William Hewlitt's more normal theories to irritate Fonda del Comercio. As for Mr. Quinn, he disliked both young men with equal silent vigor, and, as was often the case when Dorothy had guests, went out somewhere.

He disliked Fonda del Comercio because of his name and because he was dark and looked dirty, traits which hid from Mr. Quinn's eyes Fonda del Comercio's undoubted charm. And he disliked William Hewlitt, quite illogically, because he was so unlike William Fonda del Comercio and such a "damned cut-and-dried young man." Although Dorothy agreed with these unuttered sentiments more or less, she couldn't be interfered with, and her father's attitude turned, at moments, her good-natured contempt into scorn and hostility. There were times when her blue eyes followed her father's thin, retreating figure with the look that brings, like a little cold wind, the sense of tragedy into the warmest hour.

Dorothy, very much interested in editing, and never having been in love, but "knowing all about it," the way every modern young woman does—which means, before it arrives, nothing at all—said to herself, "Some day, I suppose, I'll have to marry. It seems to be an inevitable sort of thing, and there are certain spiritual and physical needs, like babies. O, well, I'm twenty-four. Which shall it be, William Hewlitt or William Fonda del Comercio?"

The line of William Hewlitt's jaw was adorable, something between that of the young Hermes and the American business man. Dorothy wanted to kiss it. Her head swam at the thought—and that was love. There was security in the line of William Hewlitt's jaw. Security, yes, but where? In Plainmead, New Jersey. "Plainmead, New Jersey? O, good Lord, no!"

William Fonda del Comercio had lovely eyes, and Dorothy wanted to blind their look of audacity and self-assurance with ecstasy—that was love, too. With William Fonda del Comercio one would have complete understanding—save in one's adoration of swimming—and adventure. But understanding and adventure where? In Greenwich Village and all the table de'hotes of the world.

Without knowing just how it happened, Dorothy found herself more or less engaged to both the Williams, and disliking both of them at times rather desperately because of it.

William Hewlitt was extraordinarily reasonable (what a lamb he was, really), yet nothing he could say altered the situation.

"But, sweetheart, be reasonable. I can't live anywhere else as long as mother lives. She's crazy about Plainmead."

Sensible, with Plainmead in the offing as your future home! Dorothy shuddered.

William Fonda del Comercio was darkly destructive, and celebrated his supposed engagement by writing a sort of Devil's Mass called "Young Love." After deep thought, he broke into passionate pleading which, unlike his poems, was punctuated, rhythmical, and had in it traces of assonance, fundamentals which are to be found in the remarks of most people when deeply stirred.

"Don't let's marry now. Let's wait a while. Think it over. Go away. See the world. This blamed snug country. This awful place. Love is blood red, terrible. I can teach you love. Go away and stay . . . O, your face—Dorothy!" He collected himself. "Look here, why don't you do this? Go to France or some place, consider this thing and see life. In a month, two months, three months—half a year, a year, two years, cable me." Dorothy suspected a fear of responsibility that disgusted her.

And it was at this crisis that she received a letter:

10 bis rue des Fleurs, Paris.

My dear little girl:

This is from your mother whose voice you have not heard and whose face you have not seen for twenty-three years. We have taken an apartment in Paris for a while and I am wondering if you would like to run over and visit us. I am getting older—I am forty-eight.

Marco will be glad to see you, but if you do not want him I will send him away. He can go and live somewhere near.

I have not asked you before because I knew your father would not let you come, but now you are twenty-four and, I hear, very much your own mistress. I will not attempt to say, either, all that is in my heart lest it sounds hypocritical, but I will tell you when I see you . . .

Dorothy raised her head and stared across the breakfast table at her father. He was eating a boiled egg nervously and crossly. As long as she could remember he had eaten boiled eggs nervously and crossly. Tears came to her eyes. She felt the haunting sorrow she had felt so often, the haunting sorrow that comes to the imaginative person when he, or she, touches dead romance or reflects upon the spent life of earlier decades . . . Garrets filled with faint-smelling brocades or silks, empty small pleasure houses in the dripping autumn grayness of a park. . . . Dorothy had a photograph of her mother. A little face, poignant, big-eyed, peered out from under the absurd high piled hair of an earlier generation. Dorothy tossed her own blond bobbed head.

That night she told her father of her intention. The publishing house had granted her a leave of absence as long as she wanted in the hope that she would begin a much predicted but not yet started novel, and she had plenty of money saved from her income and her salary.

Mr. Quinn did not move, but the deep lines about his mouth stirred. He continued to gaze into the depths of the fire, his chin sunk forward on his breast.

"Have you nothing to say?" asked Dorothy at last.

"Nothing."

That was always his way—always. In his presence there was neither joy nor fierceness.

The interviews with William Hewlitt and William Fonda del Comercio were longer, although not any more satisfactory.

William Hewlitt's throat worked as if he were trying to swallow a cough drop.

"You're tired of me already?"

"Don't be silly. There's never been an 'already,' really. We're not actually engaged. I want to go away and think things over. Besides, I want to see my mother. I've always wanted to see her."

"Why?"

Dorothy sighed. She foresaw aeons of bleak misunderstanding with William Hewlitt. Imagine a man asking a girl why she wanted to see her mother—especially a beautiful, a romantic, a courageous mother, a mother, who, all alone and defenseless, had anticipated the bravery and revolt of Dorothy's own generation by twenty years?

William Fonda del Comercio's throat did not work when Dorothy told him her plans. Instead his dark eyes narrowed and veiled themselves. "Good girl," he congratulated her. "I thought you had some sense. When you're ready, cable."

"What for?" asked Dorothy sharply. "If I cable any one it will probably be Bill Hewlitt."

"O, no, it won't," said Fonda del Comercio confidently. "Not after Europe and your mother. Your mother's a brave woman, Dorothy. With her as an example you should be a great woman. She did what every one wants to do."

Dorothy flushed. She had a vision of a slim grave woman, still pretty, in a long gray French room with soft lights. People like her mother were as likely as not to turn religieuse. Dorothy had often thought that she herself, after she had seen enough of life, might turn religieuse. But she supposed that her mother would still keep up some sort of intimacy with writers and painters and musicians.

William Fonda del Comercio, pursuing his own thoughts, sighed. "It would be heaven to awaken a typical American girl like you—make her into what she really could be. You are typical, you know, for all your swank. I will teach you."

"There are moments," remarked Dorothy coldly, "when I consider you the most unpleasant small black beast of my acquaintance. You'll teach me nothing unless I'm married to you, and I don't think that will happen, because, just at present, I'm engaged to William Hewlitt."

This—fundamentally—was a lie, and the moment after she had uttered it, Dorothy was sorry, for there was something about Fond del Comercio that was heady and alluring.

That night her father, after dinner, came to her where she was sitting before a soft coal fire in the library, and leaning his arms on the mantelpiece, looked down at her. He was going out somewhere, and his thin, tall figure was youthful in its dress coat. Dorothy, perhaps because she was going away soon, wondered why a white waistcoat and a white tie suddenly gave a man an appearance of charm and gayety, especially when the man had fine gray hair brushed back from his forehead, and blue, thoughtful eyes, and a clean-shaven face. Her father was really a very handsome man, Dorothy thought, when he took any trouble about himself. And distinguished. That was the trouble with the faces of most of the young men she knew—there was no distinctive, no patina of life.

Mr. Quinn spoke with difficulty, smiling evasively.

"I hope you'll have a very good time. Will you stay over long?"

There was an undercurrent of regret, and Dorothy thought an undercurrent of objection, and her voice stiffened.

"I don't know. It depends. If I like it, maybe a year."

There was another silence.

"Anything I can do? . . . Tickets, or passports, or so on?"

"O no, thanks. I don't think so."

Dorothy's finger was between the leaves of a book she was reading. The finger grew impatient.

Her father seemed on the point of going and stooped over her for the unthinking good-night kiss that pased between them for demonstration, but as he stood back his hands still rested on her shoulders and his eyes were not removed. The grip of his hands grew tighter.

"I cant' talk," he said. "I never could talk—that's been my trouble. But I want you to get out of life all you can. If ever . . . if you ever need me, you'll let me show in action, won't you, that I'm a better father than I seem? What? After all, a father is one of the few disinterested men you're ever likely to know." He shook her shoulders gently and laughed.

For a moment Dorothy's hair stirred with a little cold quickening of delight unlike any feeling she had ever had before. It was as if, quite protected, not having to think, she was being picked up and taken somewhere. Her father was a man, too,

The Other Day

By Donald Ogden Stewart

KANSAS takes a whole day to get through in coming from Los Angeles to New York. It also takes a whole day to get through in going from New York to Los Angeles. The sale of cigarettes is forbidden in Kansas.

"I would like a package of cigarettes," I said to the porter.

"The sale of cigarettes," he replied, "is forbidden in Kansas."

I handed him fifty cents.

"Chesterfields," I said.

"I wasn't always a porter," he began.

I looked again.

He handed me back the fifty cents.

"All right," I said, "Camels, Lucky Strikes, Fatimas."

He looked at me, a little sadly. I handed him a dollar. He sighed and returned the money.

"It's men like you," he said, "who are causing all the present unrest."

I blushed.

"And besides," he added, "do you realize what one little cigarette does to the inside of your lungs?"

"No," I replied.

He took a small folder from the inside of his uniform.

"Here," he said, spreading out the chart, "we have the normal lung of a fish."

I looked.

"A trout," he added.

"Are you sure?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied. "A trout of perhaps seven or eight months of age."

I laughed. He began folding up the paper.

"It amuses you," he said with dignity.

"No, please," I cried, stopping him, "please go on."

"I don't want you to think," he said, "that I am in any sense a crank."

"Of course not," I insisted.

He once more spread his paper out on the washstand.

"And here," he said, "we have the lung of the same fish after fifty cigarettes, four cigars, and a pipe."

"All at once?" I asked.

"Over a nominal period of time," he replied.

I looked.

"Horrible," I replied.

He smiled, but without much satisfaction.

"If people only knew," he said, shaking his gray curly head.

"It's unbelievable," I repeated, "and one of the most interesting features of the chart is the curious resemblance of the trout's lung to a friend of mine named Robert Benchley."

The porter considered a moment. Then he took out a pair of spectacles from a large case and slowly put them on. Then he examined the chart.

"My mistake," he said, apologetically. "This is the wrong side of the paper."

"O," I exclaimed, "what a pity!"

"You see," he explained, "I sort of have a habit of drawing pictures of various well-known people who travel on this train.

"O," I said, "and did Benchley go out to the coast on this car?"

"That isn't Benchley," he replied, holding the paper up in the light, "that's Ethel Barrymore."

"A natural mistake," I added, "especially as both names begin with 'B.'"

"Very natural," said the porter, "and what is more curious still, my last name also commences with that letter."

"That is a coincidence," I said.

"It's a small world," said the porter, "in many respects."

"My name is Stewart," I announced.

"Stewart," he repeated, scratching his forehead. "Stewart." Then he shook his head and said, "No."

"No what?" I asked.

"I'm looking for somebody," he explained.

"Somebody named Stewart?" I asked.

"I forget the name," he replied, "but it was somebody who did me a great wrong once."

"Would you remember the name," I asked, "if you heard it?"

"I think so," he replied.

"Was it Brown?" I asked.

"No," he replied. "It couldn't be Brown because Brown is my name."

"Was it Smith?" I suggested.

Again he shook his head.

"No," he replied. "It couldn't be Smith, either, because Smith is my name, too."

"Do you mean to say," I argued, "that your name is both Smith and Brown?"

He nodded.

"Yes and no," he replied. "You see, my real name is—or was—Smith."

He was silent for a moment.

"But I would greatly prefer," he went on, "that the life of him who was Thorndyke G. Smith should remain a closed book."

"All right," I agreed.

"Unless," he said, "you would like to hear about it."

"Why, of course," I said.

"I wasn't always a porter," he began.

At that moment a stranger came into the washroom.

"Yes, sir," replied the porter, and then he added, "although, as I was saying, I wasn't always a porter."

The stranger looked at me for confirmation

"You haven't got a map, have you?" he asked, "a map of Asia."

"That's true," I nodded.

"Sit down," said the porter, wiping off the leather with a discarded towel.

The stranger hesitated.

"I was going to ask you for something," he stated.

The porter smiled affably.

"Don't you think it can wait?" he said.

The stranger seemed doubtful.

"I don't know," he replied, "I think I had better go out and ask my wife."

"Do that," said the porter, and the stranger disappeared.

"Where was I?" asked the porter.

"Just at the beginning," I replied.

"Had I said that I wasn't always a porter?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied.

The porter let himself slowly down into a chair.

"I wasn't always a porter," he began.

The bell in the corridor suddenly began to ring. The porter stopped and glanced towards the door. The ringing became more insistent.

"That's for me," he said.

The sound increased in intensity.

"I wonder who it is," said the porter.

"I can't imagine," I replied.

The porter scratched his head.

"Maybe it's that lady in lower five," he said.

"Maybe it will stop," I suggested.

The bell did not stop. It got worse. The porter looked at me.

"It's that lady in lower five," he said. "I wonder what she wants."

"Whatever it is," I said, "she wants it very badly."

"She's engaged in some sort of educational work," said the porter. "It was she who gave me that pamphlet about cigarette smoking."

The ringing settled down into a steady pour.

"I don't think she is very happy," said the porter. "Do you know the type?"

"Only slightly," I replied.

The porter shook his head.

"I'm afraid I'm going to have to go," he said.

He got reluctantly up and went out through the curtains. The ringing stopped. I settled back and gazed out over the flatness of hot Kansas. In a few minutes the curtains parted, and the porter reappeared.

"Was it she?" I asked.

He nodded. He was evidently looking for something.

"You haven't got a map, have you?" he asked. "A map of Asia?"

I searched through my pockets.

"Would a road map of southern California do?" I asked.

"She said Asia," he replied. "She even spelled it out."

"We might change this one to read 'Asia,'" I offered.

He considered the map.

"Is there a Los Angeles in Asia?" he asked.

"There must be," I argued. "It means 'City of Angels.'"

"Asians are Mohammedans," he said. "I don't think Mohammedans have angels."

Just then the stranger returned.

"Do Mohammedans have angels?" the porter asked him.

"I don't know," replied the stranger. "This is the first time I've ever taken this trip."

"Why don't you ask in the car?" I suggested. "Maybe there is a Mohammedan on board."

The porter went out.

"Darn it," said the stranger. "Every time I come in here to ask

WILL JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Reprieved Five Times, Ross Again Faces Death—Confession Saved Him Once With But Three Hours to Live

FIVE times Ambrose Ross has been snatched from the death chair. He is now scheduled to die in Sing Sing some time during the week of December 13. Will justice triumph or will Ross, convicted murderer, again beat the law?

When Ross was found guilty in 1924 of complicity in the killing of Ernest L. Whitman, a bond salesman, in a Bellmore, L. I., bank, justice was served by the jury's verdict. Ross proved that by his own confession two years later.

He made this belated confession after two reprieves from death and within three hours of being marched to the electric chair. On the brink of eternity and in the hope of buying his own life at the expense of another's, he expressed his willingness to talk. A third reprieve was granted, and, in a frantic attempt to save his own neck, he talked about his pal, Stanley Klvana.

Twelve judges disregarded his story. Klvana was acquitted and Ross was taken back to Sing Sing to keep another rendezvous with death. The time set for his execution arrived but again he escaped the black cap. A fourth reprieve from Governor Smith. For the fifth time a day was set for his execution. A fifth reprieve from Governor Smith. Once more Ross, convicted murderer, was able to dodge his date to sit in Sing Sing's gray chair of death.

Will he eat his sixth "last supper" in the death house?

Of Great Value.

Governor Smith gave him his fifth lease of life at the request of District Attorney Edwards, of Nassau county, who prosecuted Klvana. Edwards in his pleas to Governor Smith to keep Ross alive said the condemned man was of "great value" to the state in its efforts to apprehend and convict two other bandits who, according to Ross, were implicated in the Whitman murder and who are still at large—this in spite of the fact that Ross' story failed to impress the jury in the Klvana case.

As one of his accomplices in the Whitman case Ross named James (Killer) Cunifee, notorious gunman who helped the much wanted super-bandit Bum Rodgers to escape from an Auburn prison guard. Cunifee, according to the New Jersey police, directed with Rodgers' aid the recent machine gun outrages that culminated in the $167,000 looting of a mail truck near Elizabeth, N. J., and the killing of the truck's driver.

The murder of Ernest L. Whitman was done in the savage fashion of gangster gunmen. Whitman was the innocent victim of brutal fate.

On April 4, 1924, during the noon hour, four armed men entered the First National bank of Bellmore, L. I. Miss Marie Umhauer, assistant cashier, was alone in the bank's main room. One of the bandits, pointing a gun at her, ordered her out of her cage. She was pushed into a chair and commanded to keep still if she valued her life. A man teller was sitting in the directors' room. The bandits found him and carried him to the cellar. Gathering up $7,906, the bandits rushed to make their escape.

Shot Down In Cold Blood.

Whitman, a respected resident of Bellmore and the father of two young children, was a customer of the bank. He was about to enter through the main door as the bandits came rushing out. He made no move to interfere with them, but they were in a hurry and he was in the way. They shot down the helpless man. Thirteen bullet holes were found in his body.

In tracing the theft of two motor cars the police came across clews that led to the arrest of Ross, Klvana and John Slattery as three of the bandits who robbed the bank and killed Whitman.

The three were tried separately. Ross and Slattery were convicted.

Ambrose Ross

The jury in Klvana's first trial disagreed. A second trial resulted in his conviction and he joined Ross and Slattery in Sing Sing's death house. All three stayed death by appeal to the appellate court.

The court reversed the jury's verdict in Klvana's case and a third trial was ordered for him. In the case of Slattery the court disagreed. Governor Smith, stating that, since the appellate court was divided on the question of whether the verdict in Slattery's case was justified, he felt that Slattery should not be electrocuted, commuted the death sentence to life imprisonment. In Ross' case alone the appellate court decided that the jury's verdict and the sentence of death were warranted.

At Ross' trial held in Mineola, L. I., in October, 1924, the woman assistant cashier of the robbed bank positively identified Ross as the bandit who poked a revolver between the bars of her cage and threatened her life if she made an outcry.

Ross' defense was an alibi. He swore and his three brothers swore that he was at his home in Long Island at the time of the robbery and murder.

"As God is my judge," he said dramatically, "I was not in Bellmore April 3 or April 4."

But at Klvana's trial last February when he was trying to talk himself out of the death chair and his pal into it he had another story to tell.

The late Ernest L. Whitman

At his own trial two years before he said: "O, April 4, the day of the murder, I went to bed at 3 a. m. and slept until noon. Then I had lunch with my two brothers, Edwar dand Frank and went out with Frank after lunch."

"I met James Di Lucca," he continued, "and went with him to a shoe store in Manhattan avenue, Brooklyn, where he bought shoes. Later in the afternoon I went out to Slattery's hotel and gave him a birthday party that night."

How It Was Planned.

The district attorney, cross-examining him, was unable to break him down.

"If you had anything to do with the killing of Whitman, would you tell me about it?" asked the district attorney.

"I certainly would," said Ross in an emphatic tone.

At Klvana's third trial under oath he testified:

"On the morning of April 24, 1924, Ka nd the other men who robbed the bank left Long Island City to do the job. We left between 9 and 10 in the morning. The start was made from Slattery's place at Jackson and Beebee avenues, Long Island City. We left in a Buick car with Slattery."

"Klvana," he continued, "left Slattery's in another car. Before leaving I talked things over with Klavana the night before."

Slattery, saved from the death chair by Governor Smith's clemency was owner of a hotel in Long Island called "The Old Homestead." Klvana was his bartender. At Klvana's trial last February, Benjamin Thalrose, who stole in Madison avenue, New York, the automobile used in the bank robbery, testified that he had stolen the car "to order," declaring that Slattery had told him he wanted a Buick 1924 model and that he (Thalrose) and another man went out in search of one. Ambrose Ross, he testified, was in the hotel barroom.

Ross, brought down from Sing death house heavily manacled and guarded to appear as the state's star witness at the trial of his pal, Klvana, testified there were eight men in the conspiracy to rob the bonk. Five of them were from "Killer" Cunifee's gang and three from his crowd in Long Island City—himself, Slattery and Klvana. Only four of the eight took part in the robbery and the killing that resulted, he testified. These four, he said, were himself, "Killer" Cuniffe, Slattery and a member of Cuniffe's gang, Chick Kiekart by name.

The Night Before.

Klvana, he testified, was in the original conspiracy, but had no part in the actual holdup. He was waiting in another car on the motor speedway to help the looters make a safe getaway, according to Ross. Ross also testified that Klvana was not armed.

Ross told of a meeting with Slattery and Klvana on the night before the holdup.

"Slattery suggested that Klvana and I go along in the holdup," he said. "So next day at noon we motored over to Bellmore. When we got to the bank two men got out of the Buick car we were in and went into the bank. I was the third man to enter the bank."

Christine O'Brien, Ross's loyal sweetheart

At his own trial Marie Umhauer, assistant cashier of the bank, identified him as the bandit who held a gun in her face. In the story he told

AUCTION BRIDGE —[]— By MILTON C. WORK

THE INTERNATIONAL AUTHORITY

Last Sunday I gave a hand and asked how it should be bid and played, and what score should be made with it. I stated that the hand was quite a bit more difficult than those which ordinarily appear in these articles and asked my readers to give it their best consideration.

The hand was as follows:

North.
Spades: 10-6-5-4.
Hearts: 9-6-5.
Diamonds: A-10-5.
Clubs: A-K-J.

West	East
Spades: 8.	Spades: Q-J-9.
Hearts: Q-10-8-7-2.	Hearts: J-3.
D'monds: J-9-4-2.	D'monds Q-8-6-3
Clubs: 10-7-3.	Clubs: 9-8-5-2.

South
Spades: A-K-7-3-2.
Hearts: A-K-4.
Diamonds: K-7.
Clubs: Q-6-4.

South (Dealer) has a very strong hand. There is great strength in the two Majors and some in each Minor; the Diamonds are surely stopped if led up to, and the Clubs may or may not be stopped, but it would be bad bidding to name a No Trump with two such weak Minors, when the hand contains such a satisfactory Major declaration. South should bid one Spade, after which there would be no other bidding. Neither adversary has nearly the strength which would warrant a bid; and North, with four Spades, should not think of changing the contract to No Trump. The side King and two side Aces will help toward a Spade game and, with the Hearts unstopped (as far as North knows), the Spade game seems far more probable than a game in No Trump.

With a hand like South's, there are many holdings that North might have which would produce game at Spades and not at No Trump; but it would be a very odd North holding with which he would fail to deny South's initial Spade bid, and yet the combined hands could make game at No Trump but not at Spades. When Dealer has a choice between a Major and No Trump, he should remember that partner would deny a suit-bid if he think some other suit or No Trump would work better; but partner, whether weak or strong, would not be nearly so likely to take out a No Trump.

Played at Spades, the Seven of Hearts would be the opening lead, which South would win; and then, on tricks 2 and 3 would lead the Ace and King of Spades, hoping to drop the four adverse Spades. In this attempt South would be unsuccessful, but there being no Spade finesse, he would have done all in his power to take all the Spade tricks. The Declarer would now be confronted by the certainty that East must win one Spade trick. The combined hands will not lose a Diamond trick because the losing Diamond in Dummy can be ruffed in the Closed Hand, nor a Club trick; but Dummy and Closed Hand each have a losing Heart with no card upon which to discard either of them. At first glance it would seem as if the adversaries must make one trump and one Heart, and that five-odd would be all that the Declarer could score. Five-odd of course is one trick more than game, the fifth trick being worth only nine extra points; six-odd, on the other hand, carries with it a Small Slam (fifty points) and at Spades is worth fifty-nine points more than five-odd. The nine-point difference between four-odd and five-odd is generally called the trick immaterial, but the fifty-nine-point difference between five-odd and six-odd is most material and the Declarer should try hard to make that trick if it can be done. In this case it will be noted that there is only one possible way to win the extra trick; that being to trump a Diamond or Club led by an adversary, and at the same time to discard a losing Heart from the other hand.

In an effort to get the Small Slam, Declarer should lead three winning Clubs, two winning Diamonds and ruff the third Diamond. Declarer will then have won nine tricks—or three-odd—and is sure of winning two more. Dummy has remaining two trumps and two small Hearts, and Closed Hand two trumps and a winning and a losing Heart. East is marked with the good Spade Queen (because West has refused Spades); and may have one or two Hearts. West's original lead was the Heart Seven and Declarer has seen the Four, Five and Six; if West has either the Trey or Deuce, he led originally from five Hearts—he still has four and East has one. The winning Heart should now be led and, unless East trump it (if he do the Slam is assured,) a trump should then be led, putting East in the lead. If East have both the small Hearts, the scheme will not work, but it should be tried; it is the only chance.

As the cards are located, East must win the eleventh trick and lead to the twelfth trick. Having no Spades or Hearts, he must lead a Diamond or Club—both of these suits have been eliminated from the North and South hands. Whichever East leads, Declarer can discard his losing Heart from one hand while he is trumping the trick with the other hand. After that, either North or South has the thirteenth trump remaining to win a total of twelve tricks and a Small Slam.

This hand illustrates about as difficult an elimination situation as a Declarer ever is obliged to face. Easier ones are of frequent occurrence and, in order to illustrate the principle in the simplest manner, we will suppose Hearts to be the trump, the opening lead a Diamond and that Dummy (North) holds: Spades: x-x-x, Hearts: 5-4-3-2. Diamonds: x-x-x. Clubs: Ace-x-x; the Closed hand (South) being:

Spades: Ace-King-Jack. Hearts: Ace-King-8-7-6. Diamonds: x-x. Clubs: King-Queen-x. If the adversaries lead three rounds of Diamonds, Closed Hand will trump the third trick and then lead the Ace and King of Hearts. Should East refuse Hearts on the second round, the Declarer would face the following situation:

North.
Spades: x-x-x.
Hearts: 5-4.
Diamonds: None.
Clubs: Ace-x-x.

West	East
Spades: (?).	Spades: (?)
Hearts: Queen.	Hearts: None.

South.
Spades: Ace-King-Jack.
Hearts: 8-7.
Diamonds: None.
Clubs: King-Queen-x.

Declarer has lost two tricks and must lose one more. To make game, he must win all the Spades.

Declarer could put the lead in Dummy with the Club Ace and try a finesse in Spades. If East holds the Spade Queen, this play would win the game; but if the Queen be with West, West should win with it and save game. The finesse offers a fifty-fifty chance of success, but the Declarer has a 100 per cent opportunity, viz., the elimination play—if he only can diagnose and grasp the chance it offers.

He first must eliminate Clubs from his two hands by leading three rounds of that suit, which would leave three Spades and two trumps in each hand; then he must lead a trump, which would put West in the lead and compel him to return either a Spade, which gives South three Spade tricks, or a Diamond or Club, either of which North can trump while South is discarding his losing Spade Jack. After that, South has two good Spades and a trump for North's losing Spade. Should West use his Heart Queen to trump one of Declarer's Club leads, he would still have to lead a Diamond or a Spade, and the net result would be the same.

Elimination situations, while difficult for beginners to diagnose, frequently occur and are rarely overlooked by experts. They should be watched for with great care, as they often make the difference between game and failure to make game or Slam and failure to make Slam.

The hand for next Sunday is as follows:

North.
Spades: Q-J-8-5.
Hearts: K-10-6-5.
Diamonds: 5-3-2.
Clubs: A-7.

West	East
Spades: 10-7-4.	Spades: 9-3-2.
Hearts: 7-2.	Hearts: 8-3.
Diamonds: K-J-4	Diamonds: 10-9-8-7.
Clubs: K-Q-10-6-5.	Clubs: 9-8-3-2.

South.
Spades: A-K-6.
Hearts: A-Q-J-9-4.
Diamonds: A-Q-6.
Clubs: J-4.

THE WORLD'S BEST PICTURES

"Sacred and Profane Love" By TITIAN

This is the 42nd of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotogravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

Someone has said that progress is the unwillingness of mankind to accept anything as good enough. Genius is ever in its van, and credit goes to those who devoted their labors to the advancement of progress. In the field of painting the "curved line" shows a sharp upward movement during the first part of the 16th century chiefly because Titian, the great colorist, was working.

Leaving native Cadore in his early youth, he migrated to Venice, rented a studio in the artist colony and started to work. "Who's the new artist?" "Oh, just another poor fellow who doesn't know the meaning of starvation." And that was the only ripple Titian's entrance caused. He was a keen student and refused to quail under obstacles that stopped the ordinary. When the brush failed to bring out the tone, he worked the paint around with his thumb until the proper shade appeared. As Sebastian Bach was the first to use this thumb in organ-playing, so, also, was Titian the first to use it in painting.

By day Titian studied the mixture of paint much as the great Herschel observed the heavens at night. Emerson says, "When half-gods go, the gods arrive." Ere long this Cadore youth had been in the colony the other artists felt his genius. The name "Titian" was on every tongue in Venice and dukes, princes, popes and emporors flocked to his studio to favor him with commissions.

"Sacred and Profane Love," the property of the Gorghese Palace, Rome, is considered his greatest work, excepting always "The Assumption." It was painted about the year 1503, when the artist was in his 26th year. Different biographers have voiced their views as to what the painting represents, but their contentions appear to be unfounded.

Franz Wickoff advances the theory which he supports by strong argument that the picture illustrates an incident in "Argonautica" by the Latin poet, Valerius Flaccus, claiming the nude figure is Venus, who pleads with Medea to accept the hand of Jason, her Greek lover.

With the old painters it was a habit, mayhap a fault, when in the mood, to paint their models in various poses, sometimes in the nude—sometimes clothed. Scandal is a form of advertising and travels fast behind wagging tongues. "Call me anything, but be sure to mention my name," was Barnum's idea of publicity. Before such "horrible paintings" were usually finished the good folks were demanding redress for the injuries to decency. Whereupon the wily artists would label them with titles from classical mythology. This bit of by-play lulled the furor of the gentry to quietude, and such pictures then became "beautiful."

The Italian government has a law which forbids the removal of a "Titian" from the country. This law prevented Prince Borghese from accepting a generous offer of 200,000 pounds for this celebrated masterpiece. The prince was only too willing to give the rest of his collection, valued at 144,000 pounds, to the government had permission been given.

Out in the vast audience is someone who gives genius its inspiration. It is the ignition that brings the flare. In the case of Titian it was his daughter, Lavinia, whom he has immortalized. He painted her picture many times. Titian, born in 1477, lived to be one hundred years, lacking six months. He was great in his day, and today after four hundred years have rolled into the past, he is still great, for good art never dies, but appreciates with the years.

Shocking Revelations of L

Wild Revels in Which Fashionable Society Beauties Drink and Carouse With Dope Fiends, Burglars, Pickpockets and Other Sinister Figures of the Underworld

LONDON.

ALL the wild young men and gay young women who set the pace for the city's night life are walking softly these days, waiting for an outraged public to forget the Donkey Derby of Leicester square.

All the canny night club proprietors are dropping those snappy novelties and specialties that figured so largely in the programs a few months ago.

Sporty debutantes and precocious sub-debs are earnestly assuring the pater and the mater that they never frolicked at the notorious Frivolity club, or, anyway, hardly ever.

Preachers are viewing with the utmost alarm. Editors are writing in the gloomiest possible vein.

Everywhere the forces of convention and propriety are being mobilized for a war to the death with the underworld; more specifically with those representatives of the underworld who dress for dinner, haunt the clubs and masquerade as bohemians before the romance-seeking daughters of the upper class.

Sylvia Goodman, the wealthy London lawyer's daughter whose recent mysterious disappearance is believed to have followed her introduction to the dissipations of a night club of dubious reputation.

In the meantime, Mr. Frank Ellis, the unwitting but by no means innocent cause of it all, is nursing a grievance.

For doing what many another night club impressario is doing—only a little more so—he has been lampooned from one end of the country to the other as the most sinister sort of malefactor.

He has been deprived of his license as owner, host and master of the revels at the Club Frivolity. Newspapers have exhumed his past and proved he is an ex-inmate of the Old Bailey and once was known as the ablest butler-burglar in the profession. Just as he was "getting started respectable-like, too," as Ellis himself points out.

The public indignation that followed the raid on his club has pretty thoroughly ruined him.

Many months ago the ex-convict turned up in London with considerable cash and an idea that there was big money to be made in operating a really speedy night club.

Backers of unimpeachable integrity were obtained, and the Frivolity was opened in Leicester square. From the first it paid. And, also from the first, it attracted a decidedly mixed clientele. Which was the reason an unimaginative police sergeant finally decided to pay the place a visit.

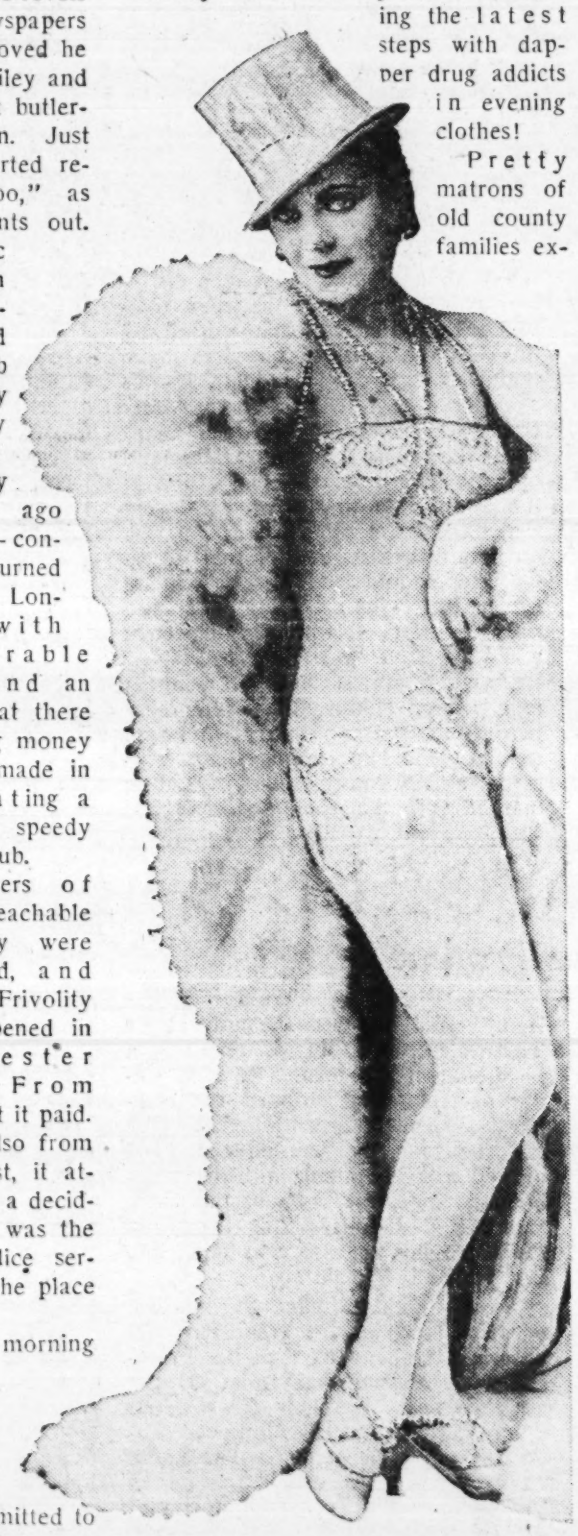

Early one foggy London morning this fall, police in plain clothes, bearing credentials obtained by methods best known to themselves, presented their cards to the reformed Mr. Ellis and were admitted to his temple of mirth and jollity.

What they saw, and told later, caused an explosion in London society that will not cease to echo for months to come.

In the dry-as-dust style of conscientious police officers, they have described revels that would seem more natural if witnessed on Montmartre.

Flushed and excited daughters of country vicars and city baronets dancing the latest steps with dapper drug addicts in evening clothes!

Pretty matrons of old county families exchanging small talk and powder boxes with "women of the town."

This costume, worn by Mlle. Spinelly at one of the most reputable of London's night clubs, is declared by the police to have been outdone in daring by those worn by guests and entertainers at many disreputable resorts.

Soft-footed waiters just out of prison gliding ingratiatingly among the hundred strangely assorted guests!

Ellis, alumnus of the Old Bailey, and one-time butler-burglar of renown, smiling like a Cheshire cat upon clients who may have been among his professional victims in the days of his burgling and butlering!

As for the rest, the now internationally notorious Donkey Derby, here is the initial entry on the police blotter concerning it:

"While we were there, we observed a number of donkeys led into the club and out on the ballroom floor. Waiters known to us as dubious characters held them, while young women in various stages of undress mounted them.

"Among the women were ladies of fine family and reputation and women of no reputation at all. At the crack of a whip they were off around the ballroom floor. They called it the Donkey Derby."

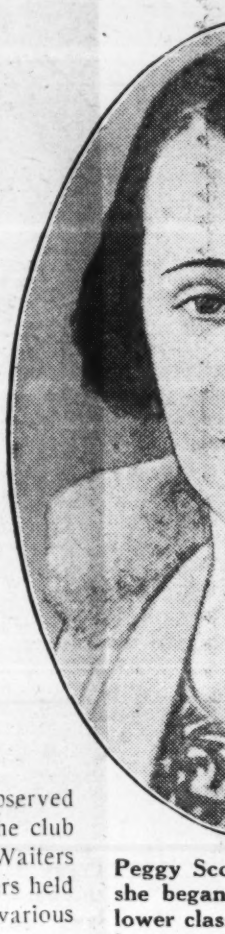

In conversation with reporters, the police have elaborated upon this official description. There were at least a dozen women jockeys in the race. Some of them were scantily clad, indeed. And, be it noted, the women of the town did not outstrip the women of society before the weighing in.

Virtually all the girls had been drinking, according to the raiders. Some of them carried champagne bottles with them when they climbed aboard their mounts and used the bottles to urge the pop-eyed, terrified little animals on.

At the turns, naturally, there were several spills. London donkeys are sophisticated, from their long association with coster mongers, but sprinting on waxed wood floors is not among their accomplishments. When a girl fell, a male volunteer would drag her away from the flying heels of her indignant donkey, stand her upright and help her to find her clothes.

Occasionally the gallant would be a young university man on the loose for the evening. Occasionally he would be a notorious drug peddler, or a quick-moving, shifty-eyed, lightning-fingered pickpocket.

f London's Night Clubs

There seems to be doubt as to which of the half-dressed girls was first to the wire in the weird Derby. Shortly after the end—after Mr. Ellis and his assistant judges had declared a winner—the police began to act.

Nearly all the customers had liquor of some sort in front of them, though it was after hours, the police told Mr. Graham-Campbell, the Bow street magistrate.

Many of them were "a bit on," they added, while a few were "well away," and slept soundly through the excitement attendant on the closing of the club. None of the society girls found in the place was taken to a police station.

Nor were their escorts. Nor were the ladies of the evening who were their companions. A few suspects of undoubted underworld affiliations were taken away, but most of them have since been released until next time.

Played up at first by the London newspapers because of its element of comic and bizarre, the Donkey Derby has become a crusading symbol in the drawing rooms of London. The words arouse the proper and conventional as a bugle call stirs the ardor of a soldier.

It is not that some reckless young things from Mayfair went slumming. Always there has been curiosity among the well-born concerning the way the other half lives. It is that in this case, and other cases, the gilded young men and adventurous young women of the upper classes have been not merely with underworld characters but of them.

If the boys and girls of Mayfair had been merely looking on while entertainers were galloping around the room in their lingerie the thing might be excused. But the spectacle of high-born women taking part in such a pagan rout for the amusement of—among others—earnest young sneak thieves and second-story men, is not soon to be forgotten.

Lord de Clifford, whose visits to a night club ended in his marrying the daughter of its notorious proprietess.

Respectable people are only infuriated the more by the Frivolity orgy since they discovered that the infamous Derby was theoretically for the purpose of collecting money for the blind of St. Dustan's.

This is a charity in which the Prince of Wales has interested himself. It has been said that some of the wild horsewomen of the Donkey Derby were his friends

London's reaction to the shock has not been without its encouraging side. Mothers and fathers of the insurging generation have learned that youth no longer can be governed by injunction. It won't do to find out what Junior and Clarabel are doing and tell them to stop it immediately.

Intelligent parents who have sons and daughters at the dangerous age seem converted to the idea that the way to fight dangerous amusements for the young is to provide them with plenty of entertainment that is safe and wholesome by comparison.

They realize that these after-hour, outlaw clubs did not pass out of existence when the Frivolity was raided. And they purpose to counteract their appeal by giving countenance to reputable night clubs, such as the Kit Kat, the Florida, Chez Victor's and the Cafe de Paris. Those places, as proper as theaters, have not until now had the benefit of society's unqualified support. But society apparently is left little choice. It must choose between them and such places as the Frivolity.

There is one particularly serious aspect of the free and easy mingling of classes at the "advanced" night clubs. In the atmosphere of artificial gayety, class lines and traditions are occasionally forgotten and strange matrimonial alliances are made.

To wind up the early morningrevelry at a club later closed by the police a number of donkeys were brought in. Mounted on these, scantily clad society beauties and women of the underworld raced around the dancing floor to the great amusement of the hilarious onlookers.

Freedom

tangible, touchable, to be wounded or delighted.

"Lean down," she said. She kissed him on top of his head. "Yes, I will," she said indulgently.

And then her mood passed in amused inner criticism. What did this hermitlike father of hers know about the world compared to herself, armed with the starkness and humor of her decade? When she came back from Europe it was she who would take care of him, not he of her.

On the wharf when, two weeks later, on a misty January day, the steamship Provence set sail, William Hewlitt and William Fonda del Comercio stood side by side and waved their arms in unaccustomed unison. Dorothy, leaning over the rail, did not know whether to laugh or cry. On the whole, her feeling was one of intense relief. She felt that she was bound for a freer, more untroubled life, that back there in the gray fabulously spired city she was leaving the problem of men—at least, from the American angle—the problem of father, of lovers. By the time she was ready to come back she would know definitely what she wanted to do.

She turned her head to look at the gray spaces of Jersey City and the tall, lean melancholy man at her side turned his head to look at her.

"Beaux of yours?" he asked in a plaintive drawl.

Dorothy flushed, but business life had taught her that frequently the easiest way to get rid of any one is to speak politely.

"Yes," she answered coolly, pleasantly, and finally.

"You're lucky," continued the plaintive voice. "I haven't got no one. I suppose I could have hired some one. There was a nice little girl I met at the Santa Domingo Supper club the other night that might have come down for twenty-five dollars. Wish I'd thought of it. I tell you what, sister, money's not much good if you're lonely." The plaintive voice paused. "Coming over on business or pleasure?"

"Business."

"I thought so. I noticed you was all alone."

Dorothy gasped mentally. She peered back across the widening gap of oily waters. The two Williams were indistinguishable specks in a black line that had lost all resemblance to humanity save for the tiny white blotches of waving handkerchiefs.

"I'm not alone, exactly," she explained hurriedly. "My father is a banker and he has written to the captain. I am an editor. Now I've got to go below."

The melancholy drawl floated after her. "Letters to the captains don't do no good—not on a boat like this. It's like sending a letter to the manager of the Ritz. I've crossed thirty-two times."

"Blame it!" said Dorothy to herself. "You can't be free, no matter what you do. American men especially—all of them so kind and protective, and all of them trying to flirt with you just the same. With foreigners, at least, you can make yourself clear."

That afternoon, walking up and down the deck, she spoke once to the melancholy man, but only because she could not help herself. Her bow was sidelong, absent-minded, and obviously dismissing. That night she found the melancholy man beside her at dinner. He was dressed in an expensive dinner jacket, too large for him, and between his winged collar his throat showed a tendency to bulge into an Adam's apple.

"I thought it'd be a whole lot nicer if we sat next to each other," he explained. "There ain't many people on board, but even at that it's kinda pleasanter to start with people you know.

Nibbling a stuffed olive, Dorothy turned her lovely child-like eyes upon him. Above her plain evening dress of black that fell into the lines of her slim figure her dazzling white shoulders and her neck, exposed by her blond clipped hair, gave her the appearance of a partially clothed angel.

"I don't know you," she murmured.

"I know, but you will. We're here for seven days."

Dorothy considered this remark. She considered it so thoroughly that she was on the point of asking the head steward to change her table, but she decided that this was too pointed and might arouse the melancholy man's hostility. There was something about his long, equine face, despite its exceedingly kindly expression when in repose, that indicated possibilities for a dour display of temper. After all, he would be easy to handle, he was comparatively harmless, he didn't know any better. That was the answer. Dorothy's trained eye had already discovered several presentable unattached younger men on the shrunken passenger list who she was sure would within a short time afford her a wall of protection.

But before the wall had begun to function Henry C. Blodgett—that was his name—had hinted to Dorothy all that money could do for a young girl, and, receiving no encouragement in that direction, had twice tentatively proposed marriage. Dorothy felt that the only way to put Mr. Blodgett in his place was to tell him quietly and methodically just who she was, and to point out to him the necessary ideals attached to her position. She explained her father to him, she explained her own work, and she explained the reason for her trip. Possibly, in explaining the last, she drew too glowing a portrait. It would not have been surprising if Henry C. Blodgett had arrived at the conclusion that the former Mrs. Quinn was now a French marquis. Also, in explaining her father, Dorothy unexpectedly experienced a touch of homesickness. At least, if her father were present now, he would stand between her and the importunities of Mr. Blodgett.

Freedom in one direction seemed always to imply a lack of freedom in another. And even after the wall had begun to function Henry C. Blodgett was not to be go rid of altogether. In the fifty years of an adventurous life he had found that there was no wall you couldn't climb over, or dig under, or get through in some way. After three days of the wall he came upon Dorothy half asleep in her deck chair, and, sitting down calmly in the empty chair beside her, folded his hands over his stomach, clothed in an immense checked ulster, and spoke as follows. About all his clothes there was always the appearance of a soul struggling for gayety and doggishness through the medium of tailors and axious to dispose of flamboyant clothes not otherwise to be sold.

"You're avoiding me." A gray eye watched the dipping flight of a sea gull.

Dorothy stirred under her rugs and sighed.

"Yes, I am," she snapped back, "since you raise the question."

"Why?" The long face showed no expression.

"You can ask?"

"I always ask. That's the only way I've ever had of finding out anything. I'm not pretty, and I'm about thirty years older than you, but it don't hurt no one to talk to me, does it?"

"Yes, it does."

"Why?"

Dorothy sat up and, throwing her rugs back from her, put one foot on the deck preparatory to flight.

"Because," she said, meeting the gray eyes squarely, "I don't think you've known many nice women in your life and I don't think you know how to approach them."

Mr. Blodgett averted his eyes. "I used to," he said without rancor, "but recently I've had such a lonely time trying to keep it up that I kinda thought I'd change. I found that if I went up to most women and treated 'em like I thought they liked to be treated they just took me for a dull old fool. Times have changed. You got to jazz things up a bit. It's better to be turned down for being too fresh than for being too stale? Besides, you ain't half as likely to be turned down as the other way about. All I aim to do is to please, anyway."

"You're disgusting," said Dorothy, "and I'll leave you."

"The wall," informed of Henry C. Blodgett's dreadfulness, saw to it during the next two days that he did not approach Dorothy at all, and by taking her meals in the restaurant of the "Province" instead of the regular dining salon, Dorothy managed to avoid seeing him almost completely. But the last night out from Cherbourg he humiliated her again. She was drinking coffee and liquers in the smoking room with "the wall," and had been regaling a new member with a humorous description of her pursuer—she could afford to be humorous now that she was so safe from him—when she looked up and saw her victim at the next table. He was sitting alone and must have heard every word she had said. He smiled at her slowly, got up, and went out.

Dorothy was sick. Not that she cared what Henry Blodgett thought, but she was too fair-minded to like to be caught making fun of a person behind his back. In a few minutes she excused herself, and denying herself to several parts of "the wall" that wished to accompany her, went out on deck. She found a dark, windy corner where air and sea rushed past her like great intent horses with flowing manes. Presently, out of the soft turbulent night, the drawl spoke to her.

"I'm not sore, sister. It does me good to hear that sort of thing—I learn something, and maybe you learn something, too."

Dorothy was silent.

"You see, you're really a right good pretty little kid, and with brains, too, but you're in such a hurry to get somewhere you've never taken the trouble to think what other people are thinking about. Kinda self-centered, if you get what I mean. You wouldn't do this, would you? I'm going to be in Paris all winter—maybe I'll take an apartment. You wouldn't let me come and see you every now and then, so's you could tell me what's wrong with me, would you? An' I could tell you what's wrong with you? No? Well, here's my card, anyway. I'll slip it in the pocket of your coat. And if you ever want anything, just call on me. Sure—I'd be pleased. And I know you're a lady, sister."

"He has spoiled my trip," Dorothy complained to herself all the rest of the night until she fell asleep, and the next morning one of the happiest features of landing in France was the thought that she would never see Henry C. Blodgett again—except, perhaps, for a glimpse of him on the train up to Paris. No country save America could produce such a combination of rogue and sentimentalist and nuisance, and she began to think that perhaps she would never go back to America again—that is, to live. For some unexplainable reason this idea made her think more kindly than ever of William Fonda del Comercio and a trifle more bleakly about William Hewlitt and Plainmead.

The train slid into the gray fog of the Paris station, and Dorothy, her heart beating wildly, pushed her luggage out through the window into the hands of a waiting porter, hurried down the corridor, and descending the steps, surveyed the crowd that stood with lifted heads. Near her was a small woman dressed in black and a tall heavy man with a drooping mustache. For a moment Dorothy hoped these were not her mother and her mother's husband, although something told her they were. Then she was ashamed of her thoughts; the fog made every one look shabby. She went up to the couple.

"Are you . . . ?" she began in English.

"Are you . . . ?" said the woman, and Dorothy found herself in her mother's arms. It was good after twenty-three years.

Over her mother's shoulder Dorothy saw Henry C. Blodgett, whom she had avoided all that morning, staring at her and then at Marco in a thoughtful, puzzled way. He threw back his head and disappeared down the platform.

Her mother released her and Luigi came forward. "Ma'mazelle . . . Vat do I call you?" He leaned toward Dorothy as if he wished, too, to kiss her on both cheeks. Dorothy avoided the embrace. She thought him a very ugly and greasy man, with brown eyes that stood out like those of a frog. Perhaps once he had been handsome in a soft big way.

"Dorothy, of course," laughed Dorothy's mother. "And you—Dorothy—you call him Luigi."

Dorothy laughed, too. This was all very modern and as it should be.

"And now," said Madame Marco, "we will go and have luncheon somewhere. We will send your bags and trunk on to the apartment."

It was after luncheon, eaten in a restaurant out beyond the Palace de la Concorde that bewildered and charmed Dorothy with its sober gayety, its soft wine, its softer music, that she experienced once more, only much more forcibly, the curious and irritating let-down of spirits she had left when she had first seen her mother and Marco. She supposed she was tired, she knew she wanted a bath, she supposed she had expected too much and that this was an inevitable reaction—after all, her mother was forty-eight and had gone through much. Anyway, Dorothy longed to get to the apartment and to be by herself for a while.

She pushed aside her wineglass and hoped that her face had not fallen into the forbidding lines she knew that at times it could assume. At the same moment she tried to push out of her mind the thoughts that had been troubling her, the conviction that Marco was one of the most unpleasant persons she had ever met. Her mother, too—her mother was by no means the mother of her

SNOWDEN'S Sunday School Lessons," 1927, Sixth Annual Volume Practical Expositions of the International Sunday School Lessons. Improved Uniform Series; Topics for Young People and Adults. "Lesson Helps" abound that supply material enough for a lesson period of one or two hours and throw all the burden of selecting what can be crowded in an orderly way into twenty to thirty minutes on those who know that they do not possess this special gift.

Dr. Snowden has in a high degree that gift of selection and of keeping his material within the limits allowed for the lesson period in the average Sunday school. He selects incidents enough to make the people and events of the lesson interesting and human, fits into this frame sufficient comment to bring out the character weaknesses or strengths displayed by them in these transactions, indicates for the instruction of his students places where these same judgments may apply to themselves, and suggests further live topics growing out of the lessons for discussion.

Snowden's Sunday School Lessons has rapidly come to the front as one of the very best helps for the teacher.

It is progressive without being radical.

"Religious Certitude In An Age of Science," by Charles Allen Dinsmore, professor of spiritual interpretation of literature in the Yale divinity school, the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C. Price $1.50.

In this volume Dr. Dinsmore, who has had a distinguished career as a minister and professor of spiritual interpretation of literature in the Yale divinity school, treats of the conflict between the critical intellect in man and that inner spirit which would believe and aspire and rest in certitude. He maintains that the word knowledge belongs to religion as well as science and that religious apprehension reaches nearer the heart of its object than scientific knowledge.

The author says concerning science, "Her purpose is definite. She aims at nothing less than a mastery over nature by the discovery of its laws. In this she has met with such extraordinary success that there has been born into the world an inextinguishable hope that one by one the old enemies of our race, pestilence, poverty, superstition will be overcome, and that the condition of existence will be more tolerable."

The author holds that the supreme contribution of science has not been her results but her spirit, "a passion for veracity."

Science has revealed the vastness of its universe in space and its almost limitless extension in time. It has also revealed the infinitely small, the infinitessimal atoms of cells. Science has brought a changed conception of men, and of religion and of the Scripture.

The writer says: "There is only one attitude for a religious man to take in this age of science. Let him not stand with closed mind and closed fist in front of the vulnerable theories and systems of the fathers, determined to defend them to the last breath. Rather let him remember that the Holy Spirit is the spirit of truth, and that he works wondrously in every age. The tragedy of history has been that the church has so often mistaken the temporary form of her faith for the eternal substance. She has neglected her gospel of love in her fierce zeal for dogmas."

The author contends, however, that while the realm of knowledge is different yet religion knows as truly as science, and that the physical faculties are no more reliable than the spiritual faculties. He writes: "We are as certain of the value of poetry as we are of Ford cars. The sighs of love have shaken men as perceptibly as the winds of heaven. A transforming power issues from the holiness of Jesus which is as indisputable as a volt of electricity. We are as sure of the realm of spiritual values and forces as of the earth beneath our feet. The power of character is as much a part of the nature of things as dynamite, and can be equally verified."

The reading of this excellent volume will inevitably strengthen one in the religious certitudes.

"Can a Man Be a Christian Today?" by William Louis Poteat, LL.D., president of Wake Forest college, The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C. Price, $1.50.

Dr. Poteat is one of the outstanding ministers of the Baptist church in the south.

The topics of the three chapters are: "Today," "Baggage," "Peace."

The author in his introduction says:

"It may be useful to think first of the main features of one period in some detail, then to disentangle, if we may the essential substance of Christianity from its accumulations through the centuries, recognize the traveler in the most of his baggage, and finally to consider what serious-minded intelligent young people are to do in order to secure and maintain abiding peace between their enlightenment and their religion."

The author describes our present situation:

"People are very much as they have always been, but the human scene is various and tangled to an unexampled degree. People are the same but there are more of them than there were before. In the single century since 1800 the population of the earth has grown to be nearly three times what it had become in all the millenniums before that date. And we are closer together than ever before. We move about faster and bump into one another oftener and more violently.

Life is a grand mix-up of persons, classes, nations, races with vastly multiplied opportunities of cooperation indeed, nut of antagonisms as well, epidemics tend to become pandemic, and the contagion of opinion spreads rapidly and far."

The author sets forth the scientific advancement which has brought the new age.

In his discussion of religion he clearly sets forth certain accretions to the Christian faith which do not constitute the central verities.

He states in his conclusion:

"If you ask me what is a man of intelligence to do in this scientific period to preserve the peace in the family of his ideas, I answer in one word: Consider Jesus. Press through a thousand professional interpreters to Him, see Him at His gracious ministries, hear His original, unamended word."

"The Jesus of Our Fathers," by John W. Good, Ph.D., Georgia State College for Women, by the MacMillan company. Price $2.50.

This is an exhaustive study of Jesus Christ as He is revealed in the four gospels. Thoroughly scholarly in treatment, it is written however, not in the interests of Biblical exegesis, but of spiritual truth.

The Christian Union Herald says:

"Every word and act of the Master as revealed in the New Testament receives candid treatment. The scholar will delight in it, and the ordinary reader will have clearly portrayed the great truths of the Great Book. The author believes that the New Testament means what it says about the Divine nature and purpose of Christ as the Son of God from eternity to eternity. There is no modern criticism, no disputing, no doubts. With Dr. Good the reader enjoys comfort and peace and satisfaction with Jesus."

This volume should be of special interest to Georgians, since the author is a Georgian. This elaborate volume serves both as a life of Christ and as a commentary on his teachings.

Will Justice Triumph?

at the trial he said: "Miss Umhauer became hysterical and I thought she was going to faint so I took her by the arm and told her to calm herself. I said to her: 'Girlie, don't get excited. Nothing will happen to you.'"

" 'Give it to him, I heard some one say as I ran out to our car. When we got into the car somebody said: 'A man shot—step on the gas. That was all that was said and we drove away.

"After the robbery we took the money to Slattery's hotel. They counted the money out in equal parts. My share was a little over $800. We all got a share."

Two or three days before the robbery, Ross said, Killer Cuniffe, Slattery, Kiekart and himself went "to look over the ground at the bank."

"We wanted to see whether it was a good bank to rob and what the chances would be," he said.

Ross was asked on cross-examination if he was aware of the fact that in view of his new story his three brothers, who at his own trial had sworn that he was at home and not at Bellmore at the time of the robbery, could be prosecuted for perjury.

"Sure," replied Ross, cheerfully.

It was on Ross's testimony that District Attorney Edwards of Nassau depended to convict Klvana.

October 14 last marked the beginning of Ross' third year in the death house at Sing Sing.

At the Klvana trial Ross denied he had been promised commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment as reward for "coming clean."

"How many times had you prepared for execution?" he was asked in cross-examination.

"Twice," Ross replied. "I went there the second time at 8 o'clock on the 22d." January 22 last was the day set for Ross' execution, after his second reprieve had expired.

"Up to that time, around 8 o'clock, you maintained your innocence?"

"Yes," Ross answered.

Ross said he first saw District Attorney Edwards on the day following, January 23.

"You had given up all hope before that?" he was asked.

"Yes," Ross answered, "I was told that the execution would surely take place."

"When you were told that there was no hope for you, that was when you decided to tell everything?" he was asked.

"Yes," answered Ross, "that's when I wanted to tell the truth." He added: "I tried to withhold my guilt as long as possible."

According to Ross, on the day following, District Attorney Edwards, Long, Father McCaffrey and a stenographer came to him in his cell at the death house. He said he talked to Edwards for four or five hours.

District Attorney Edwards says he needs Ross for the conviction of Killer Cuniffe and Chick Kiekert. whom Ross named in his confession.

The state of New Jersey wants Cuniffe to pay the supreme penalty there. Once New Jersey has him in its toils there will be small chance of New York state getting at Cuniffe for Whitman's murder.

When the jury at his own trial pronounced him guilty he sat unmoved, although he knew the verdict meant a death sentence. As he stood before the judge hearing the words that condemned him to die he appeared unconcerned.

"Don't worry," said his attorney, former Judge Edward J. Grochl.

"What have I to worry about?" asked Ross coolly.

Did he foresee that he would be still alive two years after that death sentence?

It is predicted that Ross will never eat a sixth "last supper" in Sing Sing's death house. Those supposed to be "in the know" expect Governor Smith to extend him clemency by commuting his death sentence to life imprisonment. After all, Ross, convicted of murder and guilty by his own confession, may have nothing to worry about—at least not death in the electric chair.

Even in the ghastly death house Ross feels his life more secure than if he were free and out in the world again. When he made his confession he broke the severest commandment of the underworld, "Thou shalt not squeal."

Cuniffe, whom he named in the confession, did not get his moniker Killer without earning the right to it. He is said to be leader of the Hudson Dusters, a band of Greenwihch Village gangsters famous for its killings. His friend, Bum Rodgers, heads another murderous gang and the two have connections with other merciless gunmen. Were Ross free his life wouldn't be worth one cent. All the gunmen of the underworld at Killer Cuniffe's call would be out to get him to revenge his squealing on their pal.

THE MAGIC MAN

A Blue

INSTALLMENT V.

ROSELIUS strode to the rack, chose from it a bright red strip.

"Watch," he said.

He stuffed it into a test tube and set the latter over a spirit lamp. It smoked, smoldered, blazed up, and crumbled down into gray ash. He poured into the tube a colorless liquid from a phial and the red that had blazed in the unburned texture rushed into the mixture, instinctive and alive.

"You see," he said, "the color was not destroyed even by burning. It only seemed to be. A millenium before Christ the Phoenician baby's little rag doll is thrown on the dust heap. Three thousand years afterward I dig from the ground a wisp of something black. I burn it in my retort and liquefy the gas and in that liquid is the blue that was in the Phoenician baby's little rag doll's apron."

"Bravo, Charles!" exclaimed Florian. "I wish I could lecture as well as that to my clinique!"

"Most interesting!" said the baroness. "Don't think you're to stop yet. What is that filthy looking pot?"

He took up the dinted alembic from its tripod and held it toward her. "Smell it."

She bent over it. "Ugh! How perfectly vile! How can you have such nasty stuff in this exquisite room! If I were Miss Thorp I'd throw it out when you weren't looking."

"I'd throw her after it if she did! That is the refuse from a gas retort that we call coal tar, and it is one of the most magical of substances. You think it has a noisome smell?" He set down the crucible, took a tube from the jumble of the desk before the great window and uncorked it. "Try this."

"But how heavenly!" she exclaimed. "It's like wood violets and harvest apples together. You don't mean to say——"

"Yes," he said. "That foul smelling mass holds prisoner a hundred perfumes and essences, from the fragrance of the trailing arbutus to the musky odor of the swamp lily. It's black as the Earl of Hell's riding boots, but it gave my silks their colors. It furnished the anesthetic that Prosper used in Chicago to put to sleep the brain he dissected with his damned little knives—God save me from ever getting into his clutches! It holds a dozen poisons as deadly as a cobra's venom, gases whose inhalation is as fatal as prussic acid, explosives that can wreck cities."

He paused and looked at them with a sudden boyish smile that illumined his whole face.

"One more thing I made from it," he said, "something I've been keeping a secret—even from Thorpie here. I'm going to show it to you all."

He went to the wall, pulled aside a tapestry and disclosed a steel safe set in the masonry. He turned the combination swiftly, swung down the lever, and opened the heavy door. He drew out a small drawer, took from it a shallow box covered with black velvet, set it with a flourish on the table and lifted its lid. Then he stood one side, rubbing his hands and chuckling.

They ringed it about with exclamations, for there lay against the white satin lining a necklace of orient pearls, perfectly matched, whose creamy purity veiled an iridescence that was soft as a misty moon glow.

Florian set his pince-nez and bent over the box.

"An imitation? Incredible!" he said under his breath. And Rose cried, "O, Rah-rah! Could you keep such a marvelous secret, even from me?"

Pearls! Mitch craned his neck to look. Roselius—no wonder they called him the Wizard!—had found a way to make them. And such pearls! No filled glass beads or wax coated with fish scales!

The baroness took up the lustrous string and laid it against her arm. "Marveilleux!! What a skin! Roselius, tell us you are lying!"

He threw back his great head and laughed with delight.

"Ho!" he roared. "That's one on the poor old oyster, isn't it? There's absolutely no test they won't pass. What do you think of that?"

"And you say, sir," said Schuyler, "that you made them out of coal tar?"

"Of course not wholly," explained Roselius. "The base is a phenolic condensation product with formaldehyde, shaped in a temperature of two hundred degrees centigrade—there in my electric furnace. I cover that with layers of antimony and stanous chloride. So far that's not so different from what the oyster does. Last of all—and this is where I improve on the mollusk—I put it in an atmosphere of helium and I bombard it with a ray beyond the ultraviolet, one that the eye can't see. And what does that cunning little ray do? It disintegrates some electrons of the helium atoms and plasters my little pellet with them—and there you have that marvelous luster!"

He put his arms akimbo and wagged his head at them. "I defy any expert living to tell it from the real. I had three of them here the other day—they represented the three greatest pearl industries in the world. I wouldn't like to guess how much they'd pay me for my little secret."

"You'll form a company, Roselius," nodded the baroness, "and pouf! the real pearl trade is finished. Well, I don't care, I never could afford any."

"No," said Rose. "He isn't going to do it. I can see it in his eye."

Schuyler looked at her in surprise and the baroness turned with an astonished "You're not, Roselius?"

"No, she's right. I'm not."

"Why not, pray?"

"He can't bear to put the oyster's nose out of joint," said Florian, indulgently.

"It would put a lot of things out of joint," returned Roselius. "That's the trouble. As for money, the more I get the more of a nuisance it is. I wouldn't give a shout in Sheal for any more. I made these pearls only to see if I could find out a bit more of the way nature makes beautiful things. I wasn't thinking any further than that. After I had succeeded, I saw my infernal prying might raise the devil generally. So I quit. I destroyed all but a few of the pearls I had made—just enough to show you all how clever I am! The secret, which is the chemical formula of the composition and the measurement of the ray I use, is tucked away in that drawer of the safe there—the very last page of a black memorandum book that looks as if it might be only my laundry list. One of these days there'll be a wisp of charred paper in a saucer on my desk and that'll be the end of the Roselius synthetic pearl—all but the fun I've had making 'em."

The baroness dropped the necklace in the box and spread out her hands.

"And we say in Europe the Americans are money mad!" she said.

Schuyler watched the feminine exodus as the ladies, having said their good-nights, climbed the broad stair. His gaze was following Rose's slender fingers, slipping along the dark polished rail of a balustrade—his own hand still tingling with the warm touch of them. At the break of the stair the baroness looked down to where he stood, straight and tall and presentable, by the fireplace.

"He's in love with Rose," she thought. "I wonder what Roselius thinks about it."

Something of the same reflection was in Florian's mind as he regarded the younger man meditatively through his gold-rimmed glasses. When he had last been in America Rose had been just turning the corner of childhood. Now she was a woman. And here, apparently, was the suitor. Youth to youth!

A tall clock in the corner with a painted, beflowered dial, struck musically. Eleven o'clock. He realized that he was tired.

He spoke: "I'll be off to bed, too, Charles." He held out his hand to Schuyler. "A pleasure!" he said. "We shall meet again, I hope."

Roselius was examining the gauge of the electric furnace.

"Eh—what?" He came to himself with a jerk. "Prosper, I'm a long-winded old pedant. I've talked you all to death. Never mind, you can sleep till noon—if that infernal peacock of Rose's doesn't wake you up. She likes its tail!"

As the door closed on Florian's groomed and elegant figure, it came to Roselius suddenly as odd that Schuyler had made no move toward departure. And in a flash he knew what it was.

"Rose's biff-bang!" he said to himself. "So it's happened."

He drew up chairs and they sat down.

Mitch did not beat about the bush. "Mr. Roselius," he said, "I want to marry Rose."

"Yes," thought Roselius, "this was what she felt coming! Has she caught fire from the spark, then?" Something deep in him stirred and throbbed.

"What does she say about it? Did she tell you to ask me?"

Mitch tapped the ash from his cigarette end with a meticulous finger.

"I haven't asked her yet, in so many words. She doesn't know I'm speaking to you tonight."

"Ah!" thought Roselius. "It's not gone so far yet. Rose likes him, but she isn't sure it's any more."

"But I know she understands that I—that I'm going to."

"Hm-m! You want me on your side, eh?"

Mitch gave a half laugh.

"That's it, exactly it, sir." He exhaled a deep breath of cigarette smoke. "I know nowadays no girl expects a man to ask her father's permission to propose to her, and I'm dead sure no father expects it, either. But I felt I'd like to tell you and to—to have you know something about me."

Roselius had taken his Chinese rosary from his pocket and the carven beads slid briskly through his fingers.

"That's very nice of you," he said. "After all, the old ways had some virtue, though the present age has chucked them all away. But we can't go on living in yesterday, can we?"

He leaned far back in his chair and contemplated the ceiling.

"Of course, I know about you as I know about a lot of young men who are Rose's friends. I know who your people are, or were, for you are the last of the direct line, I believe.—We all know what gossip can do—I've heard the woman story, of course."

Mitch winced a little. A long while ago, that old affair with Kitty Etheridge, that had so nearly entangled him in notoriety. It had swept across his life like a fire in prairie grass, fierce while it lasted but dying into ashes as quickly.

"That was when I was some years younger, sir, and she had a brute of a husband."

"Every lover thinks her husband is a brute."

"And it's dead as a coffin nail long ago."

"It's not the dead past that's the dangerous one," said Roselius, not unkindly. "And I was your age once upon a time." He mused a moment. "Your father's death left you without resources, I think I've heard."

"That's true, sir. I haven't a red cent."

Roselius nodded. "Ah, well, youth can laugh at money losses."

Mitch instinctively took the light tone.

"One tries," he said. "But there have been times with me, I confess, when it's been devilish hard. When you've always had everything you wanted, just for holding out your hand, till it seems so proper and inevitable——"

"The feeling kings have," smiled Roselius. "Divine right."

"And then, all at once, to have everything crash." Mitch gave a little laugh. "For weeks afterward I used to wake up in the morning praying I'd had a nightmare and afraid to open my eyes."

"And since?"

"I tried various things. Business, I'm afraid, isn't my metier."

"Any connection now?"

"No, sir; not at present."

In the ensuing pause Mitch stiffened the merest trifle—the interrogation was beginning to ruffle his dignity.

"Hm-m! I should have thought you might have found congenial work," said Roselius.

Mitch felt that the final word scarcely struck the right note. The Schuylers of his direct line, at least in modern times, had not "worked." They had been financiers, patrons of the arts, holders of offices and opera boxes. One of them had been a bishop. But that was different. Incidentally, it had been a family trait to marry money.

There was a longish wait now, while the little jade spheres clicked in Roselius' fingers, and Mitch watched the thin amethyst smoke from his cigarette spiral upward.

"Schuyler," said Roselius at length, "taken by itself, money's only a by-product, so much worthless slag. I've got more than I could scatter to the birds in fifty wastrel years. Rose won't be poor."

Roselius lighted a fresh cigar.

"So much for a preamble. What I'm coming to is this. With Rose it'll never be a question of her man's earning capacity. If she should sense in him the great urge of art or poetry, for example, she wouldn't care a rap whether his poem or his picture brought him a copper cent. She does things herself, by the way. Has she ever shown you her statuettes?—the child-figure in her Blue Garden, for instance? She doesn't brag, but it's hers, and it's good, by George!"

He said it with an explosive satisfaction.

"Did she really do that?" Mitch's surprise was genuine. "It's a lovely thing."

"The question with her will be whether he's doing his bit in the work of the world. That's Rose! Granted that, it would be all one whether he worked with his head or his hands, creating beautiful things in a studio or turning an emery wheel in a machine shop. A few years ago the man England now hails as the greatest of her younger dramatic poets was playing the ghost in Forbes Robertson's 'Hamlet.'"

Mitch's hand, on the curved arm of his chair, tightened in sheer surprise. Roselius seemed to have given the conversation an odd twist. It sounded socialistic. Of course, he was talking on general principles—he couldn't mean it just as it sounded.

He lifted his shoulders.

"Don't think I look down on men who work. I'm not that kind of a chump. Where would we be without them? But surely you don't think — Rose doesn't think — that every man ought to work, whether circumstances demand it or not?"

"I work," said Roselius simply.

"But that's different. You—you—" Mitch gave a jerky laugh. "You're you. Nobody else could do what you do. But I——"

Here was a brand new experience —it puzzled and perplexed him. It couldn't be that Roselius wasn't conscious of the value of the exchange he had to offer. And yet, unbelievably, the fact that he was a Schuyler, scion of the Forsythe Schuylers of Madison avenue, didn't appear to be entering into the consideration.

Roselius made no reply and Mitch felt constrained to continue.

"My training hasn't been like yours," he said, feeling himself growing incoherent in face of this singular obtruseness. "I wasn't educated for a profession, and I'm no more business man or a chemist than I'm a poet or a painter. That's the fault of my education, no doubt, but here I am. I can't go back and start again."

"When I was your age I worked a year as assistant in a night school for twelve hundred dollars," said Roselius.

A hundred a month! Mitch almost laughed aloud at its suggestion of hopeless futility. It wouldn't keep him in luncheons and cigarettes!

dreams. Reunions with relatives whom you have not seen in many years—even a relative as close as a mother—are not all they are said to be. Dorothy felt no fundamental, mysterious connection between her mother and herself, nothing in common save topics that could not be discussed. She supposed, however, that all this would come later.

"Do you think we can be going to the apartment now?" she asked. She tried to smile. "I'm really awfully tired."

"Yes," said Madame Marco, unenthusiastically.

him something, I get sidetracked."

He seemed very miserable.

"I suppose it's just because I'm in an upper," he continued. "People in uppers get a pretty raw deal these days. And do you know whose fault it is?" he asked.

"No," I replied. "Whose fault is it?"

"Wall street," he said. "If I had my way, the whole place would be blown right up."

At that moment the porter reappeared, followed by a rather small gentleman with large horn-rimmed glasses and a pleasant smile.

"This gentleman says he's a Mohammedan," announced the porter.

The gentleman nodded.

"What can I do for you?" he asked. "Is it a burial, or something?" and he began to open his suitcase.

"No," I replied. "The porter and I just wanted to ask you a question."

"O," said the Mohammedan, a little disappointedly, and he closed his bag and turned toward the porter inquiringly.

"I'll be right back," I replied, and tiptoed out.

As I passed down the aisle of the car the lady in lower five was turning her head in the direction from which I had come and her thin hand was reaching for the bell button.

Write today for full particulars, also ask them to explain how you can get the agency, and, without experience or money, make $250.00 to $500.00 per month.—(adv.)

Luigi disappeared to keep another engagement, and Dorothy and her mother drove through the dripping streets alone. Brr, the fog! Their journey took them across the Seine and into a tangle of old and gray houses. "We are going south in a fortnight or so," said Madame Marco. "We despise Paris and the north. We are going back to Greece . . . we will take you with us." Dorothy smiled automatically.

They turned a corner and came to a pallid scarred facade to one side of which opened an arched passageway. It was quite dusk when they descended. Dorothy had noticed the street name.

Madame Marco slipped the key in the lock and touched a button beside the door. The light showed a bare studio from which, on either side, staircases ascended to bedrooms on the higher level. The dusty litter of the original occupant had not been moved.

"Your luggage hasn't come yet," announced Madame Marco.

Dorothy sighed, "O, Lord!"

"We won't wait for Luigi," she said. "Once he goes out I never know when he is coming in. We'll go around the corner to a little place and have dinner."

It was no use, you couldn't get close to this haggard, lined woman. Dorothy tried without success. Madame Marco seemed always, with a slow impatience, to be thinking of something else. Only once was there an approach to intimacy and that was when she asked her daughter if she was engaged.

Dorothy hesitated and said, "Yes, I suppose so."

"Tell me about him," demanded Madame Marco.

Dorothy found herself unable to do so—she drew an entirely artificial composite portrait of William Hewlitt and William Fonda del Comercio. "I'm having a rotten time," she said to herself. "I wish I had never come. That dreadful man spoiled my trip over—and now this."

"You are fortunate," sighed her mother. "You are rich and happy and young." She brought her thin brown hand down on the table. "Tomorrow—not now—I will tell you the hell I have been through."

And tomorrow she did tell, and the day after also. The slow recital, the repetitions, fell on Dorothy's brain like drops of lead. And "tomorrow" and all the day after it rained. Dorothy, thinking perhaps that at any moment she might break out into wild laughter or abuse, looked across the sodden courtyard to the blank windows of the house opposite.

"There is no one there," said her mother. "It is for rent."

An old, half-blind woman came in to make up the studio apartment and suddenly aware of Dorothy's presence, crossed herself.

"Now, why that?" Dorothy wondered. She was growing unbearably restless and suggested that she should go to her banker's for her mail. She thought, too, that she would buy her mother a present.

"Wait until it clears up," said Madame Marco. "The day is too dreadful."

"That doesn't make any difference."

There was a new sharp note in Madame Marco's voice.

"You are bored with me already"

"Come on out," she said to her mother. "I want to see the streets and the shops. I haven't been here since I was sixteen."

Madame Marco laid down her book, stared at her daughter thoughtfully, and then got up and called, "Luigi!"

A muffled voice answered from one of the bedrooms above.

Madame Marco spoke rapidly in Italian and came back to the table, beside which Dorothy was standing. In another moment Marco, in a gorgeous but unclean dressing gown of flowered satin, creaked down the stairs and paused at their bottom.

"Vell?" he asked. "Vat's the matter?"

"Dorothy is going out."

"Vy not?" His thick lips drew back into a snarl.

"Because . . . well, we'd better tell her what we want, hadn't we? I've been talking to her for two days and she doesn't seem to understand. You were right when you said she wouldn't understand. She might as well know now as later. Besides, it's safer."

Marco advanced toward the table and, lighting a cigarette, raised his head and looked Dorothy slowly up and down. Then he sank into a chair.

"You are not going out," he said.

"Why not?"

"Because you are not. Zit down."

"Have you gone crazy?" she asked in a small voice.

Marco laughed. "You do not understand," he said. "You are a very dull leetle girl. That door is locked. You had better zit down . . . you vill get tired standing. You do not leave thees place until you have signed a leetle paper. That money of yours, that is your mother's. You must give it back to her. No . . ." He raised a protesting hand. ". . .ve know vat you are going to say. It does not interest us. Ve are not fools. You vill not see the American consul or the American ambassador, because you vill never get to them. You vill not see any one. Unfortunately, you speak no French save that of the railway and restaurant. There is no one comes to thees place save the old voman and the concierge, and they have both been told that you, alas, are our half-witted child." He chuckled. "And I am afraid that any attempt to explain on your part would only lend conviction. You see, it is very easy, all thees. For the same reason ven ve go south in a veek or so, you vill not get avay. Imagine explaining your case, my dear, to a stranger? I, the hurt, indignant papa, your mother, the veeping mama? Besides, ve vill take very good care you do not talk to strangers. Meanwhile—"

Dorothy laughed for the first time.

"Thanks for the clear explanation. I shall be out of here in a few hours."

Marco sighed and arising from his chair, went back to the stairs. "Obstinate," he remarked, as if talking to himself. He faced about, his hand on the rail. "Your mother vill now change your bedroom to another that has bars, but even if you do get out of this house, it vill do you no good. The concierge knows quite vell you are mad and vill only bring you back again.

Dorothy waited until he had ascended the stairs and closed his door behind him, before she looked at her mother.

"I congratulate you," she said, and sitting down in a chair, picked up a book.

Shocking Revelations

There was the rather fast young Lord de Clifford, who at nineteen took unto himself a bride from a club run by the dashing Mrs. Kate Merrick, a well-known police character.

Doll Merrick, indeed, is said to be Kate's daughter. She was an entertainer and hostess in her mother's place when the thrill-seeking young peer first saw her.

It is toward the grimmer tragedies of London-after-dark, though, that serious commentators are directing their attention as a result of the raid on the Club Frivolity such tragedies as Peggy Scott's. When Rudolph Valentino visited London she was a frequenter of the better class of clubs, such as that made popular by Spinelly, the danseuse. When Valentino died, she killed herself

Revelations following the Frivolity club raid are too terrible to be dismissed as quickly as have certain other night club escapades.

Madame Marco took the book out of her hand.

Dorothy grinned. "I won't fight physically," she announced, "although I am fairly strong, but I wouldn't be able to do much against two of you."

She sat where she was until she thought a dignified interval had passed and then she allowed her mother to escort her to her new room. She closed the door behind her and put a pillow over her head, for she knew her mother was waiting just outside. She wept as she had not wept for years. She had been wanting to weep ever since she had come to Paris.

She was sitting by her barred window—it was a week and a day after her arrival—nursing her indignation. Marco being out and her mother downstairs in the studio, when she saw two figures emerging from the archway, the figure of the agent to whom she had once tried to talk and a long thin figure in a checked ulster much too big for it. Something in the appearance of the checked ulster caused Dorothy to gasp, but she could not see its owner's face because of the spread of an immense umbrella. She opened the window and leaned out into the rain. A plaintive voice was talking voluble and very bad French.

For a moment Dorothy hesitated. That terrible man, and what would he think after all she had told him about her mother? Then she called at the top of her voice, "Henry! Henry Blodgett! Come in. This is Dorothy Quinn."

Her mother's feet sounded on the stairs, the door was flung open and her mother's hand came over her mouth. But Dorothy was stronger than her mother and pushed her aside. She looked out of the window again. The two figures had disappeared into the house opposite. Yet even if Henry Blodgett had not heard her, even if he had gone past, it seemed to Dorothy her one hope was to lie about him.

"That's Henry Blodgett," she said with dry lips, "my fiance. He came over on the boat with me, but had to go to Germany for a week on business . . ." She had meant to add that undoubtedly, being her fiance, and not finding her at ten Rue des Fleurs, he would leave no stone unturned in his search, but her mother interrupted her. Madame Marco did not seem to be interested. She was staring over Dorothy's head at the ceiling. Being a weak woman, she was on the point of making another generous northern gesture inimical to Latin plans.

"I'm tired of this," she said slowly. "After all, you're my daughter—although there's no feeling between us. Marco's away. Pack your things and get out of here."

"I will," agreed Dorothy breathlessly. She began to fling her clothes into her bags, but there came a great knocking on the door of the studio. Dorothy's heart stood still—was this Marco returning?

"You go down and open it," suggested her mother. "I don't feel much like it."

Dorothy, her mother following her, walked slowly down the steps to the studio and opened the door into the garden. On the threshold stood the agent and the tall man in the checked ulster. And Dorothy, partly because she felt that she still had to play some sort of part in front of her mother, but largely because she was unaffectedly relieved, flung herself into the folds of the ulster. She felt Mr. Blodgett's arms tighten and relax as if in paralyzing surprise. "O, Henry," she said, "I'm so glad to see you. Take me out to lunch right away. Wait until I get my coat and hat."

She dashed up the stairs and returned in a moment, pushing the bewildered Mr. Blodgett out of the door and toward the archway. Then she stopped. "Wait a minute," she said. "I've forgotten something." She went back to the studio. Her mother, smoking a cigarette, was sitting by the table reading one of her novels.

Dorothy paused in the doorway.

"Marco will beat you, won't he?" she asked.

"I suppose so," said Madame Marco, without looking up. She turned a page. "That's the way I did when father tried to talk to me," thought Dorothy. "Well, she needn't worry—I won't try to kiss her." Out loud she said, "I will send for my trunks after a while, and I'm going to give you that three thousand, you know—for your life. I always meant to, but I didn't like your methods. No, don't thank me. It is I who owe you a lot—you've cleared my mind of I don't know how many delusions. Good-by."

She turned about and crossed the muddy little garden and found Mr. Blodgett beyond the archway, one foot resting tenderly on the step of a waiting taxicab.

"Say," he asked, "hadn't we better ask your mother, too?"

"O, no," gasped Dorothy. "She never goes out—she's an invalid. Let's go to the nearest restaurant."

They found a small hotel on the banks of the Seine. Before the window where they sat the glistening traffic slid past. Dorothy ate hugely.

"Paris is doing you good, ain't it?" said Mr. Blodgett. With unexpected tact he had not asked a single question.

Dorothy finished her coffee. "Lots," she answered, absent-mindedly. She had been thinking. Never in all her life had she felt so much alone, such a child in a fierce world, as she did at present—so much alone, save for the presence of Mr. Blodgett. He was comforting. What a nice face he had really! She liked older men.

Now if you married some one like William Hewlitt, instead of being protected, in about five years—when William Hewlitt really grew up—you would have to spend your time protecting him from other women. That was always the trouble with the overly good, conscientious young man.

And William Fonda del Comercio? Ugh! Dorothy's nose wrinkled. His eyes were the eyes of a young Marco. But she would have to cable some one. She couldn't be alone any more she just couldn't! Now that she was free, in a way not possible to her anger while she had been imprisoned, she realized in what a singularly unpleasant and yet not abnormal position she had been. Nowadays more and more incidents, that to an earlier generation would have seemed impossible, were happening. That was one of the costs of liberty. William Hewlitt she supposed—that was where her cable would go, but O how terrible!

She wished Mr. Blodgett were younger, that he wasn't so queer looking, that he spoke more grammatically. In her present state of mind it seemed to her that she might easily fall in love with Mr. Blodgett—for his protectiveness, if nothing else. What must he think of her, anyway, greeting him that way?

Apparently he was thinking nothing at all, for he pushed back his cup, lit a cigar and called to a waiter for the bill. "And what do you want to do now?" he asked in the large manner of the somewhat nervous entertainer.

"I must send a cable," said Dorothy. She must explain to Mr. Blodgett her embrace at the door of the studio; it might have aroused false hopes.

She grew red and stammered.

"You must have thought me very queer," she began. "I . . . back there when I . . ." She paused, discovering from the look on Mr. Blodgett's face that she had been guilty of bad taste and that, in this instance, it was he who was the more delicate.

His eyes avoided hers. "You needn't have worried about that, you know. I'm a fool, but not quite as big a one as that. You were frightened."

"O, I'm sorry," Dorothy's eyes filled with tears and she leaned across the table. "I wish I could do something for you. You can come to see me all you want."

Mr. Blodgett laughed.

"You've done a lot already," he said. "You're the first woman in all my life who ever kissed me like she was really glad to see me. Want me to send that cable for you? I can send it from the office outside."

Dorothy hesitated, and then, almost like a revelation, although, as always, the process leading up to the revelation had been slow, she understood whom she wanted to see. Something of the psychologic truth that if you want to be free, frequently the best way to start is by going back to where you began, occurred to her; something of the ancient wisdom that you can never be free by freeing yourself from the people close to you. For the first time in her life she fell in love with somebody but herself. . . . Poor tired head, poor inarticulate lips!

She looked up.

"Yes," she said. "I'll write it out—it's to my father."

The House in the Fog

An Adventure of the Good Losers' Committee

By JANE TRUMBULL

INSTALLMENT I.

The four girls had met in answer to a telephone call from Martie Sherwood, thought it is probable they would have met without it, for the Sherwood home was the gathering place for the young folks of Harristown. The fact that it was centrally located may have been partly responsible for this, but Martie's friends knew they would have chosen to be at her home no matter if it had been on the very outskirts of the town.

She was the kind of girl who naturally fits into the midst of things. During her first year at high school she had been voted the most popular girl, though, as she laughingly told them, she could not imagine why. But those who heard her remark and saw her receive the compliment knew that looks had a lot to do with it. Her bright, good natured smile meant far more to them than manay another's doll-like beauty.

As soon as the girls, in response to Martie's summons, had gathered about the open grate fire, Martie read them a letter of invitation from the Centerville High school.

"The pupils and teachers invite you and your committee to be honor guests at our grand party to celebrate the winning of the Caldwell gift. R. S. V. P."

"Well, of all things!" Leila began. "It surely should not take long to R. S. V. P. that! Tell them that in the first place you have a far more interesting invitation, and in the second place you have no committee that would care to go over and have them gloat over us!"

"That's exactly why I feel we should go," replied Martie. "We don't want them to think we are not good losers, you know. I expect we should have had a celebration if we had won from them."

"Of course, Martie is right," Anne Turner agreed. "We shall have to select a Good Losers committee. Sorry I can't go, but you know it's the night of Marjorie's party." She laughed at this, and a'l joined her, for they were all thinking of the same thing.

It had all begun with the opening of school last September. The Caldwell gift had been the most discussed matter among the students for the past five months. H. J. Caldwell, a well-known capitalist who lived midway between the two thriving little towns, Centerville and Harristown had promised a well-equipped gymnasium to the high school in the county which proved itself the most deserving within the first half term.

At first there had been nine schools striving for honors, but toward the last it had come down to just the two largest towns, Centerville and Harristown were pitted against each other for glory.

Centerville had won the spelling match, Harristown had the football championship, Centerville the skating races, Harristown the final debate. Every sport and competition had been given a trial. There had even been a beauty contest among the girls and a boxing match for the boys. It had been a close race, but Centerville was finally victorious.

Martie Sherwood and her brother, Jerry, had gone wholeheartedly into every single thing. Harristown needed a new gym, and probably they felt the loss more than any of the others.

It was Jerry's arrival in their midst that decided their problem. He came into the hall shaking moisture from his heavy sweater and was soon holding his cold hands over the red coals. Martie had shown him her letter earlier in the day.

"How about it, girls? Do we give up our nice home party invitation and go over to Centerville to help Mr. Caldwell and the professors pat themselves on the back? I'll say we don't! Though of course I'm more than willing to drive the committee over if they would enjoy a nice, cold ride."

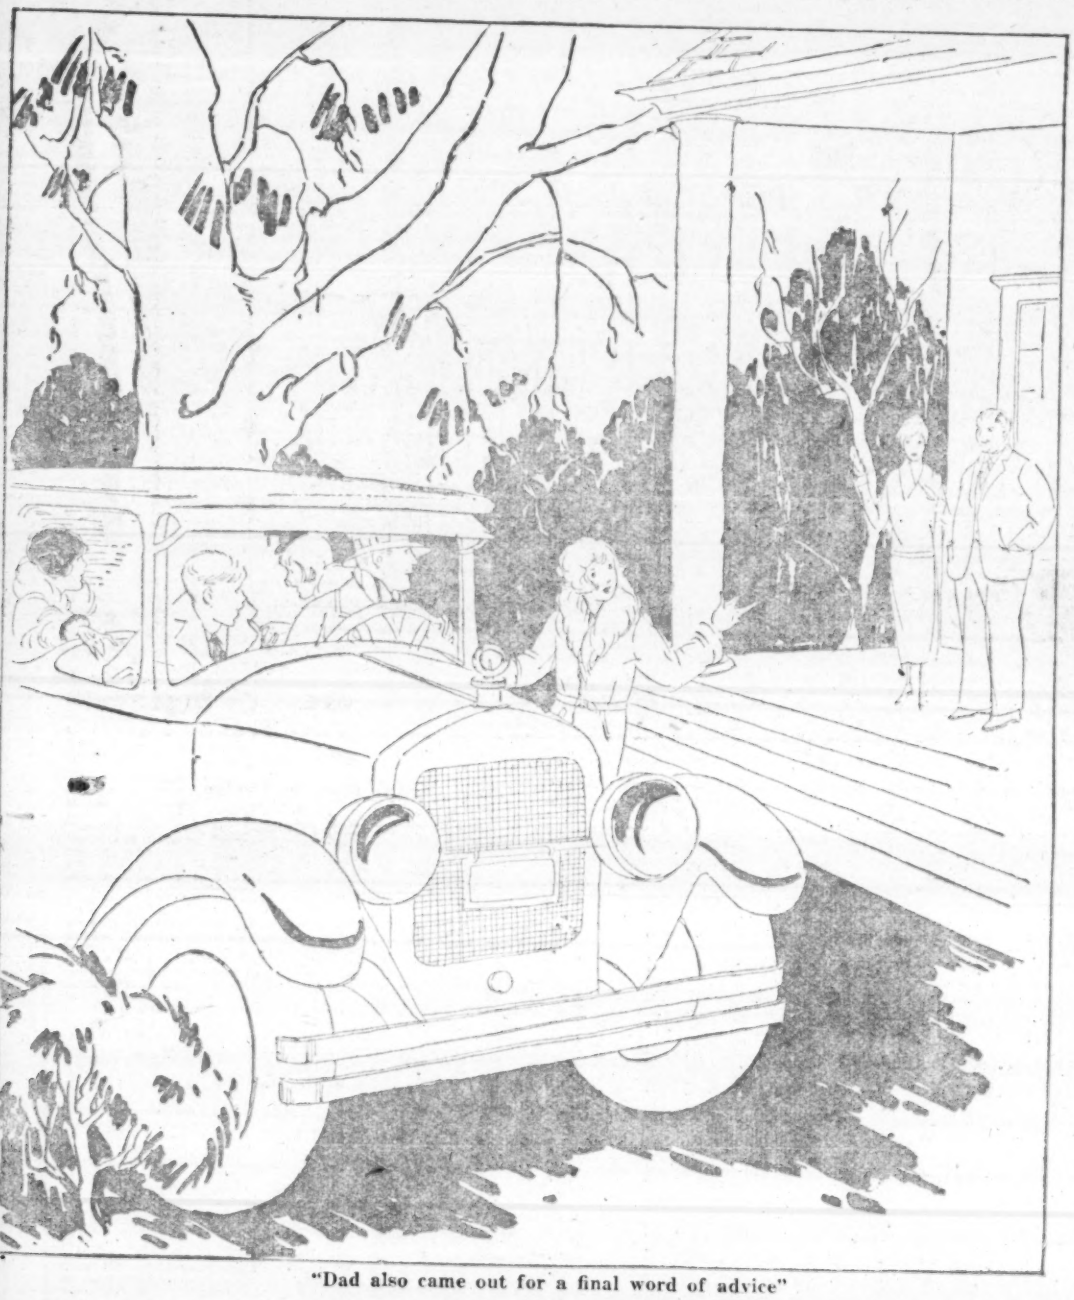

would not be called upon to fulfill his promise that he made Marjorie

He was so perfectly sure that he repeat her statement when she answered.

"That's the spirit, Jerry! I've decided to put off my party for a week so that I can help Martie out. You see, she will have to go, being sophomore president. Let's call this crowd the committee and let's go over and show them what Harristown High stands for."

"Are you calling my bluff, Marjorie Lee?" Perry asked.

"I mean it, Jerry. I don't want a party without Martie and don't you see she can't turn this down? All the schools will have someone there to represent them."

"Dad also came out for a final word of advice"

They had all begun to see that Marjorie was right and what had begun in jest was finished in earnest. And so it was that a week later Martie and her friends were hurriedly making final preparations for a 70-mils drive to Centerville.

It was a dull day and rain threatened, but there was nothing dull about the Good Losers committee. Martie's chum, Anne, was in her folliest mood and kept them all laughing. She looked like a pretty boy dressed in her brown knicker suit and with her close cropped hair smoothly brushed.

"Come on, everybody, and let's do our duty! I'm going to sit on the platform as a living example of why Harristown High lost the spelling match, and Jerry shows why we lost the beauty contest without even going into the assembly hall," Anne said laughingly as she jumped into the seat at his side.

Mother Sherwood appeared at the door to give final instructions in her usual thoughtful way.

"Sure you have everything you need, girls? Take plenty of rugs, it's quite cold. Don't drive too fast, Jerry, and be careful about the grade crossings."

Dad also came out for a final word of advice about gas and oil. Then, as they gave the school yell, the car sped away.

No one would have guessed that the merry occupants of that automobile were going on that trip merely from a sense of duty. But they would have looked more serious if they had had even the remotest idea of what the afternoon held in store for them. Martie says that the beginning was that 'Detour' sign. They had hardly passed it and turned on to the unfamiliar winding road when the rain began to fall.

At first it was only a light, sleety mist, but it soon grew more dense and darkness seemed to be coming on unusually early. Martie and Jerry compared their watches to be sure that it was only 4 o'clock. Darkness was not due for fully two hours, but lights were beginning to gleam through the windows of the houses they passed.

"It's fog, Jerry. Look how the lights in that gas station blur," said Martie. She thought then of the fact that it was about time to fill the gas tank, as dad had suggested, but the rain was growing heavier and she decided to say nothing until later.

Several more turns in the road brought them to a lonely section of country. Jerry felt sure they had lost their way and decided to stop at the next house. He had to drive slowly for the rain made the windshield almost opaque. Anne peered ahead.

"The ship is saved, me lads. I see a light in the distance," she announced.

"Then let's stop, Jerry, and ask someone to tell us if we are on the right road," Martie suggested. A moment later Jerry brought the car to a halt outside what seemed at first to be a small house with one brightly lighted room. The first that glowed seemed to invite them and they jumped from the car and ran quickly up the wide cement walk.

"Somebody else must be here, too," remarked Martie, calling their attention to an old, battered roadster that stood beside the house.

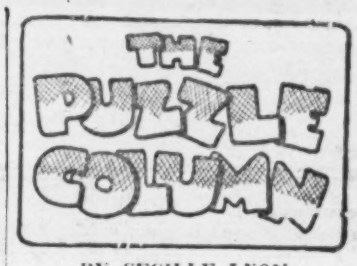

They knocked at the door several times but there was no answer. Then as they listened closely there came a call from the back of the house.

"Come in. Come right in," a voice called. Martie suddenly found that the door was slightly open.

She led the way into an empty hall, followed by the others. The fire crackling in the great rock fireplace was soon surrounded and ten cold hands were held out to its delightful warmth.

"A strange hostess we have," Marjorie whispered as the inviting call came again. As though the hostess had heard, suddenly the lights went out, leaving the large rooms dim.

Famous Monuments — JERUSALEM — By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

In the foreground a few green desert plants and then only sand and rock—a vast expanse of dark yellow soil, but rising high above this the red walls of the holy city.

In the center of the yellowish walls of the temple and the white domes of the low houses and a green gate that leads to the heart of the city.

Above this the gray clouds that menace the safety of the city. And that is all.

This picture is not correct in the sense of a photographic reproduction. I have tried to show you Jerusalem as an idea rather than as a concrete fact. For often the "inner spirit" of a picture tells more than the cut and dried outlines of houses and temples.

It does not really matter very much what a city like Jerusalem looked like as long as you can grasp the meaning of such a holy spot.

I have shown it therefore as inevitable trading post, a stronghold on top of a hill which dominates the road from east to west and can levy tribute from all those who must pass through its gates.

And I have shown it low and brooding and rather desolate and not given over to the gaieties of life, but contemplating the fleeting vanities of all earthly existence.

And if in coloring the picture you can give expression to that sentiment, you will have done no mean job.

THE town of Jerusalem is more than a mere city. It is a monument. I might go further to say that for the people of the west it is the greatest of all monuments.

It was never a very large city. Not even during the days when it figured as the capital of the Jewish people. But it was an important stronghold as soon as Egypt and Babylonia had appeared upon the map. For then the main trade route from the south to the east, from Thebes to Noneveh, began to run through the hills of Palestine. And those who had command of the hill which in turn commanded that great artery of commerce were certain of an uninterrupted flow of revenue.

Hence from the beginning of time there was great rivalry for the possession of this favorite bit of rocky territory.

The Egyptians took possession of it upon several occasions and drove out the original settlers. The Babylonians did likewise. And finally a small Semitic tribe of wandering shepherds known as the Jews, having prospected all over western Asia and eastern Africa fought its way into the land adjoining the city and made it the capital of a flourishing Jewish state and the center of their religious life.

Until their Babylonian neighbors, and next the Greeks, and still later the Romans, captured the city and expelled the greater part of the inhabitants.

As for the Romans, exasperated by the opposition of the people of Jerusalem they went so far as to destroy the entire town. But it was rebuilt and soon afterwards found itself more famous than ever before as the Holy Site of a new religion which was gaining a great following among the savages of the west and which came to be known as the Christian religion.

It was no more than natural that the Christians should try to possess themselves of a town that was so intimately associated with the life and suffering of the founder of their religion. Unfortunately the followers of Mohammed also claimed the city as one of their holy places, for it had been the home of one of their own ancestors, Hagar, the servant of Abraham, and therefore it should belong to them.

Hence centuries of terrible warfare. Until the Turks descended upon the western world and made an end to all further quarelling by turning Palestine into a Turkish province of which Jerusalem was to be the military and civil capital.

But the late war brought Jerusalem once more to the foreground and today it is the center of another Jewish land which is fast gaining complete economic and political independence.

The people of the Middle Ages, when they drew a map of the world, made Jerusalem the center of their universe.

Of course from a geographical point of view, they were not quite correct.

But from historical point of view they were mighty near the truth.

NOISE.

A stationary engineer, in charge of his great engines, is constantly surrounded by noise that to other persons might be almost deafening. Yet he knows what every bit of that noise is, and if a foreign noise—some little scraping or grinding—should occur, he would hear it, and know that something was wrong with his engines.

The customary sound of his engines is necessary noise. The foreign scraping or grinding is unnecessary noise.

Young people, like engines, are inclined to be noisy. They shout and they stamp their feet, they pound and they batter.

When you give a good, lusty cheer for your team, I would call that necessary noise. When you are trying to fix something with a hammer, that, too, is necessary noise.

Go ahead and make all the necessary noises you need. But do be grown-up enough not to make unnecessary noises. They show bad breeding and a surprising lack of consideration for others.

The Word 'Ranch' Came From Spain

We all like to read stories of western life, and cowboys, and big cattle ranches; but how many of us can tell just how the word "ranching" originated?

The word is taken from a term "rancho," (Spanish-American in derivation), which originally meant a place where herdsmen eat and sleep. Later it was gradually extended to mean a grazing farm.

In Texas, Colorado and other western states there are large cattle ranches; though the growth of population and the building of cities has encroached considerably on large individual land holdings.

Incidentally, it was from the cowboys that Theodore Roosevelt recruited his Rough Riders—men who made history by their exploits during the Spanish-American war.

My Pet

A Tame Wild Canary.

Della and Ruth Baxter, of Springfield, Utah, say that a wild canary makes a lovely pet. One day while playing in the yard around their home, they heard a noise and after an investigation found it to be a baby canary which had fallen out of its nest. They tried to find the nest, but were unsuccessful. Their mother gave them a small shoe box and some cotton, out of which they made a home for the little bird. The box was set at the foot of the tree and each day the old mother bird came to feed the little baby canary. Of course, Della and Ruth expected their pet to fly away sometime, but it stayed with them all summer. They can pick up the bird and hold him and he will not try to fly away from them. All their playmates marvel at their being able to have a wild canary for a pet.

A Tricky Trio.

Hilaire Smith, of San Diego, Cal., has three pets—a fox terrier dog, a Persian cat named "Toppy" and a parrot called "Rex." He says that his pets get along wonderfully well together. The cat and dog play hide and seek together and the parrot sits in his cage and screams at theim, which adds to the fun. Rer, the parrot, will speak only to people he likes, and often shouts things which are not nice at the people who visit Hilaire. Trixie, the dog, can shake hands, "speak" for his dinner, and sit up. Hilaire is to be complimented on his successful management of his three pets.

One More Flag For Your Game

Flag Number 14

WHAT COUNTRY:

1. Declared independence November 3, 1903?
2. Is found in an isthmus of the same name?
3. Has a canal running the full width of the country?
4. Declares Spanish its official language and makes its use compulsory?
5. Has a capital of the same name?

Directions:

Another beautiful flag may be added to the flag guessing game by carefully cutting out and pasting the stars on the flag in the proper manner. But first, of course, determine that all parts are colored the correct colors.

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

You can use your wagon the year around by equipping it with barrel stave runners as shown. This sled will glide just as smoothly and easily as any other, and moreover, it will give a rocking motion that others will not.

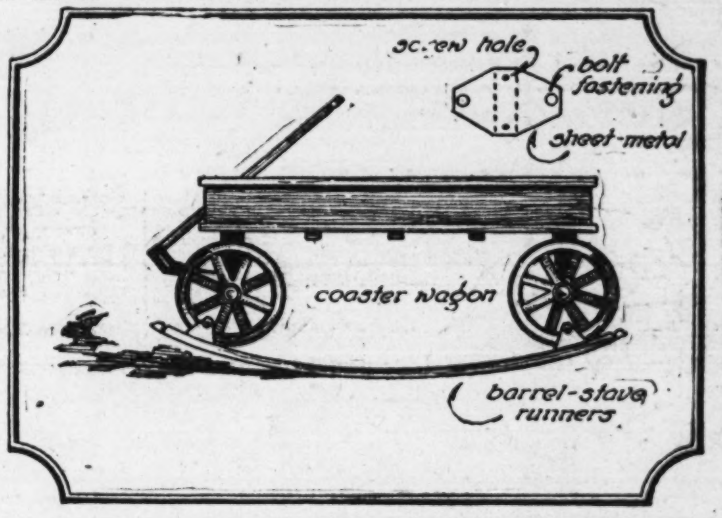

All you will need are the following materials: Two barrel staves of the same length and width, four sheet metal pieces, and four small bolts about two inches long.

Cut the metal pieces to the shape shown, so that they will be four inches long and about three inches wide. Drill holes as shown and punch smaller holes. Fasten one of these to one end of each stave, about four inches from the end, by turning wood screws through the small holes. The metal pieces, of course, are bent up on the dotted lines.

Now run the bolts through the wheels in front and draw the nuts tight. This will prevent the wheel from slipping or turning. Then accurately locate the place for the rear metal locks, and attach them in the same way.

The illustration shows the wagon complete with the runners. You cannot steer this sled when coasting, except with your toe, but otherwise it will work nicely.

When spring comes again you can remove the runners until next winter.

THE FUN BOX

He Knew What He Meant.

"Bill, said a sailor, looking up from his writing, "do you spell 'sense' with a 'c' or an 's'?"

"That depends," replied his educated friend. "Do you refer to money or brains?"

"Aw, I don't mean either of them two," was the reply. "What I want to say is, 'I ain't seen his sense.'"

And Then Some.

Friend: "Edmond, how are you getting along at school?"

Edmond: "Great! I am halfback on the football team, and all the way back in my studies."

Inquisitive.

"Alas, my child, it is cold without."

"Without what, mother?"

"Without a petticoat, my child, without a petticoat."

Father's Advice.

"So you can write with either hand, Andy?" said the boss to the order clerk.

"Yes," replied Andy. "When I was a boy my father always said to me: 'Andy, learn to cut your fingernails with your left hand, for some day you might lose your right.'"

HOW TRUE.

There are no sleeping cars on the road to success.

MORE CORD NEEDED.

Soph.—"What's the piece of cord tied around your finger for?"

Frosh.—"Professor Armstrong put it there to remind me to study my English for tomorrow."

"And did you study it?"

"No; he forgot to assign a lesson."

NOW, WOULDN'T YOU?

"Jimmy, you've been fighting again!"

"Well, mother, supposin' Mrs. Jones was to put a squashy tomato down your neck, wouldn't you land her one?"

Science says white walls are conducive of morality. Then a whitewashed jail cell ought to be about the most moral place there is.
